National Magazine For June.

Besides its high class literary features, the National Magazine for June treats in text and pictures of the three great news interests of the time—the World's Fair at St. Louis, the war in the Far East, and the national political campaign. Edmund S. Hoch, assistant to the chief of exhibits, gives an authoritative account of the principal exhibit features of the Exposition. The political article of the number is "The Semi-centennial of the Republican Party," a historical sketch by Charles M. Harvey, associate editor of the Globe-Democrat of St. Louis.

William Hemstreet, in "A Fugitive Sovereignty," propounds some pointed questions concerning the future of Cuba—probably as a State of the American Union. He declares Cuba is a republic in name only and predicts trouble there.

The second paper by Michael A. Lane, in his "New Dawns of Knowledge," deals with "Minds," under which heading he discusses the new psychology in simple, understandable terms.

Mary Caroline Crawford tells the story of "The Boston Athenæum," the heart of Old Boston, and gives some new sidelights on the famous authors who have frequented its historic chambers.

Dr. Poultney Bigelow concludes his series of articles on Modern Germany with a vigorous paper on "Modern German Leaders," viewed from the democratic American standpoint.

Dallas Lore Sharp, the naturalist, writes a fine tribute to "Chickadee"—one of his very best nature stories.

The National's "Home" department grows in interest and variety each month.

The story tellers of the number are Carrie Hunt Latta Emily Hewitt Leland, Hugh A. C. Walker, Grace McGowan Cooke, Frank H. Sweet and Cara Howard Crandon.

The editor tells the story of his personally-conducted tour of Jamaica with ten prize-winning subscribers, and Bennett Chapple writes of "The National Magazine's House warming in Its New Plant."

Katherine Lee Bates, Yone Noguchi, James Ball Naylor, Anna H. Frost, "Ironquill," and Lou Lawrence write the poetry.

Most Persons Right Footed.

"Did you ever notice that people are right footed?" asked the proprietor of a shoe store. "Watch my clerks, and you will see that invariably customers will put out their right foot when going to be fitted. Now, watch that corpulent woman going to sit down over there."

The woman with great weight of body took a seat, lifted her curtain of black veiling, and as the clerk approached her she poked her right foot from beneath an expanse of skirt.

"It's always the case, and I don't believe I ever knew it to fail. The shoe manufacturers are evidently wise to this fact, as in the cartons the right shoe is always packed on top. Once I had a lot of shoes come to me with the left on top, and it caused me so much annoyance that I wrote to the manufacturer, calling his attention to the matter so that it wouldn't happen again. The majority of people are right handed, yet a left-handed person has the right-foot habit. The right hand is larger than the left, as it is used more, and consequently develops the muscles to a greater extent. On the other hand, the left foot is larger than the right in most persons. The difference is so slight that we seldom have trouble in fitting shoes, however. It is the left shoe that wears out before the right, and probably for this reason."—Baltimore American.

BALTIMORE'S MAYOR DEAD.

Commits Suicide in His Room After Joking With His Wife.

Robert M. McLane, Mayor of Baltimore, and who on May 14 last was married to Mrs. Mary Van Bibber, after a courtship of years, committed suicide at 3.15 o'clock Monday afternoon in the home of his bride. He placed a 38-caliber pistol to his right temple, the bullet coming out behind the left ear.

Mayor McLane died at 4.55 without regaining consciousness. No motive for the act can even be guessed by the dead man's most intimate friends. Three minutes before the shot was fired the Mayor and Mrs. McLane were laughing and chatting together. Finally his Honor said:

"Well, I can't be joking here with you all day. I am going to pack up those books." And he left the room laughing at some rejoinder of his wife.

A minute later the pistol shot rang out. Mrs. McLane and her maid ran to the door of the Mayor's room, which was closed, but not locked. The women pushed the door open and saw the Mayor on the floor in a crouching position, his hand closed over a white-handled pistol. Mrs. McLane gave the alarm and all near by physicians were summoned. Messages were hurried to Mr. McLane's family and the first to reach him was his father, James L. McLane.

On behalf of the six physicians called on the case, Dr. A. Trego Shertzer made the following formal statement of the tragedy:

"It was about 3 15 o'clock this afternoon when Mrs. McLane's second son, Jack, and one of the white maids employed in the McLane house came for me and said that Mr. McLane had shot himself and that Mrs. McLane wished me to come immediately. I found the Mayor in his bedroom—the third story back. He was doubled up in a heap on the floor in front of a long mirror. He was fully dressed. The Mayor's head appeared to be doubled up under his right arm. Near him was the pistol, a five-barreled affair with one chamber discharged. I would say without having had time to examine the revolver minutely that it was about a 38-caliber. The ball was of sufficient size to mean destruction to what it struck. The Mayor's head was surrounded by a pool of blood. I straightened him out and secured pillows from the bed and placed them under his head. He was unconscious and never spoke up to the time he died, at 4.45 p. m.

"I had the servant bring a basin of water and I washed the Mayor's head and wiped up the blood near him. Mrs. McLane, who was dreadfully distressed, but bore up with wonderful fortitude, asked me eagerly what the chances were. I replied: 'There is no hope in the world for him, but send for all the doctors in the neighborhood.' When I arrived at the house I know of no one being there except the Mayor, Mrs. McLane, her son Jack and the maid I mentioned. When I told Mrs. McLane to send for the other physicians, she despatched the girl and the boy for them. I realized from the first that all the medical science in the world could not save the Mayor, or even prolong his life, but I considered it my duty to do everything possible for the family."

Coroner Hayden rendered a verdict of suicide.

Numerous Items That will Interest You No Doubt

June 9, 16, 23 and 30 are the next dates for great coach excursions to St. Louis via Pennsylvania Railroad, on account of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition. The rates for these excursions have been fixed at such a low figure that they afford those of limited means an opportunity to see the World's Fair at an exceptionally small cost. The unusual success attending the first Pennsylvania Railroad excursion indicates that these will be very popular.

Special trains of standard Pennsylvania Railroad coaches of the most modern pattern will be run on the above-mentioned dates from New York, Philadelphia, Harrisburg, Altoona, and Pittsburg, directly through to St. Louis, with ample stops for meals at convenient hours. Each train will be in charge of a Tourist Agent of the Pennsylvania Railroad. The rates will be the same as for the first excursion, May 10, $20 from New York, $18.50 from Philadelphia, and proportionate rates from other stations.

Specific information regarding time of special train and connections, and rates from principal stations east of Pittsburg, will be announced shortly.

The Cat Nuisance.

A man living in the eastern part of town says he is greatly annoyed by cats, although he is not fortunate enough to have one of his own. He says strange felines appear to delight in visiting his premises and they fight and make various kinds of noises on his roof and in his yard.
