THURSDAY MORNING, MAR. 31, 1904.

"THE PEOPLE BE DAMNED!"

Some time ago a reputable news paper reported an incident where a railroad train on one of the through lines from the South, was held for nearly an hour at a certain point, the cause for which was a delayed special carrying one of the owners of the road. Orders to pass at a certain point had been issued, and the train men dared not move. The fact that new orders could be issued and obviate delay all along the line, was called to the attention of the railroad magnate, and that the public was being greatly inconvenienced by the delay. His reply was "The public be damned!"

Never in the history of Maryland has this same sentiment prevailed so completely in the Democratic party as today. The wishes of the people are given no consideration and selfish aims and partisan motives control almost every Democratic lawmaker in the Legislature. A correspondent of the Philadelphia Press gives this excellent view of the situation:

"It is entirely within the bounds of conservative statement to say that the decent citizens of Maryland, Democrats as well as Republicans, are in a state of alarm over the desperate efforts, having their initiative in the "negro disfranchisement" legislation of Senator Gorman and his followers, to re-enact an election law that will revive the iniquities of the past.

"Three bills are before the Legislature, one of them already passed by both Houses, which, should they become laws would bring back the days of thuggery in the hands of the Gorman-Rasin hoodlums that were potent factors in driving respectable men from the polls ere they could exercise their right of franchise guaranteed by the United States State and city law.

"In saying that the present assault upon the election law may be charged to the junior United States Senator from Maryland is to say only what is admitted freely and openly at Annapolis, and the proof of it lies in the fact that Arthur Pue Gorman, Jr., a State Senator, is the head and front of the movement and has very close and intimate partisan of the elder Gorman is lined up to carry out the infamous attack on a free ballot.

"The vicious character of the bill when introduced was scarcely noted, except by a very few persons. The people of Baltimore were incapable of giving thought to little else save their own overwhelming disaster. The fire had wiped out every newspaper of influence, and their decimated columns, printed under great difficulty, were filled, necessarily, with the news of the havoc wrought and work of rehabilitation, to the exclusion of all else, practically. The newspapers could give but little space to the "snake" in the bill and certainly had none to make a campaign against its passage.

"It was under these circumstances that the first of the election bills went sliding through the Legislature, and then the people awoke to find that the bill was intended not only to disfranchise the black voter but such white voters as 'the man at the window' looked not kindly upon.

"As is well known, this bill seeks to disfranchise the negro by means of an educational test and the 'grandfather clause.' The educational test lies in the demand that the would-be voter shall be able to read and explain such portions of the Constitution as may be selected for the test. The 'snake' inserted in the bill lies in the power given the election officials to determine whether the applicant for registration meets the requirement, instead of there being specifically set forth the grounds on which the citizen might be denied the right to register and vote.

"That Governor Warfield will veto this measure is certain, if it come to him. Indeed, he has said that he would and that has raised the contention that a legislative enactment that must be ratified by the people need not be sent to the Governor for his approval. The Attorney General, backed by the ablest lawyers in Maryland, declares that the bill must go to the Governor. In this connection it must be remembered that the Democrats have the necessary three fifths in each House to pass the bill over the veto.

"The second move in this carefully planned onslaught against free elections comes in the form of a bill introduced by State Senator Gorman and it is declared to be as vicious a piece of proposed legislation as was ever introduced in any State. It provides for biennial registration instead of annual registration and distinctly declares that the next one shall take place in 1906. The object, of course, is to prevent, or at least to retard any organized attempt to get as many opponents to the constitutional amendments on the poll books as may defeat the disfranchising proposition.

"The third step in the Gorman campaign lies in the introduction of a bill to amend the election law and deals with the arrangement of the names on the ballot. Under the present law they are now confusing enough for the most educated man to fear making an error that will cause his ballot to be thrown out. Now the names are arranged alphabetically, according to the surname, with the party designation following and then a box in which to make the cross. Each man is to be voted for and if a single cross mark extends over the lines of the box the whole ballot is void.

"To digress for a moment it may be recalled that this arrangement of the ballot was due to a law passed at an extra session of the Legislature for the sole purpose of allowing Gorman to return to the Senate. In several of the lower counties of the State, where the negro had been schooled to distinguish a capital 'R' from all the other letters so that he could vote the Republican ticket, the names of candidates preceding the little box were printed with total disregard for capitalization and all the different fonts of type known to man appeared on the ballot, one name often showing pica, italics, agate, blackface type and even the larger type used in display advertisements. The following will give an idea of these Gorman ballots:

aBRaham AbRENs dEMoCrAT.
MArtIn e cooMbEs SOCIAlisT.
johN w. morTOn rEPubLicaN.

"The new bill proposes to eliminate from the ballot the party designation, so that the voter must not only know the name of every candidate, but also which party he is the candidate of. These names are to be arranged in a vertical line and not more than thirty-six in the column. The proposed changes would certainly disfranchise every illiterate unless he gets help in the marking of the ballot, and that such help for white voters will be provided for there is little doubt.

"The final link in this chain of infamous legislation is to many the most alarming of them all, for it is intended to wipe out all the good that has been accomplished for the maintenance of the purity of the ballot law. It took years to have a bipartisan complement of judges in the election booths. State Senator Greenwall is the father of the new bill, which provides for three judges and registrars of election instead of four, two of whom are to be selected from the majority party.

"This completes the power of the 'man at the window,' and the old 'free and easy' elections, by the passage of all these laws, would again come into being.

"The best posted men of both parties declare that in their opinion this proposed legislation will defeat the negro disfranchisement amendment and that even if it should be successful that at the first election the State will be handed over to the Republicans."

THEY WILL EXPLAIN.

"A communication from Mr. Benj. Kinnamon, president of the board of trustees of the poor, replying to an editorial in this week's UNION on the almshouse question, was received to late for publication It will appear next week."

The above announcement appeared in the Journal of last week, greatly disappointing the readers of that paper for it had been publicly announced by the President of the Trustees of the Poor that everything would be cleared up when his reply appeared in the Journal. He came to town early on Friday morning, and waited for two hours at the office of a certain attorney, and when he arrived they immediately went into consultation, but failed to get the "reply" ready in time to appear in the Journal, which went to press at 5 o'clock in the afternoon. This is very unfortunate, both for the trustees, who no doubt are anxious to explain, and for the people who think they have a right to know the facts in regard to public business, especially when their money is to be spent and their property is being sold, in spite of the assertion of one of the trustees that "this is a Democratic administration, and Republicans are not supposed to know everything that is being done." (This probably refers to preachers and editors also.) It is unfortunate because, in the absence of any information from the trustees, other questions besides those asked last week are agitating the minds of the people.

How much timber is included in the deal spoken of last week? What was the price? We are informed that there is not less than 100 acres of it, some of it as fine as can be found in the county, and that a saw mill was to have been set up on the tract last week. The price is reported to be $250, or $2 50 per acre; less than the price of a single cord of wood. The President of the board is reported to have said that he did not know anything about the value of timber, and we think his admission will not be doubted. His reply however is expected to be full and complete and is awaited with much interest.

Although the Journal did not have time to prepare Mr. Kinnamon's "reply" for publication, it did find time to announce that much opposition had developed against the bill empowering the trustees to build the new $5,000 almshouse. It was also reported from Annapolis, that (some time on Friday) it had been discovered that the $5,000 almshouse bill was "insufficient for the purpose" and would have to be vetoed, and that a bill authorizing the sale of the whole property would be substituted. Isn't this most remarkable? A bill after passing both braches of the Legislature, is suddenly held up almost beneath the Governor's pen. Did Mr. Goslin see snakes?

A POLICY OF DELAY.

No public measure has been more thoroughly discussed, no action upon any public question has been taken with more open publicity, than the framing and adopting of the good roads law for this county. But in the superior wisdom of Mr. Goslin it is to be delayed for a year or more by being refered to the people. He has taken it upon himself to attach a referending clause entirely against the wishes of the petitioners for the law and to which they are unitedly opposed. The people who desire to keep the roads in politics are opposed to the new measure. As a gentleman who did some energetic canvasing against the bill remarked "It is one of the greatest levers we have for the election of the Democratic ticket." The people's interests are only a secondary matter compared to the interests of the Democratic party in this gentleman's opinion, and thus it goes all through the opposition. Their petition opposing the bill contained something over 400 names, 138 of which do not appear on the tax books, showing that they do not contribute a dollar for the maintenance of the roads, and yet Mr. Goslin proposes to let them say at the polls whether or not Caroline county shall have a good roads law. Taking the total assessment of property shown by the petition of those opposed to the measure, and comparing it with the assessments of property owners in three districts only, who signed petitions in favor of the measure, and it is found that those in favor of the new law represent over a half million dollars worth of property ($800.000) more than all those opposed to it. The opposition however is political, and in order to keep the roads in politics and have the county drag along in the same old ruts, and true to the Democratic principle of opposition another bill has been prepared, and both will be offered in the Legislature and refered to the people. Of course this means delay. But Democrats are never more happy than when they can obstruct or delay important matters of any sort, and, if, when the order for the final judgment is promulgated it should fall into Democratic hands, old St. Peter will fiind it returned with a referendum attached.

Stole Tomatoes.

Lydia Hall, colored, of Wilmington, Del., was held in $50 bail for the upper court on a charge of stealing a can of tomatoes valued at 7 cents from a grocery store. It will cost the county several hundred dollars to try the case by the woman being held for court.

The System Must Be Abolished.

Mr. Editor:

Not only are the children who attend the public and High School of the present day forced into excessively long hours of hard study, and given the least possible time for mind rest or healthful open air recreation, but are forced into studies THREE and FOUR YEARS BEYOND THEIR AGES. The scholars are sent home with a satchel full of books, pardon the expression, nearly as many as they can wriggle along with, with the mandate to do the work themselves and NOT PERMIT ANY ONE TO ASSIST THEM. This order was given by one of the teachers(?) in our High School last week. I ask in all reason is there any SENSE in such a method?

What are these teachers(?) paid for if not to instruct and give their assistance to the scholars for their betterment?

Not so long ago a student at the High School was compelled to leave the school because of this diabolical system, engendered by a clique of autocratic fanatics.

It is not difficult for a person endowed with ordinary intelligence to see where we are drifting, under the present system of rigorous overstudy.

Let me ask you to don your thinking cap and give a few minutes of unprejudiced consideration to the following pertinent interrogations:

Why do so many scholars, large and small, wear spectacles and nose-glasses?

Why do so many children suffer from nervous headache, especially upon returning from school?

Why has immorality so greatly increased within the past ten years, even in children so young as twelve years?

Why has the number of suicides so alarmingly increased within the last ten years?

What has caused the increase in the number of inmates of the insane asylums? Why so many murders committed in moments of temporary mental aberation?

Did you ever hear or read of a "bunco steerer," a "confidence man or woman" or a general "sharper" who was an illiterate?

Why have crimes committed in the heat of passion so greatly increased?

What has produced so many thieves, embezzlers, absconders and —grafters?

Give these questions thorough and unprejudiced consideration, and you will say with me, that this diabolical system of rigorous overstudy must be abolished.
