JOHN A. SIGLER,
GEORGE M. RUSSUM,
JERE. B. FLETCHER,
State Central Committee for Caroline County.

OUR Democratic contemporaries have cooled off on the "tariff protected trusts." It has learned to their sorrow, that companies or corporations are formed under State laws, and that State Legislatures might put restrictions on such organizations, while the Federal government has no power over them. But what have Democratic State legislatures done to stop them? Nothing. In our sister State, Delaware, which has been Democratic for the past thirty years, what has she done to check trusts? Nothing. What is she doing to promote them? Hardly a week passes that four to six combines are not made under Democratic laws. Show us Democratic consistency if you can. Their party in this county with all its fuss and feathers denounce them, while across the line it says by its actions it is right to legalize trusts. Let public sentiment be what it may on combines, the inconsistencies of democracy along this line is too plain to be misunderstood. It matters not how objectionable the trusts may be, they are not contrary to any law now on our statutes, or the laws of any other country. More, under our constitution no law can be passed to prevent these industrial combines, and clearly demonstrates that Bryan, Gorman, and others like them would be incable to fill any important office if elected to it. President McKinley is as powerless to do anything to check them as a county justice of the peace. This is a free country, and being such, no law can be enacted saying how much property a man may own. Nothing short of a change of the constitution can remedy this matter as indicated by the Democratic press. The nearest approach thereto is through State legislation, and as a guarantee of their good faith the party will naturally point to Delaware as an example of how they do things. Stop competition in trade and at once business dies, is a saying. We have yet to see competition cease. Capital may for a brief time corner a market, but inverably it is short lived. If any one suffers from these combines in the future, it will cost those interested in them, financially, as much as any one else. In the past it has been a safe rule to judge a tree by its fruit. For thirty years the Republican tree has brought fourth fruit superior to any in the know world. Her record has no equal in history. Other nations during that time sent her rich and poor here too to breath, its pure air. The rich endoavored to add to what it had, while the poor say it is the best country they have found under the sun. Who can imagine a national party who took charge of state when rent by inward dissentions and threatened with disruption, after being brought on step by step to its present status being turned over to money shark? Such an acquisation is only born to die. Let us look at the Democratic party's tree in State and nation. After thirty years in the service of the former, to say it was corrupt, would be calling it by a mild name, while the country's experience during Mr. Cleveland's four year term needs but slight mention, having so recently happened. There are many kinds of fruit that grew during those four years, but the richest plum was that $262,000,000 debt it turned over to the present administration to pay off. Yet that same party is trying to make the public believe that Mr. McKinley is ruining the country, notwithstanding we are on the crest of one of the strongest business booms ever known. It turned both State and nation over to the Republican party with heavy debts made by its own folly. "By their fruit ye shall know them." Judge the two parties for yourself.

YIELDING to public demand, Gen. Alger last week, resigned his position as Secretary of War, no doubt to the satisfaction of the newspaper crank. This resignation was promptly accepted by the President and Elihu Root, of New York, has accepted the secretaryship. Mr. Root is a well-known lawyer of New York and was born in Clinton, N. Y., in 1845. He paid for his own education, teaching school to earn the money. He is a graduate of Hamilton College, of which his father was professor of mathematics. He is also a graduate of University Law School in New York city. As a young lawyer Mr. Root became active in politics. He was a Republican and in 1879 was the candidate for Judge of the Court of Common Pleas, but was defeated. Under President Arthur he was U. S. District Attorney for the Southern district of New York for two years. Mr. Root was counsel for Wm. M. Tweed on the exposure of the Tweed ring methods. He was counsel for ex-Judge Hilton in the Stewart will cases and others of note. Mr. Root is a lawyer with energy and efficiency, coupled with ability and experience. The post demands both qualifications. The head of the War Department will have to conduct and bring the Luzon contest to a close as soon as possible, and on him rests the responsibility. This war must be fought and decided by the officers and soldiers there for that purpose. The colonial issues that have been suddenly thrown on that department, will require a man of great legal ability to solve, and the general impression is the president has found the right man for the place. He must be a man of affairs. He must have administrative efficiency. He must understand what can't as well as what can be done. He must know the public and understand the conflicting influences, political and financial. All these and other influences must be brought to bear in these days of progress and enlightenment.

AN exchange in advising the officials of its county says this among other things: "Its columns should, at all times, champion the improvement in roads, schools and all other interests in which the public is likely to be interested. A newspaper fails in its mission if it fails to foster home enterprises of every character."

At first thought people say all papers do that, but on reflection it is readily seen they do not. Many of them have hobbies of their own and ride them to the exclusion of other things. Our schools and roads are receiving especial attention at this time, which is right and proper. On the former depends the future of the county; the later prosperity and convenience of the public in a measure. The two are essential for the welfare of this or any other county. But, say some, our schools and roads cost the county too much. Do they? The school question has been discussed, and, we believe, satisfactorially adjusted. As to the road question $8,000 is not too much to use on the roads for a time, and nothing short of better roads seem to satisfy the traveling public. Our roads are beginning to compare favorably with other counties, although the annual outlay is far less than our nighboring counties. Take Queen Anne's county for example, that rock ribbed Democratic stronghold, there it has set aside $30,000 for what we expend $8,000 and do about the same work, our roads comparing favorably with theirs. If we can do the work we propose for $8,000, why should our neighbor set aside nearly four times as much money to accomplish about the same work? The solution is an easy one. The Democratic pool in that county is not very easily satisfied, or, perhaps, it may go to make up the several thousand dollars that so mysteriously disappeared from the county treasury a little while ago.

IN the County Commissioners' levy this year may be found a $1500 estimate for the support of the county's insane, which amount many think could be reduced by building an addtion to the Almshouse and having Overseer Norris look after those people who are not violently insane, but have to be confined to be kept from wandering wherever their imaginary minds may dictate. That class of insane patients could as well be provided for here as at State institutions where the cost would be much less. Had the county had accommodation for this class of unfortunates, the county this week would have been saved the expense of sending Mrs. Faithful, of near Bridgetown, to the Maryland Hospital. As this is the time to carry every retrenchment into effect that would save taxpayers money, it might be profitable for our county officials to consider this matter at an early date.

ROBT. G. Ingersoll the greatest infidel of his time is dead, but the world mourns not. He tried to rob it of its christian hope and gave it nothing to take its place. He said there was no heaven, no hell, as well as many other things people did not believe, and which he doesn't at this time. The world naturally admired his eloquence and other winning qualities, for they were from God, but the use he made of them is appalling. He never seemed with all his learning to understand that to whom much was given, much would be required. Not content with his own destruction he endeavored to drag others down with him. Not only did he do this but he attacked a principle that has fostered the civilization and enlightenment of the world. When Mr. Ingersoll was at the height of his eloquence he was a power for evil. He was untiring in his efforts to lead people astray, but his power gradually relaxed and he recanted somewhat in his later years. Now that the grave contains all that is mortal of the deceased, he will live as Paine and Voltaire, remembered for their evil and pernicious live. But this isn't all. He must answer for his sins in this world which will live and grow long after his body has returned to its mother earth. While he cannot sin any more, his sins can, and will continue to cry out against him for centuries to come, perhaps.

THE newly elected Democratic City Council of Wilmington are in a similar position to the man who drew an elephant at a lottery—they don't know what to do with it. They are caucusing and caucusing. The crowd of office seekers is multitudious and each seeker is as hungry as a bear. Hence the councilmen have no peace anywhere. On Tuesday night when the members met to causus for candidates they were so beseiged, they had to put out the lights to convince the hungry crowd they had adjourned. When the mad, swearing candidates saw the lights were out, they gradually dispersed. The imprisoned councilmen, seeing the way clear, sneaked out the back door and stole home.—Dover Sentinel.

The tendency is to criticise Delaware Democracy for its short comings. It should be remembered it is laboring under peculiar circumstances. It has cleavorly got through reading some of its members out of its party, and is still working at the Addicks' beam it got in its eye last winter; therefore too much should not be expected. Political profession is the political sand it is endeavoring to blind the public with. Moral: Keep your eye peeled on politicians.

A Baltimore Democratic daily says: "Times are too good. Building trades are suffering from overprosperity. Great uncertainty in the building trade in Baltimore resulting from it. That uncertainty is not due to any stagnant or pamcky conditions in financial or commercial circles, or to any signs that would cause distrust of the future. Business conditions in general are in splendid condition; far better than they were last year, and that is just what is the matter with the building trade. Business is too good. The supply of building material is not equal to the demand. The iron mills throughout the country are crowded with orders that will keep them running for months to come. Mills are running to their full capacity, filling orders that were placed there months ago, and will not promise new ones under a year's time." Comment is unnecessary.

BALTIMORE papers predict the nomination of ex-Gov. William Pinkney White for attorney general, Hon. J. Walter Smith, for governor and Dr. J. W. Hering for comptroller.—Ex.

If that slate is carried out the Republican party will be pleased, as it is the embodiment of weakness and would be slaughtered in its own camp next November. This is a Gorman ticket, mainly that part that interests his presidential boom. If we can judge anything by the way Bryan laid him out last week at Chicago that is the way this State will lay his ticket out this fall, should he be so unfortunate as to have one. The old man is winding up a long political career that no one will regreat, save a band of political leeches.

THE debt of Maryland decreased last year $466,000. A comfortable cash balance of $680,000 is expected September 30. The amount distributed to the public schools increased from $600,000 in '94 to $827,000 in '98, which does not include the sums paid out for free school books.

Doesn't Favor John Walter.

There never was a Democratic ticket nominated that was not objectional to someone—but we don't remember in our thirty years experience in the newspaper business, when the head of a ticket was so generally objectionable and condemned by the people as the one nominated by the Democratic County Convention today. So objectionable was the head of the ticket to some of the candidates, that the other places on the ticket went begging. Further comment is unnecessary.—Annapolis Evening Capital of July 20, Dem. Since John Walter Smith is so obnoxious to his party in Anne Arundel county, it might be well for his friends on the Eastern Shore to enquire into the reason for it.

To Investigate Peach Orchards.

State Entomologist Johnson, assisted by Messrs Gould and Stewart, commenced an exhaustive investigation of soil and other conditions existing in the Kent county peach belt. The work was commenced on the lower southern extremity of the county, a section peach yellows have never reached. From this point the investigations will be made toward north, into the section from which the devastation of the yellows cleared out several million of as fine trees as ever grew in the celebrated Maryland and Delaware peach belt. A record of soil analysis, specimens of vegetable and insect life will be made and minute chart made of the entire section touched. Professor Johnson estimates that from three to five weeks may be required to complete the work. The great "Round Top" orchard, which for many years was the largest peach orchard in the world, has given away to other crops. The same is true of other sections once famous for abundance. The cause for the force abondonment of this once great peach producing territory by peach-growers is the work which Professor Johnson has in hand.
