Rev. Leonard White, pastor of Fairlee Methodist Church, has been appointed assistant to Rev. John M. Arters, in the work of the Anti-Saloon League in Delaware.

John M. Kane, of Harford county, has been awarded $800 in his suit against the Western Union Telegraph Company, for injuries received by a pole falling on him near Havre de Grace.

LaGrippe pains that prevade the entire system, LaGrippe cough that racks and strains, are quickly cured by Foley's Honey and Tar. Is mildly laxative, safe and certain in results. C. H Redden, Denton, Md.

In 1909 but eighty-nine arrests were made in Milford, according to statistics compiled by the town clerk. Of these thirty-four were for drunkenness.

Four 8½-month-old hogs slaughtered by William Dunsmore, of Rising Sun, dressed 1,130 pounds, heaviest for that age ever killed in that section.

The tower of the hall of Good Will Fire Company, of New Castle, is being strengthened to sustain the weight of the new fire bell which will arrive in a few days.

Attempting to come down a stairway in a boarding house which was strange to him, James Freidel, of near Seaford, fell and sustained an ugly wound about the foce. He had been attending court at Georgetown and rose early in order to catch the early train going north. The fall was caused by a misstep in the dark hallway.

The girl who can put a good, square patch on a pair of pantaloons or command a regiment of pots and kettles, may not, in the eyes of ten per cent. aristocracy, seem as accomplished as the girl who can embroider and work a worsted dog on a blue ground or hum the "Sweet Bye and Bye," but the working girl in every day battles of life, is worth a ten acre field full of the other kind.

The high price of food has no terror for Lewes residents as long as the present crop of "razor blades" continues. These shell fish, named for their resemblance on the flats along the Delaware Bay. It is no uncommon thing for a boy to pich out a bushel of these bivalves in less than an hour. They resemble oysters in taste and many who can afford meat eat the "blades" in preference.

Halley's comet has been seen here near the planet Mars. It is so far away that it is very dim, but will get nearer and brighter all the time. It will be seen in the west every clear evening until about the 20th of March. Then it appears in the east about daybreak. Then again in the west about May 20, when it is largest and brightest. It will be a wonderful sight to the people of this world. —Easton Star.

Edward Hubbard, in the 85th year of his age, died at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. H. E. Aldrich, at 8 o'clock Sunday morning, Feb. 6, after an illness of about one week of pleuro-pneumonia. Mr. Hubbard was born July 5, 1825, near Federalsburg, Caroline county, and for years was a resident of Wyoming, Del. He had made his home in Easton for the past year and a-half. He is survived by three children, Thomas D. Hubbard, of Easton; Mrs. T. O. Clements, of Dover, Del., and Mrs. H. E. Aldrich.

Steamboat Pays Ten Per Cent.

The Philadelphia and Frederica Navigation Company, at its annual meeting elected Wm. E. Davis, president; John W. Townsend, secretary; James T. Postles, treasurer; John S. Reynolds, Leander S. Hopkins, Charles Postles and Joseph Bennett, directors.

The steamer Frederica, which is owned by this company, made eighty-seven trips during last year and carried without accident 6,975 passengers or 1,100 in excess of the previous year.

WON'T NEED A CRUTCH.

When editor J. P. Sossman, of Cornelius N. C., bruised his leg badly, it started an ugly sore. Many salves and ointments proved worth less. Then Bucklen's Arnica Salve healed it thoroughly. Nothing is so prompt and sure for ulcers, Boils, Burns, Bruises, Cuts, Corns, Sores, Pimples, Eczema or Piles. 25c at C. H. Redden's, Denton, A. L. Duffy, Hillsboro, Md.

Teach the Children to Save Money.

It is often and truthfully said that a penny saved is a penny made. The foundation of many of the greatest fortunes was begun by saving a penny. The habit of saving is one of the best that can be formed. Every child should be taught to save something every week. The satisfaction of counting these pennies when the bank is emptied is one of the pleasures that we never forget; every one of us can remember the thrill of joy when we emptied the contents of the bank on the table and counted and recounted this mountain of wealth; how eager we were to tell our little friends the amount of our great fortune, and raced with them in refilling the bank.

To bring this pleasure within the reach of every child and help the forming of the penny-saving habit, Messrs. Scott & Bowne, 409 Pearl Street, New York, the manufacturers of Scott's Emulsion, are offering to send to any address, for 10 cents, a beautiful little Savings Bank; each bank contains a new Good Luck Penny. Send 10 cents and get one.

You'll feel better after taking De Witt's Little Early Risers, the safe, sure, pleasant, gentle little liver pills. If you would be sure of good results insist on DeWitt's Carbolized Witch Hazel Salve, the original. It is good for big cuts or little ones small scratches or bruises or big ones, but it is especially good for piles. Sold by A. L. Duffy Denton Maryland.

The Newspaper.

Of all men the newspaper men who are to select from the world's doings and the community's doings that with which the public is to be made familiar, needs to be wise and judicious, and to lay aside dislikes and clear himself of all malice. If the newspaper which you take is to decide what information concerning the doings, good and bad, in the world and in the community, you and your family are to be made familiar with, have you not alss a duty as to the kind of a newspaper you take—whether it be one that parades and patronizes vice and crime, and sneers at goodness and decency, or one that does the reverse of this? Does it make a difference whether you admit, daily or weekly, to your household, a paper which has regard for truthfulness and fairness, or one which lie and slander at any time to suit its purpose?

To the newspapers are committed great responsibilities, and of it there must be corresponding demand. The responsibility of the paper, of those who make it and give it its character, is great and this responsibility ought to be exercised under the power and guidance of noble principle. But the paper, and they who make it, have not the only responsibility. They who select the paper which they will take and patronize have a responsibility for their selection. He who supports a paper in anyway is responsible in a measure for the character of the paper. This community is responsible for the kind of papers which it encourages and supports; and especially is there a responsibility as to the character of the paper admitted to the home—a responsibility for admitting it. There is no place where a man should more carefully and firmly exercise his moral and christian principle than in the selection of his paper.

More people are taking Foley's Kidney remedy every year. It is considered the most effective remedy for all kidney and bladder troubles that medical science can devise. Foley's Kidney Remedy corrects irregularities, builds up the system, and restores lost vitality. Sold by C. H Redden, Denton,

And Why Not The Parcels Post.

There is one simple and certain remedy for the deficit that the Postoffice Department is showing up with annually, but that remedy Congress has not yet adopted. What is more, there are no present indications that it will interest itself in the matter.

The parcels post—just such a service as foreign governments provide, just such a service as we enter into with them for the exchange of mail, but refuse to give to our own people—would make many millions yearly for the department.

There is no semblance of doubt regarding that statement. Every Postmaster General from the administration of Mr. John Wanamaker, who strongly advocated it, to the present incumbent has known that a parcels post would prove most profitoble. There is not an intelligent member of Congress who is not aware of the fact.

That being the conceded case, why does not Congress hasten to the relief of the department and at the same time grant the people of the United States a reform in postal matters that all Postmasters General indorse and that every ordinary citizen believes in and desired?

Must we say it? Must we acknowledge that the influence of the express companies is greater than that of the public?

And because of this influence of companies that are rolling in wealth, that are "cutting melons" right along and actually burdening their stockholders with rapidly accumulating profits, must the citizens of this great country be denied the privilege that other enlightened governments extend? Must the Postoffiice Department continue to be made to do business at a loss?

The postal savings bank are important, and we would have had them long before this butfor the antagonism of certain banking interests. Apparently, we are about to have them in spite of the constitutional lawyers of the Senate, who find something to carp over in every progressive measure that is advanced. But they do not begin to be as important as an up-to-date parcels system, which the bursting-with-wealth express companies deny us.

There is not the slightest use for Congress to dodge this question and make excuses. There are no explanations other than the power of the express companies that really explain why the people of the United States are not permitted to send packages at cheap rates. When they are allowed to mail parcels from city to city or from town to town in this country, such as they can mail to London or Paris or the smallest village of Germany, and at the same rate, then we shall have a postal system that will not only prove profitable to the government, but furnish respectable accommodations for the public.—Phila. Inquirer.

Sare Lungs and Raw Lungs.

"Our children of six and eight years have been since infancy subject to colds and croup. About three years ago I started to use Foley's Honey and Tar, and it has never failed to prevent and cure these troubles. It is the only medicine I can get the children to take without a row." The above from W. C. Ornstein, Green Bay, Wis, duplicates the experience of thousands of other users of Foley's Honey and Tar. C. H Redden, Denton

Why He Lost His Friends.

He was always wounding their feelings, making sarcastic or funny remarks at their expense.

He was cold and reserved in his manner, cranky, gloomy, pessimistic.

He was suspicious of everybody.

He never threw the doors of his heart open wide to people, or took them into his confidence.

He was always ready to receive assistance from his friends, but always too busy or too stingy to assist them in their time of need.

He regarded friendship as a luxury to be enjoyed, instead of an opportunity for service.

He never learned that implicit, generous trust is the very foundation stone of friendship.

He never thought it worth while to spend time in keeping up his friendships.

He did not realize that friendship will not thrive on sentiment alone; that there must be service to nourish it.

He did not know the value of thoughtfulness in little things.

He borrowed money from them.

He never hesitated to sacrifice their reputation for his advantage

He was always saying mean things about them in their absence. —Success Magazine.

Sunday was a record breaker in Methodist revivalism in Georgetown there being forty-two conversations in Wesley M. E. Church in the afternoon and at night. Extra meetings have been in progress for the past four weeks under the leadership of Railroad Evangelist Clark, of Delmar, who has been assisting the pastor, the Rev. L. E. Poole, and there have been recorded fifty-two conversions. At Millsbore extra meetings have been in progress since the first of the year at the M. E. Church, but came to a close Sunday night. The pastor, the Rev. J. H. Gardiner, announces that there have been sixty-six conversions.

A friend asks us to multiply $5 by $5. We do so and announce the result as $25. Now multiply 500 cents, give the answer in cents, pure and simple, not as fractional parts of a dollar. We do and are surprised to see the figures climb up to 250,000 cents, which is $2,500. As $5 and 500 cents are equivalent, the result is puzzling. It cannot be urged that decimal marks should be used. A cent, as such, is as distinct a unit as a dollar, and as the result is to be announced in centsthe decimal cannot be pleaded in extenuation of the rather surprising result. But there is clearly something wrong. Can any reader explain it?

Mr. E. A Kelley, Belvidere, Ill., writes us: "I am an ex-engineer with 22 years active service to my credit. About three years ago my kidneys were affected so that I had to give up my engine. First I was troubled with severe, aching pain over my hips. Then followed inflamation of the bladder, specks appeared before my eyes. A sample of Foley's Kidney pills that I tried so benefited me that I bought more I continued to take them until now II can safely testify they have made me a sound and well man." Sold by C. H. Fire Eats Up Freight Depot.

Fire started at 1.30 o'clock Thursday morning at the west side of the Pennsylvania Railroad depot in the freight department, destroying the entire freight station of the Pennsylvania Railroad and B. C. and A. Railroad Company, at Crisfield, Md.

The alarm was given by Night Policeman, Charles Riggin. The building was in flames when Mr. Riggin discovered the fire. The wharf watch man, only fifteen minutes before, had made his rounds and had discovered nothing wrong.

In the depot at the time were five large empty freight cars. The wharf and warehouse of both the B. C. and A. Railroad and Pennsylvania Railroad were packed with inbound freight, and over twenty-five thousand dollars of out-bound freight was on hand owing to the B. C. and A. steamers not running.

J. D. Collins, night watchman of the Pennsylvania Railroad is missing and foul play is suspected. Citizens suspect that Mr. Collins was murdered and the depot set on fire to cover the crime, and are talking of offering rewards for some clue. The agent of both companies thinks the total loss will exceed one hundred thousand dollars. Thursday morning the Pennsylvania Railroad rushed seventy-five men to the station to clear away the debris.

Edward Collins, a nephew of the aged watchman, and vice-principal of the Crisfield High School, who conducted an investigation of his own on the day before the charred torso was found floating in the water with head, arms and legs cut off, and who, at that time, discovered several pieces of clothing that Watchman Collins wore the night he left home, says that the crime was committed not by oystermen but by persons who had threatened his uncle.

Strenuous efforts have been made by State Fire Marshal Ewell, Detective Burns of Baltimore, and Captain Buckley, of the New York, Philadelphia and Norfolk Railway detective force, together with the assistance of the other railroad detectives, to find clues which will lead to the apprehension and conviction of the guilty parties. Clue after clue has been obtained by the authorities and investigated and run down, with the result that none of them materialized, and so far as the real identity of the parties is concerned, the authorities are at a loss as to who they are. Their whereabouts are unknown, but it is believed that one of the persons is in Baltimore.

ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE NOTES.

"Last year saw the greatest advance ever recorded in the history of the temperance movement. A mere glance at the most important events of general interest is amply sufficient to prove the claim of nine teen hundred and nine to being a banner year for results in anti-liquor warfare.

"During the year which has just passed into history State-wide prohibition became operative in four new States—Alabama, Mississippi, North Carolina and Tennessee; and the Florida legislature voted to sub mit a prohibitory amendment to the people. In addition to this legislation, four other States adopted local option laws and twenty-eight State legislatures passed advanced temperance measures. Nor was this all; more than two hundred counties voted "dry" during the past year in the States of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Kentucky, Michigan, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, South Carolina, Texas, Minnesota, New Mexico, Nebraska, Colorado, Washington, Idaho, Utah, Wyoming, California and Missouri. Thousands of townships and villages, moreover, passed into the no-license ranks, and several hundred cities, ranging from 5,000 to 65,000, for the first time, adopted the no-license policy

"Nineteen hundred and nine was indeed a record-breaking year for reform; but what of nineteen hundred and ten? Several States are ready for State-wide prohibition. Other States are just beginning to vote under the recently enacted local option laws, while still others are making a strong fight for some form of local veto on the liquor question.—American Issue.

President Helps Orphans.

Hundreds of orphans have been helped by the President of the Industrial and Orphan's Home at Macon, Ga., who writes: "We have used Electric Bitters in this Institution for nine years. The Road to the Loving Heart,

Deep in the heart of the forest in Samoa we are told that there is a road made in memory of Robert Louis Stevenson by a number of native chiefs. For some trivial offense these men had been taken prisoners and confined in the wilderness. Their story came to the ears of Mr. Stevenson and he took up their cause before the officials of the island, believing that they were innocent of any wrong intent. In a little while they were set free.

One might suppose that the first thing they would do would be to hasten home, rejoicing in their new found liberty. Rejoice they certainly did, but they did not leave their place of confinement before they set about it to erect a monument to the memory of the man who had been their true friend. How did it happen that they should think of building a road between two almost inaccessible points? We may never know, but it is pleasant to think that this is just what they did; and at one point of the road they set up this inscription on a guideboard, using the name by which they knew Mr. Stevenson:

"Remembering the great love of his highness, Tusitala, and his loving care when we were in prison, we have prepared him an enduring present, this road, which we have dug to last forever."

Whoever journeys that way, and knows this story of the love which led to its building, will feel his heart stirred by the tribute those poor men gave to one who had proven himself a friend to them in an hour of deep need. The signboard they put up will some day fall to pieces, the men who erected it may pass away, but there the road will be, a lasting memorial of the gratitude of the chiefs of Samoa to the man who had loved them.

It is the loving heart which builds roads and sets up memorials of all kinds. Every day you and I are blessed by the kindly deed of some one. It may be just a word spoken when we are feeling unhappy. The kindly deed which brings the sunshine into our sky again may cost more than we at the time know but it may have been done so tenderly and so unobtrusively that we do not fairly recognize it at the time. But some day we may see it in its true worth, and then, how will it stir our souls? Will it lead us to want to do some generous deed, to speak some inspiring word or to go out and love some one else as we have been loved?

Now, not always do we let our lives be thus stirred by the many loving things that are done for us. Would that this were not so true as it is! Not to be grateful is one of the saddest traits of one's character. To keep right on taking things which have been bought for us at the sacrifice of days of patient care and toil; to walk ever among flowers and roses and never stop to kiss the hand which strewed them in our way; to be loved with an everlasting love and not feel the thrill of love going out in return—O, is not this the most bitter thing of all life's experience?

It is not always possible for us to make such return for kindness shown to us as we would like to make. Those island chieftans were not in a position to build a beautiful shaft, tenderly inscribed to the memory of the man who had been a friend to them. They were too poor to give him rich gifts of gold. Possibly they never again might have looked into his face and told him in broken language how they thanked him for his generous act. They did what they could do, however, and some day the beauty of their deed will be known. They could go out and dig and feel the burning heat of toil under a southern sun; they could tear the giant trees out of the path and smooth the hillocks from the way; they could raise that simple tablet, thus voicing the grateful spirit within them: and that was enough, for God, who sees the heart and knows the true cost of all that his creatures do, sees and He will not forget.

What if we cannot give back again as rich gifts as have been showered upon us; can we not smooth a bit of a way for some one whose feet are now traveling over rocks and thorns? Supposing our hands are too weak to swing the pick and labor till the night comes to prove how grateful we are for some friendly deed; we can take the hand of one who has loved us and say, "I love you too." And so the world will be made a little better.

For is it not true that not a single kindly word is ever spoken, not a tender look ever given, not a really true, earnest deed ever done that the hearts of all men are not made a little better, a little stronger, a little truer?

Battles are not all fought out in the glare of the sun, where the world may see and know about them. Grand deeds do not need to be blazoned all over the world to bless those who do them. To dig a road far in the silence of the wood is not less grand, not less an inspired act. God knows all about it and He will remember.—Edgar L. Vincent, in the Classmate.

"OPPORTUNITY."

They do me wrong who say I come no more
When once I knock and fail to find you in;
For every day I stand outside your door,
And bid you wake and rise to fight and win.

Wail not for precious chances passed away,
Weep not for golden ages on the wane;
Each night I burn the records of the day,
At sunrise every soul is born again.

Laugh like a boy at splendors that have sped;
To vanished joys be blind and deaf and dumb;
My judgments seal the dead past with its dead;
But never bind a moment yet to come.

Though deep in mire, wring not your hands and weep,
I lend my arm to all who say "I can."
No shamefaced outcast ever sank so deep
But he might rise and be again a man.

Dost thou behold thy lost youth all aghast?
Dost reel from righteous retribution's blow?
Then turn from blotted archives of the past
And find the future's pages white as snow.

Art thou a mourner? Rouse thee from thy spell!
Art thou a sinner? Sins may be forgiven.
Each morning gives thee wings to flee from hell,
Each night a star to guide thy feet to heaven.

—Robert B. Malone.
