Married Men Go Down Town.

In an article in the June Woman's Home Companion, entitled "The Vanishing Husband," the author presents an interesting study of the inequality that exists between men and women. Following is an extract showing how men will leave the finest homes imaginable and go off by themselves to enjoy each other's society.

"In the community where my friends live the saloon was unknown and man's love of enjoying himself with men undisturbed by the-female-of-the-species was symbolized by a meager and virtuous pool-table at the back of some grocery store. Yet that pool-table was frequented daily by a coterie of law-abiding men, married and other. The men of the town for want of a club gathered themselves together at a barber's or at a fruit store, or, after the day's work was finished, stood in groups at the end of whaves, spitting out to sea and conversing, far away from the unsocial feminine atmosphere. In these various uncomfortable and unsympathetic spots they talked together about politics, the day's catch of fish, the National and American Leagues, business, and all the interests of men.

"Most of these men had comfortable homes—homes with porches where rockers and piazza chairs spread wide arms; yet when, in going through a small town, do you see a group of men socially assembled in such a spot? Yet you may see four or five men gathered, not about one another's hearthstones, but leaning over a pigsty in contemplation of the new pigs, or in the stable-again in a spot where woman, the invader, is not apt to come and spoil the conversation.

"How true this is in the little village where a man's gregariousness finds small outlet, the eloquent and even pathetic signs in any of the stores can testify. Drop down in any rural community, and you will find signs like these: 'Please loaf in the back room'; 'Loafing not appreciated.' Does it refer to the women of the community? Surely not. Women almost never loaf; for women is a solitary, ungregarious creature, undesirous of the presence of her own sex.

"And here you have the true superiority of man. This is his great stronghold; herein lies his Samson-like power. From this root springs the subjection of woman. He is able to, nay, desirous of enjoying himself without the presence of the other sex. Not so may woman enjoy herself without man."

Ex-Senator George L. Wellington is very ill at his home, having sustained a stroke of paralysis. He became ill Monday, and it is understood that his brother, John Wellington, of New Orleans, was sent for as also his daughter, Miss Olga, who is at the Peabody Conservatory, in Baltimore.

While Mr. Wellington is very ill his life is not despaired of at this time, and he may recover.

Ex-Governor Rallies.

The warm weather apparently has had a good effect on ex-Governor Crothers. All day Monday he rested well, and was cheerful and bright most of the day, being delirious but a small portion of the time. His physicians say he is doing as well as can be expected. As his illness is prolonged, he is naturally growing weaker, and he has lost considerable flesh. His appetite is good considering his condition, but not quite so good as last week.

Preston To Issue Bonds.

By a vote of 48 to 24 the citizens of Preston decided at the town election Tuesday, May 7, to bond the town for not more than $7,000 to construct a sewerage system. The sewer will empty into the Linchester River about one mile distant, and, as the country is level and the cost of excavation is comparatively small, it is believed that the cost will not exceed the sum of $6,000. Several property holders obligated themselves to pay all costs in excess of $6,000, and this had a very marked effect on the voting. At the same election the old board of commissioners was elected, namely, Alexander Noble, J. Frank Lednum, N. H. Fooks. G. E. Williamson, and Jesse T. Dennis.

Methodists Still Are Deadlocked.

With the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church scheduled to adjourn on May 28th, more than half of the new Bishops yet are to be elected and the conference must consider several topics, some of which may occasion strenuous debate.

At the Baltimore session, four years ago, it required 19 ballots have to elect eight Bishops. Six ballots have been taken at the present session, and the delegates declare that the record at Baltimore will be broken. But one Bishop has been elected, Dr. Homer C. Stuntz of New York.

With the amusement question settled last week by the retention in the church discipline of the paragraph which prohibits dancing, card playing and theatre-going, it is probable that much of the routine business of the conference will be disposed of hastily.

Conference Nearing Close.

The Methodist Protestant Conference now in session in Baltimore is nearing it close and work to be completed is being rushed along as fast as possible. A proposition to consolidate the two church papers, the Methodist Protestant, of Baltimore and Methodist Record, of Pittsburgh, has been proposed, and is receiving much favorable consideration. If the change should be effected Dr. F. T. Tagg, for the past 20 years the editor of the Methodist Protestant, will probably be made the head of the combined church papers.

Should the consolidation fail however Dr. Tagg will ask to be relieved and the honors will probably go to Rev. Frank T. Benson, of Washington, formerly pastor of the M. P. Church here.

The question of church union with the United Brethren denomination still bobs up almost every day, although the defeat of Dr. Lewis for President of the Conference was on that issue.

Congressman Richmond P. Hobson, the hero of the Merrimac, gave his temperance lecture on "The Great Destroyer" on Monday night, and a trained choir of 300 voices furnished the music.

This afternoon the members of the General Conference will go down the Chesapeake to Annapolis where they will visit the Naval Academy.
