ANAGES A SAWMILL.

nis Society Girl Gives Up the uxuries of Home to Run an Arizona Plant.

ss Amelia Judson, of St. Louis, be- e an Arizona sawmiller all in one Her brother had invested $38,000 r lands and built a sawmill and shed the Judson lumber camp, les northeast of Williams, Ariz. made a specialty of timber suitable r boxes for the California fruit trade id from the start was successful. In ne, 1898, young Judson's mother and ster came to visit him. Miss Judson ad just finished a course at Cornell niversity and expected, after leaving rizona to go to Paris to study art.

But misfortune prevented. Only a week before she and her mother had intended to return to St. Louis, Andrew Judson became suddenly ill with typhoid fever and died. That was last October.

There was but one thing to do. Three important contracts for lumber and box material were in course of fulfillment when the ambitious young lumberman died. Both mother and daughter realized that thousands of dollars of their money was tied up in the lumber camp and that the only way to save it, avoiding the sacrifice of a forced sale, was to keep the plant in operation.

And so it was that college-bred Amelia Judson became a sawmiller in the heart of the Bill William mountains of Arizona. She went to the office and took charge. The rough men who saw her wondered at her temerity and hardihood; then they admired her pluck and determined to help her in every way possible. She went into the woods with the logging teams and learned every detail of the work of converting a standing tree into lumber or fruit boxes. She got out her brother's contracts in time, took further orders and prospered at every turn. "Running a sawmill has passed the experimental stage with me," said Miss Judson. "The fact that we have made money every month since February, or since I got the run of the work, is no credit of mine, but the result of my brother's establishment of the business. I like the work very much, and I shall no doubt continue it. I am never lonesome out there in the camp, for the work so occupies all my waking hours that I never have time to dwell on sentimentalities."

HOW TO WALK UP STAIRS.

When an Equal Distribution of the Body's Weight Is Secured It's an Easy Task.

A physician who declared that few people know how to walk upstairs properly was asked to describe how it should be done. He said: "Usually a person will tread on the ball of his foot in taking each step. This is very tiresome and wearing on the muscles, as it throws the entire suspended weight of the body on the muscles of the legs and feet. You should, in walking or climbing stairs, seek for the most equal distribution of the body's weight possible.

"In walking upstairs your feet should be placed squarely down on the step, heel and all, and then the work should be performed slowly and deliberately. In this way there is no strain upon any particular muscle, but each one is doing its duty in a natural manner. The woman who goes upstairs with a spring is no philosopher, or at least she is not making a proper use of her reasoning faculties. The habit, too, of bending over half double when ascending a flight of stairs is exceedingly reprehensible. In any exertion of this kind, when the heart is naturally excited to a more rapid action, it is desirable that the lungs should have full play. The crouching position interferes with their action, the blood is imperfectly aerated, and there is trouble at once. Give the lungs a chance to do their work everywhere and at all times."

Women as House Painters.

Berlin has added house painting to the daily increasing list of men's trades now followed by women. The women have served a regular apprenticeship, including gymnastic training, so that they will not lose their nerve while working on scaffolds or ladders. They wear the gray linen frock and cap that are the house painter's badge, as well as his shield from paint.

ELECTRICAL COOKING.

It Has Proved a Great Success Wherever It Has Been Given a Thorough Trial.

Electricity is making its way into the kitchen through the parlor and dining-room, says the Cosmopolitan. For some time it has been used for the heating of the five-o'clock tea kettle, eliminating the dangers which are always incurred when an alcohol lamp is used. A tea kettle, coffee pot or chafing dish may be adjusted to the nearest lamp in a house wired for electric lighting.

The experienced cook knows that there are dishes which are never seen in their perfection ten feet from the fire that cooked them. People who have passed their youth in the country grow peevish over the way years have deteriorated the flavor of some simple early favorite of the table. Electrical appliance have done something to conditions. Griddle ce, electric- ght as they are flipped from griddle to plate. But while this appliance can be used with the illuminating current, it requires an extra attachment, as that current is too weak. This is generally put in at the leg of the dining-table. Up to this time electricity has been used almost exclusively by the woman who makes a fad of experimental cooking, and she has her electric kitchen fitted up like a small laboratory, far from the domain of the family cuisine.

The whole paraphernalia might fit into a tiled closet almost anywhere, so hooded and ventilated that no odor escapes into the surrounding rooms. In one of the apartment houses in New York dainty little electric kitchens have been fitted up where the tenants have asked for them, although the apartments were not designed for housekeeping originally.

With the most careful calculation, says Mrs. Lincoln, there is frequently coffee left over; not enough, perhaps, for another serving as a beverage, but too much to be wasted. Do not leave it in the pot with the grounds, but pour it off or strain it carefully, and if it be used again hot let it just come to the boiling point. This will be much nicer than to reheat it with the grounds. It may be used to dilute the egg for the next morning's coffee, or as a flavoring in custards, creams and ices; or as the liquid in place of or with milk in gingerbread, cookies, cakes, etc., or, when there is a sufficient quantity, it can be made into jelly.

Delicious Apple Charlotte.

An excellent home-made apple charlotte is prepared as follows: Line the inside of a pudding dish with thin slices of home-made bread, moderately well buttered on both sides. Peel, core and slice a quantity of sour apples, put in a thin layer of apple in the dish, spice to taste, and a liberal quantity of sugar, then add a layer of any kind of home-made preserves and so on until the dish is full. Put slices of buttered bread on top, and bake until quite brown and crisp on top.

Simple Table Decoration.

A pretty table decoration can be arranged with pressed ferns. The centerpiece should be of growing ferns, and foliage of the same green should be strewn upon the cloth in careless but artistic profusion. Fresh ferns cannot so well be used for this purpose, as their leaves are apt to turn and wrinkle. The pressed variety is obtainable of any florist and can be used many times if properly put away in a flat box or between the leaves of a book.

WEEDS GOOD TO EAT.

In Europe Many of Them Are Considered Delicacies and Used as Rare Flavorings.

Go out on any farm and see the farmer hoeing away at the weeds that threaten to choke his crop. You may hear him say things that wouldn't sound nice about the weeds.

The dandelion isn't the only weed eaten by people who know what's good to eat. Take wild cherry, the plague of the farmer. It makes one of the finest salads served, piquant, tender and wholesome. Charlock, or wild mustard, is another bane of the farmer. He doesn't know that as a pot herb it can give a soup a delightful flavor. The dockweeds—how annoying the whole family are! Yet the broad leaf variety and the curly leaf are used all over Europe as table vegetables.

There's pokeweeds, commonest of them all. In France it is cultivated. It takes its place with sage, thyme, parsley and bay leaves as a flavoring for soup.

Everybody in America hates a nettle and can't see what use it is. In Scotland, Poland and Germany tender young nettle leaves are used as greens. The Germans boil it with other vegetables to give them a piquant flavor. Purslane is another weed that can be treated the same way.

Most people think milkweed poisonous. It is a medicinal vegetable with a delightful flavor all its own. The young leaves, when they are in just the right condition, are a cross between spinach and asparagus, and in a salad are delicious.

Sorrel, fetticus and chevril are looked on as field pests by ninety-nine out of every hundred farmers. The hundredth one picks the choicest leaves from these weeds and sends them to market, where they find a ready sale for salads to be eaten with game and for flavoring herbs—for herbs they are and not weeds.—N. Y. World.

LININGS FOR CASKETS.

Directions by Which the Ingenious Home Artist Can Make Her Own Safety Vault.

Here is an ingenious device by which any home artist can convert her jewel casket into a veritable safety vault. And by this treatment the casket can be impressed into service as both a receptacle for valuables and a pin cushion.

Three separate linings are made, each a size larger or smaller than the other, according to the size of the first lining cut. It is better, however, to start with the smallest, then the size can be more evenly regulated. The jewels are laid between the first and second linings and the third is covered with silk to serve as a cushion cover. The advisability of placing valuables between the first and second linings can readily be recog- ence of a second com- partment would never be suspected after raising the cushion lining.

Moths Routed by Perfume.

It has become known to the wise ones that the destructive moth despises the pleasant fragrance of perfumes. For this reason the pungent and disagreeable remedy is not always necessary to rid wardrobes and closets of the ruinous insect. The mixture which is said to work this magical result is prepared as follows: Take one ounce each of cloves, nutmeg, cinnamon, caraway seed, mace and tonka beans, pound to powder and mix them with six ounces of orris root, which must also be in powder. These ingredients may be obtained ready crushed at a druggist's.

Washing Knuckles.

There is a new appliance which seems likely to lighten the labor of laundresses. Half a dozen rubber balls about an inch in diameter are suspended beneath a handle so that they can revolve independently of each other. The clothes are soaped and spread over a board, and the "washing knuckles" are then rolled up and down them with pressure, quickly removing dirt. They will certainly not fray linen as brushes do, and may be used on delicate fabrics with safety.

Reasons for High Heels.

High heels, it is said, owe their origin to Persia, where they were introduced to raise the feet from the burning sands of that country.

EDITH SENT TO JAIL.

Girl Punished for Whipping a Sturdy Six-Foot Farmer.

Edith Bahr, a tall and slender, yet plump, black-eyed girl of Lyons Farms, was sentenced at Elizabeth, N. J., to three months in the county jail because she whipped a strapping, six-foot farmer. Edith's cows started the trouble by wandering into the neighboring farm of William and Henry Bloy. When she went to get the cows William Bloy tried to eject her from the premises. In an instant the little amazon had thrown herself at him like a tigress, and was using hands, feet and nails. The big farmer tried to defend himself, but soon took to his heels, leaving the girl in possession of her cows, which she triumphantly drove home.

The Bloys laid the facts before the grand jury and Edith was indicted on a charge of assault and battery. Last week she was tried before a jury and found guilty.

Unfortunately for the girl, Justice McCormick did not think that the girl's offense was one that a fine could atone for. When he sentenced her to three months' imprisonment in the county jail the blood surged to her cheeks and she staggered as if someone had struck her.

"What! I go to prison!" she screamed. Then she became hysterical. When the court officers tried to remove her she resisted with all her strength. She was finally led down the corridor of the jail, sobbing as if her heart would break.

WANTED A DIVORCE.

A Queer Female Visitor Makes Her Appearance in Court.

A. R. Wolfe, lawyer, was sitting in the office of the circuit court clerk at Chicago yesterday morning smoking a "long nine," when a vision of beauty wrapped in sealskin floated in on a billow of perfume.

"I want a divorce," said the vision of beauty, "and I want it quick. I want it before to-morrow."

"Well, you certainly want it bad enough," ejaculated the attorney, who was so surprised that he dropped his cigar from his mouth. "However, I don't see what I can do for you. There are a few necessary formalities. You will have to file a bill, for instance, and you will have to—"

"Oh, rats!" said the vision of beauty "I know very well there is a divorce bureau where you can get a decree right away, and if this isn't it, I'm going to find it."

"I WANT A DIVORCE."

With this remark the visitor swept out, leaving behind her the foam from the billow of perfume and an astounded coterie of court employes.

"I suppose she thinks she can get a divorce just as she can get a pound of tea," said Mr. Wolfe. "Well, thank heaven, it hasn't quite come to that yet."

They Sponged Their Whisky.

Necessity is the mother of invention. Two tramps went into a saloon at East Oakland, Cal., the other day, and handing a demijohn over the counter, asked the proprietor to fill it with good whisky. The saloon keeper obliged them and was tendered a dollar in return. He at once refused it, as it was debased. The tramps had no more money, and, there being no alternative, the saloon man emptied the whisky back into the cask and the tramps left with their demijohn. A few minutes later the tramps went into a vacant lot and carefully broke the demijohn. From the pieces they delicately lifted out a bath sponge, which was thoroughly soaked with whisky.

Surprised by an Aerolite.

A singular fall of an aerolite is reported from Biouix, near Namur. Two men were working together in a field when one of them was dashed to the ground by a blow which broke his rake. On regaining consciousness he discovered a large stone, weighing 26½ pounds, and of a yel- h color, buried in the soil.

WHY GOV. LOWNDES DESERVES A RE-ELECTION.

[Editorial from Baltimore Morning Herald, Democratic, of October 11.]

The Republicans and Democrats of Maryland have made their respective nominations, the State and city tickets of each being now complete. All the candidates having thus been formally announced and the two platforms enunciated, the people are in a position to judge of the relative merits of each.

Of the two State tickets it should be said, in spite of fairness, that both are good, and that by the election of either the Commonwealth would be reasonably assured of an honest administration of its public affairs. As to the Legislative ticket in the City of Baltimore, we believe that impartial critics will agree that the Republicans have made the strongest nominations, this being so particularly in the Second district, and that the election of the candidates of that party will afford the promise of a more satisfactory record on the part of the lawmaking branch of our State government.

Concerning the two platforms, we have had occasion heretofore to call attention to the weakness of the Democratic declaration, and particularly to its manifest evasion of the all-important issue of police reorganization. As the Morning Herald said at the time, "the Democrats have distinctly failed to meet public expectations in this respect," and the popular disappointment occasioned thereby has not been assuaged by the subsequent adoption of reformatory resolutions by the Legislative conventions. The Republican platform, on the contrary, was more specific in regard to the reform of our Police Department, and conspicuously out-spoken in behalf of other issues, including the gold standard, a tariff system of important duties and the Philippine policy of the present administration.

Of more immediate moment to the people of Maryland than all the others was the plank concerning the management of the State's finances, and which promised to wipe out the State debt entirely if the party should be entrusted with power for another four years. Equally deserving of approbation were the resolutions in behalf of a non-partisan administration of the public schools, of a corrupt-practices act, and of a more stringent primary election law.

Of course, it is to be said generally that both platforms contain the pledge of a faithful management of public affairs, and upon the popular interpretation of these pledges will depend largely, if not wholly, the result of the November election. The truth of history, however, compels us to say that, looking to the Democracy, we see a record of broken promises consistently maintained for many years, up to 1895, when it lost control of the State. During the quarter of a century in which it was dominant the Democratic party never so much as thought of police reorganization. The Police Department was notoriously conducted along partisan lines. Salutary legislation proposed by the Reform League, and demanded by considerations of public economy and political morality, was treated with scant attention.

On the other hand, instead of broken promises, we discover a record of every promise made good during the four years in which the Republicans have been responsible for the conduct of public affairs. In the matter of reassessment, wherein the Democrats had recorded several failures to live up to their platform, the Republican pledge was distinctly redeemed, as was its promises in regard to more stringent election law and to the adoption of a new charter for the City of Baltimore.

As to Governor Lowndes, it is to be said that even his political opponents, have been unable to find anything to say against him or his administration of the State's business. Perhaps no Governor, in any State of the Union, has ever been freer from criticism at the hands of political adversities than has Governor Lowndes. Indeed, all the discontent that has been expressed concerning his fulfillment of the duties of chief executive has come from the partisans and spoilsmen within its own party organization—a circumstance which is to be interpreted as a striking testimony to his devotion to the interests of the whole people, and not to a political segment thereof. Governor Lowndes has redeemed every pledge made by him during the campaign of 1895, and this he has done, at times, in the face of a factional opposition which a less resolute and conscientious man could not have withstood.

This being an impartial review of the record made by Gov. Lowndes, it would seem just and logical that he should again be intrusted with the executive office. We say this not in a party spirit, but in behalf of the cause of good government and of the continuance of an administration that will insure to the Commonwealth a non-partisan and faithful conduct of its public business. As is well known, the Morning Herald is an independent newspaper having little regard for party ties in the selection of State and city officials. As an evidence of its unbiased attitude in this respect, it gave a cordial support to Mr. Henry Williams, the Democratic Mayoralty nominee in 1897. During the present year it strenuously advocated the election of the Hon. Thomas G. Hayes, the Democratic nominee for the Mayoralty.

In thus according a hearty support to two Democratic tickets in the past the Morning Herald was animated wholly by a desire to serve the people and it is the same spirit of independence and of intelligent discrimination which now moves it to say that of the two tickets and platforms, those of the Republicans should appeal the more strongly to patriotic voters.

MATTERS OF INTEREST.

The large barn, with its contents, on the farm of S. Edward Addicks, at Carcroft Station, Del., has been destroyed by fire entailing a loss of about $15,000. Mr. Baldwin, the tenant, discovered a blaze in one of the straw barracks and hastily summoned the farm hands and some neighbors, but despite of their efforts the building was destroyed. The barn was built of stone and was one of the largest in the county. Besides hay and straw a number of valuable farming implements were destroyed.

His Life Was Saved.

Mr. J. E. Lily, a prominent citizen of Hannibal, Mo., lately had a wonderful deliverance from a frightful death. In telling of it he says: "I was taken with Typhoid Fever, that ran into Pneumonia. My lungs became hardened. I was so weak I couldn't even sit up in bed. Nothing helped me. I expected to soon die of Consumption, when I heard of Dr. King's New Discovery. One bottle gave great relief. I continued to use it, and now am well and strong. I can't say too much in its praise." This marvellous medicine is thesurest and quickest cure in the world for all Throat and Lung trouble. Regular sizes 50 cents and $1.00. Will Take Control Nov. 1.

The Pennsylvania R. R. Co. will formally take control of Balto., Chesapeake & Atlantic R. R. Co. on Nov. 1. On the same date they will also take control of all steamboat lines on the Eastern Shore of Maryland, which include the boats which make their terminus at Denton.

Since the Penn. railroad acquired the controlling interest in the B., C. & A. railway, freight shipments are being made from that line to Hurlocks, and thence to the Delaware division by the way of Seaford. Heretofore the transfer was made at Salisbury.

Aunt Julia as she was called, was one of the heaviest women in the county, having tipped the scales at 375 pounds Undertaker Willey was compelled to order a casket in which to inter the body, and a covered wagon instead of a hearse had to be used to convey the casket to the grave.
