A CHANGE WOULD DESTROY CONFIDFNCE

For want of a real issue to present to the people, the Democratic leaders are forced to take up questions of minor importance, and base their arguments for a change of administration on such of them that are not at all likely to be generally understood, or at least not carefully studied, by voters.

One of these questions is the charge of great extravagance in the administration of the finances of the Government by the party in power. Comparisons are made with former administrations by both parties, and we are told how many millions more are now expended than ever before. This charge was made by the Democratic candidate at a reception given to the editors of Democratic journals at Esopus on Thursday last.

This sort of statement is likely to attract attention because extravagance in the Government is like waste in a family, and is something that anybody can understand; but, what appears to be extravagant may be, and often is, a wise use of money.

Economy is an excellent thing to practice, but there is such a thing as injudicious economy. Our Democratic friends, however, cannot be justly charged with either.

A liberal or even lavish use of money is very often commendable and wise. Every producer, whether manufacturer or farmer, knows that it is bad policy to restrict operations in his own line by holding the purse strings too tightly, and in Government affairs the same holds good.

Extravagance is a relative term as applied to finances of a nation, and means one of two things, either that the money of the country is expended without receiving value for it, or that it so used as to be wasted or stolen. The latter condition is one that is adopted as correct by the party not in power, because it is the easiest charge to make, and the hardest to disprove. The men of that party are not in the habit of taking broad views of of any subject, and when out of power tell how careful they will be with the people's money.

In making comparisons they neglect to compare conditions, but simply look at the aggregate amount of money expended. They do not admit that a country of some eighty millions of people costs more to run than when it had only sixty. They ignore the fact that the greater the expenditures of the Government for value received, in the way of improvements, the greater the amount of money that circulates throughout the land and the greater the benefit to the people.

If the Democrats elect their candidate, and he should be able to practice the economy that he preaches, the effect would be instantaneous and lasting. It would put an end for awhile to everything in the way of improvement. The capitalist would shut up his strong box, the banker refuse to advance money for discounts, and call in his loans. The manufacturer would build no addition to his mills, put in no new machinery and would reduce his production to the minimum. The merchant would restrict his credits, and the farmer not having ready money of his own to move his crops, would be compelled to sell his products for what they would bring in a time of reduced demand.

It is estimated that nearly eighty per cent. of the agricultural products of this country are consumed at home. During the period commencing with 1892 and running for two or three years many of our farmers used their corn for fuel, fed their potatoes to their hogs, and then sold them for less than their food cost in less "economical" times; buried their cabbages because they would not bring enough to pay to haul them to the railroad station.

During the "extravagant" Republican administration that followed that period, such a state of things did not exist; the farmer, dairyman and stock raiser found a ready market for all their products, because the manufacturer, merchant and mechanics had money enough or could get enough from the banks for their purposes, and could do this because the banks and financiers had confidence in their Government's management of its finances.

A change of administration would destroy this confidence, whether justly or not, and that would affect every interest and every individual in the land disastrously, at least for a long time.

THE TRUSTS AND PARKER.

That Judge Parker owes his nomination as the Democratic candidate for the Presidency to certain powerful financial interests in Wall street is a matter of record. The chief promoter of his candidacy was August Belmont. On April 15, three days before the assembling of the New York Democratic State Convention, which instructed a delegation to the National Convention to vote as a unit for him. Judge Parker paid a visit to New York City. The object of that visit, and what occurred at the conferences which attended it, were set forth fully and frankly in the New York Times, an ardent Parker supporter, on the following day. Appended is an extract from its report:

"Judge Alton B. Parker spent several hours in this city yesterday in consultation with William F. Sheehan and others, discussing principally the draft of the platform which has been prepared by ex-Senator David B. Hill for adoption at next Monday's Democratic State convention.

"Judge Parker, Mr Sheehan and August Belmont lunched together, and late in the afternoon Judge Parker, accompanied by Mr. Sheehan, left for his home at Esopus, where he will remain until after the State convention. Mr. Sheehan will remain at Judge Parker's home until sometime to-day, when he will go to Albany to take the approved draft of the platform back to Senator Hill.

* * *

"As it stands the platform is understood to have the full approval of Judge Parker, all the propositions advanced by Senator Hill as being likely to attract the radical vote having been eliminated at the wish of the prospective candidate for the Presidency.

* * *

"The platform which has been approved, and which will be presented to the convention on Monday, is understood to be drawn on ultra-consertive lines, and to avoid all references to the rocks on which the party split in the last two national campaigns.'.

The fourth plank of the platform thus approved and subsequently adopted by the convention, reads as follows:

"Corporations chartered by the State must be subject to just regulation by the State in the interest of the people."

There is no mistaking the meaning of that declaration. It abolishes national control of trusts and all similiar combinations. If embodied in law it would compel the repeal of the statue under which the Northern Securities suit was brought and won by President Roosevelt. It is absurd to suppose that Judge Parker, who is nothing if not an able and experienced lawyer, could have read and approved this declaration without fully comprehending its meaning. It is equally absurd to suppose that David B. Hill and Mr. Belmont were not fully aware of its intent, and of its effect in operation were it to become a law. No question that was to come before the New York convention was calculated to command more careful consideration from Judge Parker and his friends in this conference than that of trusts. Nobody knew better than they that the only reason for taking the Democaatic nominee for the Presidency from the State of New York was that President Roosevelt had incurred the bitter hostility of Wall street because of his uncompromising conduct in enforcing the law against the trusts. The Democratic hope rested solely upon finding a candidate who would be acceptable to the trusts, and who would not only get their votes, but their money in the campaign .Judge Parker knew this, and Mr. Belmont knew it. The only safe course was to put in a declaration favorable to the trusts, and this was done.

IN accepting the Democratic nomination for Congress on Monday evening at his home at Ridgely, Mr. Smith embraced the opportunity to make a lengthy speech upon what he considers the issues in this campaign. He charges the Republicans with seeking to increase the powers of Federal officials, and cites the actions of the President in the Panama canal case. He also claims that the race question is an issue in this campaign, brought about by the Republican party and the actions of President Roosevelt in trying to place the negro on a social equality with the Anglo-Saxon race.

Mr. Smith also took occasion to refer to what he calls "The lavish expenditure of money" in the campaigns on the Eastern Shore.

The issues taken up by Mr. Smith have all been threshed over time and time again, and months and months ago, and with the exception of a few politicians, the people are unusually well satisfied with the present state of affairs. The Panama canal incident is settled; the Democrats have settled the race question in Maryland, and as far as the high prices the people are compelled to pay for provisions &c, mentioned by Mr. Smith, and which he admits extends also to the farmers crop and other produce which the people have to sell, there seems little hope for argument on that point, for surely no one desires to go back to the days of 25 cent corn and 50 cent wheat.

The last question which Mr. Smith thinks is an issue in this campaign "The lavish expenditure of money"—is also an old one, and it is sufficient to say that the record of Mr. Smith and his party regarding it, is well known to the people.

"THE Filipinos should have liberty and self-government. They are oppressed. They are not allowed to vote, or have a say in their Government."—John Sharp Williams.

In the congressional district in Mississipi from which Williams comes there are some 190,000 of population, yet out of this number only 1463 persons are allowed to vote.

THE Japanese have re-inforced their army and are attempting to crush the army of Kuropatkin near Mukden. The Czar has ordered a second army into the field but it cannot reach the scene of action for sometime. The Japanese are reported to have captured the water supply of Port Arthur and it seems impossible that the garrison there should be able to hold out much longer. Neither side displays any intention of giving up the struggle and may settle down to quite a lengthy war yet. The Russians propose to put 700,000 men in the field, and it is known the Japanese are enlarging their army also.

JUDGE GRAY, of Delaware, who has just rendered his decision in the dispute among the coal miners, was invited on Monday to preside at the meeting of the International Peace Association which meets in Boston next Tuesday. He was compelled to decline on account of Court duties. Judge Gray states he is thoroughly in accord with the desire of President Roosevelt to have the Hague Peace Conference reconvened, and believes the people will be pleased to have the President put the United States in the lead by being the first to propose to the powers that such a step be taken.
