THE largest insurance policy ever taken out by one person was written in New York a short time ago to James C. Colgate, banker and financier. It was issued by the Mutual Life and was for $1,500,000. Geo W. Vanderbilt also carries a million in the same company.

THE State tax rate has been raised 5 cents on the 100 by the recent acts of the Democratic legislature and now we understand that debts are accumulating to such an extent under the management of the Democratic County Commissioners, that it will be necessary to increase the county rate also.

SENATOR BURTON, of Kansas, who has been convicted upon the charge of using his influence with the Postoffice Department for a fake grain securities company of St. Louis, and having received pay from the company for his services, has been sentenced to jail for six months and to pay a fine of $2,500. In passing sentence upon Burton, Judge Adams was very severe and cutting in his language.

THE Legislature made a number of changes in the election law, but so many changes and amendments were made that it is impossible to tell exactly what has been done. It is reported that Caroline is included in the list of counties in which the tickets are to be printed without the party designation after the name of the candidates. Caroline, is a close county and the Democrats, of course expect to win by this trick When the bill was in the Senate, Senator Roe had Caroline exempted, the same as Baltimore City and a number of the other counties, but it is reported that when the bill was finally passed Caroline was in the list.

"Taxpayer" in last week's UNION cites us to a mistake in our statement regarding the price of wood as it stands in the woods. Admitting that his figures are right and that a cord of wood on the stump costs 50 cents and that it costs 50 cents more to cut it, it will bring $3 in the market or $2 for hauling and net profit. Assuming that it costs $1 to deliver it and we still have a profit of $1, and the profits from three cords would more than make up the price per acre that the Trustees of the Poor are reported to have sold 100 acres of timber for. The President of the Board has published a long letter of explanation in which he admits that the timber has been sold, but he scrupulously avoids telling anything about the deal or the price. The County Commissioners should investigate this matter. Two members of that board are practical and experienced timber men, and their judgment should be as good as can be secured in the county. They are the guardians of the people's interests, and no matter if the deal was made innocently and in good faith, the county's property should not be sacrificed. In the absence of any information from the trustees, competent business men are of the opinion that the reported price, ($250) is considerably less than the timber is worth.

NEWS OF THE WORLD'S FAIR.

Special Correspondence.

ST. LOUIS, MO., APR. 11, 1904.

Visitors at the World's Fair will see in the Government Building, a large model of the Congressional Library at Washington. Standing near the Capitol, it is almost as imposing as that vast structure itself, and as a show feature the Library Building attracts almost as much attention as does the splendid Capitol itself. There is shown a book stack, the machinery by which books are handled, and the way in which they are carried through tunnels to and from the United States Capitol. The artistic interior will be reproduced in colors. The ornate reading room, the splendidly frescoed corridors, the Senate Reading Room, the House Reading Room, and several of the other more notable rooms will be made so as to show the effect of the frescoes, columns, stained glass, and other accessories which combine to make this one of the most magnificent buildings in the world. There will be a large collection of photographs, rare volumes, etc., exhibited in addition to this.

From papier mache a model has been made of the Stegosaurus, or armored lizard, which scientists claim roamed about the wilds of of Wyoming more than 9,000,000 years ago. This prehistoric monster will be exhibited at the World's Fair in the United States Government Museum. As restored the animal or reptile, whichever it be, stands fourteen feet high and is twenty feet long. It has taken its form partly from the lizard and partly from the turtle. At the center of its back is a large hump supported by a pair of legs about the size of those of an elephant. The front legs are much shorter. On the ridge of the back is a double row of horns like plates. The powerful tail is ten feet long and tapers to a point. Its head is almost two feet long and it has a beak like that of the turtle. The weight of the original is supposed to have been about four tons and the Stegosaurus is believed to have been the largest living being of his time, though by no means the most formidable. His tail appears to have been his only weapon. Wonder has been expressed at the small size of the animal's head, but scientists claim that half the animal's brain was located between the thigh bones. The model of the freak was made at Milwaukee under the direction of Frederic A. Lucas, Curator of the Division of Comparative Anatomy, of the United States National Museum, Washington, D. C.

Ursuline Convent, at New Orleans, mother house of the Catholic order in the United States, has sent to the World's Fair a large and comprehensive exhibit of the work of its young lady pupils. It is a part of the Louisiana exhibit installed in the Palace of Education, under the direction of Prof. Brown Ayres, of Tulane University. Paintings, drawings, embroidery and various specimens of needlework, all executed by students of the convent, are included as is also some valuable historic documents belonging to the Ursuline sisters. The Mother Superior at New Orleans has the original petition from the French people of Louisiana to the King of France asking that a branch of the order be established in this country. The convent archives also contain letters written by Jefferson and Madison. Louisiana's educational exhibit contains many other interesting features, including an exhibit from Tulane University and another from the city schools of New Orleans. The State University at Baton Rouge, the Industrial Institute at Lafayette, and many private schools have contributed exhibits and they have been given a prominent place in the great Palace of Education.

The most pretentious breeding-poultry show ever held is that in the Model Poultry Farm at the World's Fair. The farm is attractive as well as educational. In model houses equipped with the latest modern improvements are shown thoroughbred domestic fowls of every known variety, including water fowls, pheasants and pigeons. The latest methods of breeding are exemplified. In the main pavilion are forty incubators where chicks and ducklings are hatched daily. The young birds are advanced through indoor and outdoor brooders and colony pens, being moved ahead one pen a day until they are ready for the table. A restaurant is run in conjunction with the farm in which no meats except poultry and poultry products are served. Pigeon racing is a feature of the farm. A model loft has been provided for the training and racing of homing pigeons. Races from twenty-five to three hundred miles are flown from time to time. Entries of two birds each are accepted from fanciers. The birds must be 1904 hatch that have never been outside of the home loft. Suitable prizes are awarded in these races. Some of the finest game cocks in the country will be exhibited, a cocking main being provided for that purpose. An attraction for the children are the sixteen pens of the smallest variety of bantams. These pigmy chickens only weigh about one and a-quarter pounds each. A variety of Belgium hares and rabbits are to be shown.

PAID FOR MAYFLOWER TRIPS.

Secretary Moody's letter to the House Naval Affairs Committee, stating that the President never has used the Mayflower without paying all of the expenses involved from his private purse, has removed much of the mystery with which the yacht has been surrounded. Until the publication of this letter it was supposed that all of the cost of the President's use of the ship was charged up to the Government and paid from the naval contingent fund.

In his letter to the House Committee Secretary Moody said the President had been aboard the Mayflower less than forty hours altogether, and had traveled ninety-four miles. The time spent on board the ship by members of the President's family and guests is given as one week and the distance traveled, four hundred and ten miles. The President has given some expensive entertainments on the yacht, among which was the luncheon to the fleet commanders and the foreign naval attaches at Oyster Bay last summer. Lieutenant Commander Gleaves said:

"Every time the President or any member of his family and guests have been aboard the Mayflower Mr. Roosevelt paid for every item of expense from his own pocket, although in all but two instances he was on board in his official capacity. He has been most particular in paying for every little detail. He not only paid for all of the refreshments that were served, but for the washing of the table linen.

"After each of his visits the steward hands me a bill for everything used by the President and his party. I send the bill to the President, and he sends me his personal check for the amount."
