As the Dingley law continues to get in its magnificent work we may draw some important information when we consider we have a population of 70,000,000, of which 20,000,000 are wage earners. If they should receive a compensation of $1 a day, the money thus earned would add to the daily circulation of our country $20,000,000. If by reason of prosperous times their wages should be increased to $2 a day, then we would have $40,000,000 in circulation daily, and a like ratio of increase in wages will increase the amount of money placed daily in circulation. The margin of each day's business is the possibility of a margin. Wendell Phillips once said: "It is the dollar left on Saturday evening, after all the bills are paid, that means education, independence, self-respect, manhood. It increases the value of every acre near by, fills the town with dwellings, opens public libraries and crowds them, dots the continent with cities and cobwebs the country with railways. The one remaining dollar insures progress and guarantees millions to its owners." We have gained in wages during the past year at least 12 per cent. in all the avenues of business. The average wage paid to all classes of labor is not far from $40 a month. If we have 20,000,000 of wage earners, then we have an annual wage of $800,000,000. The increase or gain for the past year being 12 per cent., amounts to nearly $100,000,000 the wage earners of the United States have had bestowed upon them by the wise legislation of the Republican party by making the Dingley law. This bill works two ways—it gives employment to millions and at remunerative prices, and and also supplies millions of dollars monthly to defray the expenses of the government. So this Dingley measure is more of a friend to the poor than the rich, as we have more people in limited circumstances than otherwise by far. The better this bill is understood the more it is appreciated.

Gov. elect Thomas, of Colorado, while on his way to New York and Washington, last week, was asked concerning a possible union of the Eastern gold-Democrats with Western silver men, was emphatic in denying that he had anything to do with such a scheme. Croaker and Tammany in the East, he said, were the cause of the recent defeat of the Democrats. "So far as the national democracy is concerned, its principles can only be subserved by a negotiation of the things for which Tammany stands, and we feel that the cause of democracy's decadence since '92 has been due to the confusion created by the attempted blending of the so-called Tammany democracy with the national democracy. The Chicago platform in its proper shape, represents what the West regards as orthodox democracy. The purpose of Western Democrats, without exception, is to renew the pledges of '96, and organize upon that basis, firmly convinced that they are bound ultimately to triumph."

If the Governor-elect of Colorado speaks the sentiment of the West, then Tammany is openly opposed to that section with no hope of getting together. This also means that Senator Gorman's presidential bubble will cease before it takes any shape along that line. It is hardly probable any way that democracy at large would take up a man for the presidency who has been so recently turned down by his own party in his own State. Now ripe with age after serving his party from boyhood, or more proper still, his party has served him during these years, to be set aside by his friends, is conclusive proof that national honors cannot come his way. The chasm between the East and the West is too broad to be spanned by Tammany with any pretended money reform scheme.

THE first annual meeting of the stockholders of the Union Publishing Company was held on Thursday. The old board of directors was re-elected for the ensuing year. During the past year this board has been untiring in its efforts to place the UNION among the first weeklies on the Shore. To what extent this work has been accomplished, we refer to the paper, which speaks for itself. The stockholders have expressed themselves before, as well as at this meeting, as much pleased with the first year's work under the new management. The financial growth has also been in line and keeping with other improvements on the UNION.

IT is an unwritten law that men elected to execute and enforce our laws should be those who have a high conception of right and wrong. Now and then some one gets into office, makes a fool of themself and instead of enforcing the law, violate it. A case of this kind has turned up in Illinois, where the grand jury while in session at Chicago last week, found several indictments against Gov. Tanner for violating the law during the Virden coal mine riots. After violating the law he makes a bad matter worse by defying the same. The Gov. says: "I will kick any sheriff out of my office who comes to arrest me on that indictment. I will not be arrested. No one has authority to do so, and no grand jury can constitute itself a judge of my acts as governor when I exercise the rights vested in me in the performance of my duty. I did all I could to protect the workingmen and miners of the State, and this is the result of it. It is all a Democratic political plot." Not only does the gand jury that indicted him believe him guilty of violating the law, but all who kept posted during the recent strike, must uphold the work of the grand jury. The fact that he is governor does not excuse him for violating the laws of his State, but makes it more serious because he holds the highest office in the State. He should have a fair and impartial trial. The office pays $6,000 a year, an amount sufficient to secure the best of officials.

THE "expert" examination (?) of the books of the Queen Anne's county commissioners is expected to be completed this week. The "expert" has only made a difference, says an exchange, of one cent so far. Talk about Sec'y Alger's white washing committee, it can't hold a light to the Queen Anne's affair. Some weeks ago several leading Democrats of the county investigated matters at the Commissioners' office and were outspoken, and even bitter, in denouncing the $25,000 shortage. The gentlemen who made the examination are considered leading attorneys and business men of Centreville and vicinity. These men were on the right trail and were making it hot for the accused and it began to look as though they were going to tree their game when suddenly the whole affair was hushed up. No man with even a little bit of common sense can be made believe that the men so outspoken against that shortage didn't know what they were talking about. Although the report has been long coming it is not altogether devoid of interest. There is no question with thinking people but that there was a shortage, now what the public want to know is who made it and how was the deficiency made up. These two points are what our readers are hoping to see brought out by the "expert" this week.

THE future rights of the colored man to exercise his right of franchise is still agitating the public mind. If a mistake was made by the nation in establishing sweeping negro suffrage in the South, the Boston Herald says it is now remedied for the time being by the action of the States. "We find in it an illustration of the operation of our peculiar form of government. After the 14th and 15th amendments to the constitution were adopted it seemed as if the right of the negro to vote was as firmly established as the right of the whites. It certainly is as clearly decreed in these additions to the bill of rights. Yet the States have found means to prevent it being exercised in more than a limited extent. They have availed themselves of the privileges which their State form of government afforded to attain this end, and in the case of Mississippi, which took the initial step in the movement, the U. S. Supreme Court has decided that they have done their work effectively. Providing the constitution of other Southern States, therefore, are modelled carefully upon the constitution of Mississippi, it is parcticable for them to exclude the negroes from the suffrage to the extent of preventing them from being able, in their prestage of intelligence, to take possession of a State government, even though they be a majority in its people." Under existing circumstances it is useless for the negro of the South to kick against the pricks. He must become reconciled to barbarious treatment or leave that section.

DR. Lyman Abbott, pastor of Plymouth church, Brooklyn, in a sermon Sunday said: "It was not necessary for a man to believe in the divinity of Christ to be a follower of Christ." In support of this assertion he said "that the twelve apostles knew nothing of the divinity of Christ, but had been led to God through his human life." He praised Felix Adler's religion and theology as containing all the essential elements of Christian religion and theology, and said that his followers, whether hetrodox or orthodox, were Christians because they were doing a work of righteousness. The Doctor may or may not believe what he is preaching, but the Christian people at large will accept no such doctrine. Take the divinity of Christ from religion and the plan and purpose of Christ is thwarted to a great extent. Now and then we hear of much learning turning men's brains. This must be one of those cases.

THE President's message which was read to Congress on Monday, has brought out a storm of criticisms which is not far behind Sunday's storm in some respects. It seems to have riled the Democratic press generally, because the President didn't dwell on the new acquisition of the United States as they thought he ought to. He said "it will be appropriate after the treaty of peace shall be ratified." It seems impossible to transmit it to the Senate for a month yet. Its ratification will take another, and when this is accomplished it will be too late to take up the intricate problems presented in the legislation needed for the government of Poto Rico and the Philippines or the organization of a new government in Cuba. While awaiting legislation the Executive is ample to meet every emergency. There is nothing to be gained by haste, but much may be lost. A year is none too long for discussion to bring public opinion to a correct conclusion, and thinking people will soon it. A few months ago the same press grew impulsive because the President didn't act as soon as they thought he ought to. Since then the public has learned that he is a safe man at the head of the nation. All objections raised are only partisan criticisms. All this Congress can do is to provide for the government of Hawaii. On the character of this legislation the President says little. He confines himself to the suggestion that such legislation should "realize the aspirations" of Hawaii and provide for its "assimulation" under such relations. The President points to the war with Spain and calls it "a signal triumph." He also recommends an army of 100,000 men, the addition of three battleships and nine cruisers to the navy and the annual expenditure of at least $2,000,000 in providing steam communication for new possessions. These and many other recommendations can't fail to meet public approval.

THOSE persons and newspapers now engaged in naming the next Governor of Maryland would better wait awhile. Political booms that are to bear fruit in November, 1899, seldom thrive well in 1898.—Easton Ledger. But, brother, pursuit is more than possession to some people, therefore let them build their little aircastles and draw what consolation they can before next November. If it pleases them it don't hurt us, so let them speculate.

MAY 1 was a great day at Malila, July 3 a great day at Santiago, and November 28 a great day at Paris. Considerable history has been written since last spring and the United States has made up a new page of records.

Now that the Senate has met the President will ask that body to confirm 299 appointments of presidential postmasters awaiting its confirmation. These appointments represent those made during recess of Congress.

JAKE Jones, the noted colored bully who the officers had to shoot to capture, had a hearing before Justice Wilkins and was held in $8,000 bail for court.—Kent News.

Colored people must be millionaires in Kent if they aren't trying the Southern shotgun policy on them.

ADMIRAL Cervera is quoted as saying that he was sent to sea without any plans and without any preparations for fighting. He was made the victim of one of Spain's foolish bluffs.

Private Customers.

There is no other class of farmers which is as successful as that class which makes a business of selling its produce to private customers, no matter whether the produce be butter, fruit, vegetables or honey. In every town or city there are some people who desire the best of everything, and who are able and willing to pay an extra price to have a first-class article. There are many people who make it a business to supply this demand, but the demand always exceeds the supply for first-class produce, no matter what it may be. A person who supplies his customers with a choice brand of butter takes extra care of his cows as well as the milk and butter. So it is with every line of farming where choice articles are sought, care must be taken from the beginning to the end, if success is to be the reward. This means extra care and extra labor, but it also means extra pay. A man who makes this his business never takes an inferior article and presents it as choice, if so, his customers soon desert him and he finds that another dealer is in his place. A good trade cannot be built up in a day, but by doing your best for a time a trade can be built up, that will be envied by all of your neighbors. A reputation in this line, as well as in all others, takes time to obtain, and obtaining is not all, for it is very easily lost, and it requires constant effort to hold the quality of the product up to the standard.

Congress and Polygamy.

The attention that is being given to the election of the polygamist, Brigham H. Roberts, to Congress from Utah is an assurance that the public is intimately interested in the case. The matter is being widely discussed in the newspapers, and by Congressmen and clergymen. Representative Dingley of Maine has given his views on the subject as follows: "When Utah was admitted to the Union a solemn pledge was given that polygamy should not be permitted. That was the condition on which the act of admission was passed. It would now be a very bold thing if that State, in the face of its solemn pledge, should send to Congress as one of its earliest Representatives in the House a polygamist." Most of the members of Congress interviewed agree with Mr. Dingely, although there is a natural reluctance on their part to committing themselves beforehand on a case they will be called upon to decide.

The election of Mr. Roberts to Congress must be regarded as a bold defiance of the United States by the Mormons of Utah. Mr. Roberts is an avowed polygamist and is now and has been living openly with three or four wives. When he was nominated by the Democrats it was claimed by many that he was ineligible on account of his violation of the laws of Utah and the United States, which make the practice, polygamy a crime. The campaign against him was made wholly on this charge, but he refused to withdraw and was elected November 8 by a large majority. Mr. Roberts has attempted no denial or concealment of his habits and has in fact confessed that the charge of polygamy against him is true. The only defense he has made is to claim that the promise of the Mormon Church, when it was admitted to the Union, not to permit polygamous marriages related to the future and did not concern such unions already in existence. On this ground he asserts that he has violated no law.

The case is a complicated one and Congress may not see its duty so clearly as the public evidently wishes. Utah was admitted as a State under a distinct pledge from the Mormons that polygamy should cease. The promise was given that the practice should be abolished and not re-established and that the Constitution should be framed and laws passed in accord with this promise. This pledge was kept and Utah was admitted as an independent State. And now being an independent State Congress cannot interfere. The laws of the State may be violated and polygamy practiced by every man and woman within its limits, but so long as the constituted authorities do not call on the National Government to enforce the laws Congress is powerless. This is exactly the situation which many predicted would come about. They warned Congress and the public of the folly that was being committed in placing trust in the word of the Mormons, but their predictions were disregarded. If it is any satisfaction to them they can point now to the fulfillment of their prophecies when an avowed polygamist is sent to Congress and he is virtually asking the public: "What are you going to do about it?"

Mr. Chares Taylor, residing near Wye Mills, has a new variety of beans which he has exhibited. The bean looks like our lima bean, but there is a greater number in a shell. The shell is about fifteen to eighteen inches long and contains about eighteen well formed beans, each as large as the average size lime bean.

The eagle owned by James H. Straughn, proprietor of the Arlington hotel, Centreville, is dead. The noble bird was kept in a cage in one corner of the yard adjoining the hotel. Being deprived of its liberty it seemed to prefer death to imprisonment. The bird was named Commadore Schley by it many admirers.

The suit of Miss Lilly Crew against Dr. Charles W. Reid, president of Washington College, at Chestertown, which was moved from Kent county, was concluded at Easton a few days ago. The suit is for $5,000, brought by Miss Crew against Dr. Reid for riding his bicycle, frightening her horse, causing it to run away injuring herself and father. After being out two hours the jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff for $600.
