State Entomologist W. G. Johnson in speaking of the louse which for the first time has destroyed more than one-third of the pea crop said: "It is evident that the larva of that pest has lain dormant for centuries, as the louse appeared all over this state and in Delaware. Large Real Estate Sale.

George C. Moore, of Queen Anne, and Thomas L. Day, of Ridgely, have bought the real estate holdings of Frances T. Barton at Queen Anne, 208 acres, for $12,000—nearly $60 an acre. Queen Anne is at the meeting place of the three counties—Queen Anne, Caroline and Talbot and at the junction of the Delaware and the Chesapeake and Queen Anne's Railroads. It is a new town, the station of the Delaware and Chesapeake Railway having moved there from Hillsboro only a few years ago. It may really be considered an extension of Hillsboro, as only the narrow Tuckahoe river, spanned here by the bridge, is between the two villages. Each, however, has its own postoffice.

Baseball on the Fourth.

The Centreville Observer of last week inquired "what has become of our baseball club? Not for several weeks or perhaps months, has the Centreville Baseball Team showed any signs of life. There is good material in this town and all it needs is life. We trust that our ball players will organize soon and start the ball rolling." The above seems to have been too much for the defunct nine and on the morning of the 4th set out in search of conquest, playing Hillsboro boys, which resulted in a score of 9 to 18 in favor of the later team. In the afternoon Centreville boys crossed bats with the Denton team and were worse defeated than in the morning, the score being 21 to 14. Two defeats in one day is rather a bad starter. Whether the defeats hits the Observer harder than its "live ball team," we are not prepared to say at this writing.

Judge Russum Interviewed.

Judge George M. Russum, of this county, was at the Carrollton Hotel Baltimore, Wednesday night, and speaking of the political situation to a Sun reporter said:

"Governor Lowndes will have the support of the Caroline delegation in the convention and the unanimous support of the Republicans of the county. The Republican party is in good shape. We have escaped any entanglements, and will work as a unit. This talk about ex-Postmaster-General Gary as a gubernatorial candidate has no foundation. If Mr. Gary resigned the Postmaster-Generalship and the presidency of a bank on account of his health, he would never consider the Governorship.

"Democrats over my way seem to think that Mr. Edwin Warfield will secure the Democratic nomination and that Col. John Walter Smith is not a canidate in the true sense of the word. He expects to fill out his term in Congress."

Parenthetically, the Judge remarked: "You know elections are getting to be very expensive in our part of the State."

CAROLINE'S '99 TAX RATE.

The County Commissioners after several days work on the county levy for '99, concluded their work last Thursday, placing the tax rate the same as last year, at $1.12½ on the $100, and State tax 17½ cts., the two being $1.30. In comparing the levy this year with that of last we find a few alterations in the appropriations which the taxpayers on the whole will approve. The largest increase this year is in roads and bridges, being advanced from $6,000 to $8,000. The cause for this is that the farmers being the heaviest taxpayers and asking for it it was granted. Noticeable changes have been made in this direction and is appreciated by the traveling public. The largest cut in any appropriation is at the Almshouse which has been reduced from $3,000 to $1,500, showing that the commissioners have great confidence in Overseer Norris' ability as a good manager of the institution. Next to this comes the public school appropriation, which has been placed at $11,000, what it was in '97, and is not "the step backward" some would like to make it appear. No two years call for the same appropriations and this year is no exception to the rule. On the whole the division of the levy is considered good. The non-appropriation for a county high school building is a disappointment to many but is one of those things that will adjust itself in time. The following is the levy for '99.

A MURDER AT EASTON.

Olin Hynson, white, aged about 23 years, was stabbed in the neck and breast in Easton at midnight Saturday and died at 4 o'clock Sunday morning from internal hemorrage.

Malcolm Anderson, who is alleged to have done the stabbing, fled but was captured at Greenwood, Del., Monday. As soon as he realized the extent of his crime he endeavored to make good his escape. After leaving Easton, Anderson says he came to Queen Anne, and then to Denton and Hobbs, where he was fastened in a freight car and taken to Greenwood, where he was arrested and taken to Easton jail on the evening train on Monday. During that afternoon a post-morten examination was held and the following verdict rendered: Olyn T. Hynson came to his death by a wound inflicted by Henry Malcom Anderson. According to the testimony, neither Anderson or Hynson were drunk at the time of the tragedy, though both of them had been drinking.

Dr. James H. Anderson, father of the accused murderer, has retained Wm. H. Adkins and Chas. S. Carrington, of the Easton bar, to defend his son. It is reported at Easton that young Hynson was to have been married next week to a lady in Pittsburg, Pa.

Saturday night Anderson, Hynson, Edward Cox, James Dillon and Edward Straughn went to "The Klondyke," a liquor store kept by William E. Turner on the Chapel district side of Wootenaux bridge, about about three miles from Easton. Liveryman Lewis K. Edgell, of Easton, who was there also, brought them home in his wagon. One of the party says Anderson and Hynson quarrelled cutting home and that Anderson said: "We can't settle it here: wait until we get in Easton. I am going to kill you before morning"

They got out of the wagon at Edgell's stable, on Dover street. Walter Shaw joined them there. Anderson and Hynson kept up their qurrel until Washington street, near the brick row, was reached, when they clinched, and in less than a half minute thereafter Hynson fell. He got up, according to the statement of a witness, and pursued Anderson west to Cabnet street, a distance of two squares, his blood marking the pavement as he ran. He then turned back and fell exhausted at Garrison Mathewson's, where he was taken in, and where he died.

Anderson and Hynson were both members of Company F. First Maryland Regiment, and it is said there has been bad blood between them ever since the Phoebus affair, when the regiment was encamped at Fort Monroe, though this is denied by some members of the company. Malcolm Anderson is the youngest son of Dr. James H. Anderson, the oldest physician of Easton. Hynson was a carpenter and workman at Martin's Woodwork Factory.

A Complicated Case.

An Easton Correspondent to the Baltimore Sun, says the the following case is before the court: An interesting case is before the Talbot County Orphans' Court. The late Mathew Saulsbury, of Caroline County, by his will, he left to his daughter Catharine, wife of Robert K. Collison, $500, to be paid to her in two instalments, one and two years from the day of his demise. Mrs. Collison died before her father, and Edward Saulsbury, one of the executors of Mathew Saulsbury, paid the $500 to Mr. Collison in trust for his three children. Mr. Collison, who recently died at Oxford, was married four times. Catharine Saulsbury was his first wife, and her children, John E. Collison, Mary C. Boone and Robert H. Collison, together with Edward Saulsbury, surviving executor of Mathew Saulsbury, by their solicitor, Henry R. Lewis, of Denton, set up the plea that $500 paid to Robert K. Collison was never paid to them and that sum is payable out of the estate of Robert K. Collison as preferred claim. Then Edward Saulsbury, executor, by his counsel, Deneese & Owens, of Denton, filed a bill in the Orphans' Court against the estate of Robert K. Collison for the $500 paid him. Clayland Mullikin, attorney for the children of Robert K. Collison by his third wife, appeared in the in behalf and contested the claim. The matter will be decided this week.

Farmers' Trusts.

In his testimony recently before the Industrial Commission Mr. G. K. Holmes, statistician of the Department of Agriculture, had much to say in defense of what he calls "farmers trusts," and asked that the interests of such combines be borne in mind when the Commission comes to make its recommendations to Congress. A trust is not necessarily, Mr. Holmes contended, an association of rich men only, but may include farmers, dairymen and fruit growers, as well as labor or organized in trades unions. As a matter of fact, he said, farmers have organized a number of trusts, which they conducted with success. As examples he cites the Milk Producers' Union of Boston and the fruit growers of California. The reason for the trust movement among farmers he finds to be the same as among manufactures, namely, a desire to restrict competition among themselves and maintain or advance prices. There many such trusts, of more or less informal nature, at all times in every community. By combination the farmers find it possible to command better prices and obtain lower freights rates. Accordingly Mr. Holmes holds that any legislation designed to distroy or regulute trusts will have to be very skillfully drawn if it is not to apply to farmers' organizations.—Baltimore Sun.

That Kissing Bug on the Peninsula.

The bug that has been giving humanity so much trouble in Washington, D. C., Philadelphia and other cities has arrived in town. Miss Evelyn Richardson caught one in the sleeve of her dress the other morning and recognizing it to be the "Kissing Bug" took the precaution to preserve it alive. It seems Miss Richardson returned from the excursion trip Thursday evening and threw the windows of her room open for the purpose of airing and did not replace the screens. It is the supposition that the bug flew in the window and enclosed itself in the sleeve of her dress. The bug was sent by Miss Richardson to Dr. J. M. Corkran who in turn sent it to a drug store, where it can be seen alive and kicking if not kissing. Over 100 patients have been treated in Washington from effects of its bite or sting. It is called the "Kissing Bug" because it always attacks the lips, which it is said swell to ten times their size. The face is also said to swell up double its original size. Colodion is the remedy used to reduce the swelling in the hospitals where patients have been treated. It takes 48 hours to reduce the swelling.—Centreville Record.
