Mr. Goslin was chairman of the meeting and Mr. J. Frank Lednum was secretary.

THE UNJUST MARYLAND BALLOT LAW.

Maryland Democrats are building great hopes of success at the next election on the new law abolishing party designations on the ballot in Republican counties. This was one of the shameless partisan laws passed by the recent Legislature. It only applies to eleven counties in the State, and these are not all contiguous. The illiteracy in some of the exempted counties is much greater than in some of those to which the law applies; but these exempted counties are Democratic, which was the only reason for relieving them from the law.

In Howard county, for instance, which is the home county of Senator Gorman and Governor Warfield, there is a much larger illiterate vote than in Garrett and some other counties to which the law applies. But Howard is exempt because it is safely Democratic. In the last census year there were $6,000 illiterate white voters in the State, and only 24,000 illiterate white voters. But this new act is made to apply to 13,000 colored voters and only to about 5000 white voters, and they are in Republican counties. This law applies an educational test to voters living in a few counties only, all of the remainder of the State being exempt.

In the State in general there is a party designation on the ballot, so that an illiterate man can easily be taught to vote his party ticket. In the eleven counties to which the new law applies no party designations are permitted, and each name on the ballot for which the voter desires to vote must be separately marked. As these names are all mixed up and are not in the same order on each ballot, the voter must be able to read them all and to remember which party each name represents. With a large ticket this will be difficult for even an educated voter.

If the law applied to every county in the State, so that all were treated alike, there would be less objection to it. But to apply it to a few counties only, with the avowed purpose of disfranchising Republicans and not Democrats, is disgraceful.

By this means it is expected that the new constitutional amendment disfranchising colored men will be adopted. It ought not to be possible for any State to apply a law of this kind to a few counties only; but in the Southern States all sorts of unjust acts have been passed and carried into effect for partisan ends. —Philadelphia Press.
