JAMES N. TODD, Editor.

DENTON, MARYLAND.

THURSDAY MORNING, NOV. 19, 1885

LOUIS DAVID REIL has been executed.

THAT part of Tennyson's new poem which speaks of something as being "swallowd in vastness, lost in silence, drowned in the depths of a meaningness past," is now taken to be a whack at the mugwumps.—Courier-Journal.

CONGRESS will assemble in two weeks from next Monday; and owing to the fact that it will be the first message in twenty-six years that has been sent in by a Democratic President, it will be looked forward to with unusual curiosity.

THE Court of Appeals of Connecticut has decided that railroad passes (except in cases of chairity) are given to the recipients in expectation of reciprocal favor, or in return for favors already extended, and they are consequently not a gratuity.

GALVESTON, Texas, was visited on Friday morning by a terrible conflagration, equaling almost, the great Chicago fire. Over four hundred houses were destroyed, and thousands of people made homeless. The loss is estimated at about $2,000,000.

THE county papers are howling themselves hoarse advocating Dr. Goldsborough for President of the Maryland Senate. Why, pshaw! Take the whole hog or none. What's the matter with John Y. Graham for speaker of the House of Delegates, eh?

THE hairpin has always heretofore been quite an indispensable article; it buttons shoes, gloves and garments and very often supplies the place of a toothpick. Last week a Philadelphia wife obtained a divorce from her husband, the main evidence being a strange harpin found in the husband's coat collar.

"WHAT will become of Caroline Kellyism and the anti-bribery cause?" says an exchange. Anti-bribery has bursted up and gone out of business. The Kellyism cause is cruising up salt river at present; when it gets back, we understand there will be an assignment made to the Democratic party as permanent trustee.

JAMES GREEN is re-elected to the Maryland House of Delegates honestly morally, and if he and his friends will stand up for him in a legal contest, for the rights guarenteed to him, he will again honorably and intelligently represent the people of Caroline. In the Third district alone, there were three Democratic "pudding" tickets in the box which were counted; also several tickets with "J. Y. Graham" were polled and illegally counted; and other things present themselves as a good foundation. "Murder will out."

Bids for Legislative Printing.

Bids were opened by the Clerk of the Court of Appeals on Friday of last week for the printing of the General Assembly of Maryland for 1886. There were 13 bidders, the highest being King Bros. at $37,500; the lowest, J. G. King at $7,500. Mr. Jones, the Clerk, said that the contract would be awarded to Mr. King if a sufficient bond would be filed. Mr. Jas. Young, who was the successful bidder at the last session at $12,400, stated that his bid at $18,700 allowed him very little margin to do the work.

THE Free Press says the Union insinuated that its papers were some time ago unnecessarily detained at Ridgely postoffice. The Free Press has been misinformed, or it stated that which it knew to be false. A letter from Greensborough appeared in our columns some time ago, asking for information on the subject, the contents of which we were in no wise connected with personally. While it is true that our papers should have reached Greensborough on Friday morning, we in no manner believe that any postmaster would intentionally do us injustice.

OUR sweet-scented, mushroomy neighbor of the Journal wants some one to inform us that the election is over. Well, we'll admit it, just to gratify him. Now will he please tell us whether or not he's over too? He says "the manner adopted by the Union in preferring charges of fraud lacks a straightforwardness that is painfully suggestive." Well, now, we might admit that too, if we were painfully afflicted with either his Democratic delusion or with his double-barrel imagination; otherwise, we cannot. Wonder what he lacks that is suggestive? There are in journalism as in medicine, quacks, and they are divided into various classes; one species are those who have volubility without depth, and are producers of original nonsense. Say, isn't it suggestive to you that nonsense pays a higher dividend than sense? The charges which have been preferred (and which lack a straightforwardness that is painful and suggestive?) will, in due course of time, be brought more fully to public view, and we have no doubt that our neighbor will find them quite painfully suggestive indeed. The Journal closes up the article by getting into a web of "culchawed" verbiage, and tries to criticise a little bit. We do not think any reply would be necessary at all, but simply give the following from MARK TWAIN which may prove suggestive:

"For many years my pet aversion had been the cuckoo clock; now here I was, at last, right in the creature's home; so wherever I went, that distressing 'hoo hoo! hoo-hoo! hoo-hoo!' was always in my ears. For a nervous man this was a fine state of things. Some sounds are hatefuller than others, but no sound is quite so inane, and silly, and aggravating as the 'hoo-hoo' of a cukoo clock, I think. I bought one, and am carrying it home to a certain person's; for I have always said that if the opportunity ever happened, I would do that man an ill-turn. What I meant was that I would break one of his legs, or something of that sort; but in Lucerne I instantly saw that I could impair his mind. That would be more lasting, and more satisfactory every way. So I bought the cuckoo clock; and if ever I get home with it, he is 'my meat,' as they say in the mines. I thought of another candidate—a book reviewer, whom I could name if I wanted to—but after thinking it over, I didn't buy him a clock. I couldn't injure his mind."

Fraud! Fraud!! Fraud!!!

The Journal cannot see. How plain and convenient must it be to reach their comprehensions. Editors may lie, but circumstances will not. Democrats deny that they used any "pudding" tickets and large, stupendous amounts of money; we did not expect them to own it, for it would not be Democratic for them to do so. Did they see it in 1877, when the plug-uglies from Baltimore were rushed in upon our borders to intimidate and shoot down, if necessary, our citizens, rather than they should be beaten? Did they see it at Harmony when the lights were extinguished whilst the judges were counting out the ballots, pistols fired, ballots scattered, and judges of election driven from their room? The scenes of 1877 brought a stigma and an everlasting mark of infamy upon Caroline Democracy. And that, coupled with the craft and fraud practiced by them in the late election, causes honest men to meditate with awe upon the liberties of our land and the freedom of our civil institutions; to contemplate upon the conditon of posterity and to resolve to maintain the rights bequeathed to us by our forefathers who, at the expense of peril and blood, transmitted them to us.

There is a lack of interest on the part of candidates and others among the leading, to make further investigation and properly adjust matters. Remember that "if we suffer tamely a lawless attack upon our liberty, we encourage it and involve others in our doom." If the frauds continue to be perpetrated after the fashion in Baltimore city, the consideration should deeply fall upon our minds that the curse not only falls on us, but will be a frown upon the brow of thousands yet unborn.

One thing is certain, that hereafter in Caroline, a better state of affairs must prevail on election days; gentlemen in broad-cloth, silk-hats and kid-gloves must not buy and sell suffrages. The scenes of '77 and '85 will culminate in the virtual overthrow of all fair elections; and men, who now only buy and sell suffrages, will think it only the incident of the day to stuff ballot-boxes and falsify election returns, as party success in their estimation will condone every crime.

When party papers are so strongly partizan, that they forfeit all right that a good citizen has to a fair election and a fair count, we will soon conclude that our earnist, Reflex, is not so wide of the mark as we had supposed him, in the crauky talk of fighting for no cash on election day. The late election is a farce abinitio; hundreds of men's names are on the registration list who are non-residents, dead, &c., but are voted every year; while other names should properly be on the list, Democratic influence will not allow it.

THE Free Press says, "the Denton Union has discovered that it requires ballot-box stuffing and irregularities to poll 3,129 votes when there are 3,492 registered voters."

If it would console our brother we could admit that to be true; and then, it would be a more accurate discovery than his readers ever discovered in the Free Press. Brother Christian is a Justice of the Peace, (and he's a "daddy" too) and perhaps he has by this time learned that there are always two sides to a question. The partial defeat of the Democratic ticket has given the Free Press the bilious, and it is not responsible. Evidently it knows nothing about the unlimited purity and virtue manifested by the Democrats in the late election. Why, Caroline Democracy would not soil its hands by casting a "pudding ticket (?) or voting a stranger on a dead man's name (?) or keeping on the registration list a Democrat who has been a non-resident for years (?). Why, sir, if Caroline Democracy continues to take such strides of purity and fairness, the great day will soon dawn when the party will know as much as the editor of the Free Press; and there will be no more use of Anti-bribery, St. Johnism, or of churches, for the party will have A Christian for a leader.

JOHNSON'S JOURNAL exhibits signs of well merited prosperity in increasing its size from 16 to 32 pages and a cover. This "Illustrated Magazine for the People," as its sub-title defines it, was established in 1874, but a change was recently made in its shape and contents, and its appeal to a wider public has been so succesful that the readers want more of it—hence the enlargement. The issue of November 14 contains, among other profusely illustrated and timely articles one on "Riel and His Rebellion"; another on "The Theatre of Conflict in Central Asia"; another on "Civilization and Savagery in Africa," being the experiences and exploits of a missionary in that dark continent; and a full page of sketches showing how cattle are brought from the West to supply Eastern and European markets. There are also illustrated book reviews, and a number of bright and readable articles on miscellaneous topics and questions of the hour. In this number too, begins a powerful serial story, written for the JOURNAL, and entitled "Love in Summer Seas," dealing with life in New York and the topics. The departments have been increased in number, and are all well filled. This popular literary Magazine, of which each page sparkles with interest, is published every other week by W. J. JOHNSTON, 9 Murry st., New York. The price is only 10 cents a copy, or $2 a year, and it may be ordered of any newsdealer.

THE NATION (New York) offers a trial subscription of two months to new readers for 25 cents—half-rate. The NATION is a weekly review of politics and of literature, from an independent standpoint, conducted with aid of the most competent writers obtainable. The list of contributors whose services are thus enlisted includes most of the leading names in literature, science, philosophy, and law in this country, and many abroad. The Chicago Dial recently remarked: "It is not too much to say of the NATION that no single agency has done so much in the past twenty years to advance and dignify the calling of journalism in America. In all departments it has been singularly able and impartial, and its success is a cause of gratification in which all American scholars generally will share." While not professing to be a newspaper, the NATION yet gives a carefully edited news summary, in best shape for permanent record.

Philip Mock, Cessna, Pa., says he has used Powells Prepared Chemicals and finds they do fully as well as more costly fertilizers. Mr. Mock is one those practical Pennsylvania farmers who would not recommend a fertilizer that he had not tested to his perfect satisfaction. Brown Chemical Co., manufactures, Baltimore, Md.

GEN. BOND, Superintendent of the Maryland House of Correction, has been requested to resign. Charges have been made against him by the directors.

R. S. Fountain's "ad" in another column. He is a man of push and energy, and knows all about his business. He offers special inducements in Tombstones, monuments &c; for first-class goods and moderate prices, he can beat any place on the shore.

Wanamaker's.

PHILADELPHIA, November 16, 1885

It w'n't down—the sharpest point of distinction between the modern spirit of trade and the ancient spirit of trade oughtn't to down! The question comes to every merchant Which shall he follow, honest trade or tricky trade?

It isn't a personal question. It isn't a question of morals. W'n't do to evade it. Evasion is answer. Putting it off is answer. The merchant is blind that imagines he shirks it. There is no more practical question under the test of trade-practice: Does it pay to be honest in trade?

Nobody wants to champion honesty. It smacks of Phariseeism. "Honesty is the best policy" has so far impressed itself on the public belief as to be a quotable maxim on Sunday; but it hasn't taken much root in the practical side of public belief as to govern the business tactics even of those who are quick to quote it.

Test this heretical statement. How does the maxim sound taken out of its words? Imagine a father telling his son just graduating out of Sunday school into the grocery business, for instance: "Now, my son, I am going to set you up in business as soon as you know enough about it and get a little experience. The first thing to do is to make up your mind to be honest through and through. The next is to learn the business. Put your honesty and knowledge into practice together. Never mind the grocer over the way. Never mind anything but good groceries and truth."

If fathers are accustomed to take their sons out of school into business with such foundation as this, they believe in the maxim. If they are not, they don't. The business-man is the frankest man in the world, if you skip what he says and take what he does.

No; the practical business-man believes in the maxim just about enough to quote it. He quotes it possibly out of the ineffectual glimpse he has of its truth, possibly out of the habit of paying a certain court to abstract goodness, possibly out of an amiable deference to Mrs. Gundy, possibly out of a disposition to seem to be honest when he hasn't the least intention of making any sacrifice in that direction.

No; there isn't much honesty in business. There is a sort of substitute for it that passes under the name—a fair substitute, better than none; so fair that you may think it hardly polite to penetrate the disguise.

Complain of a trick—machine-made shoes "hand-made" for instance. The dealer will say "they are just as good as hand-made and nobody knows the difference. Everybody calls them hand-made but Wanamaker—he makes capital out of not lying; but he lies as much as the rest of us."

Split-leather "calf" for another instance. The dealer will say "Everybody calls it calf why shouldn't I? Besides we don't always know which is which ourselves nowadays." Leather-hash heels and soles for another instance. The shoeman will say "Everybody knows we can't get good leather for nothing—ridiculous! Who expects it? Why the making ought to cost more than I get for this shoe" Cotton-and-linen "linen" for another instance. The merchant pleads guilty of nothing. "Everybody knows" says he "that linen costs money; but if I tell the people there's cotton in it they will only go to somebody else that'll lie with a straighter face." So of all-wool in clothing. So of everything else in trade.

These examples betray the accepted standard. Do as others do. That is the standard. Mercantile integrity teaches no higher than that. In social matters the corresponding standard is fear of Mrs. Grundy. A very different thing from righteousness.

But we said It isn't a personal question, a question of morals. What is it? Expediency. Honesty that comes of being paid for it isn't morals; and morals needn't be talked about.

Merchants don't believe it pays to be honest; and that is the why there is sand in sugar and something wrong about everything. That is the why of the eminent standing of Lupin in dress stuffs, Alfred Wright in perfumery, Winsor & Newton in artists materials, Rodgers and Wostenholm in cutlery, Lowell in carpets, Crane in writing-paper—we scarcely like to mention names, so many more have got to be left out—a hundred names or so in the whole commercial world. There are a few who do believe that it pays to be fair in manufacturing.

There is room for a name among merchants. Makers have to be watched. Good merchandise is rare; the bulk of it is faulty. But faulty merchandise is good enough if honestly sold. There is room for a name among merchants. We mean to furnish that name. If we ever get to be proud of what we have done, we hope it will not be of acreage, tonnage, power or wealth: but of selling linen for linen, wool for wool, silk for silk, leather for leather, fashion for fashion, last year's for last year's.

We have scarcely begun.
