Onions to Kill Disease.

The use of plenty of onions will drive, among other things, contagious diseases out of any city, declared Dr. Mary Walker, who is visiting Chicago friends. Here are Dr. Walker's directions for the use of onions:

"Eat plenty of them, stewed, boiled, fried or raw.

"Keep the fumes of onions continualy permeating the atmosphere.

"Spread onions in the alleys, on the lawn, and any other place where it might appear they would do good."

Dr. Walker said onions were particularly effective against smallpox. The use of the vegetable in at least two cities has proved her contention to be correct, she said.

"Madrid was one of the affected cities," said Dr. Walker. "Some had even made the statement, before the onions were used, that the city would be depopulated by smallpox. The minister plenipotentiary assured me that the spread of the disease had been halted by the use of onions. They were also used in other cities."

Attorney-General Edgar Allan Poe says he has sent to Harry A. Roe, state motor vehicle commissioner, an opinion to the effect that all fines imposed for violation of the automobile laws must go to the state road fund. The attorney general holds that there is no doubt of the right of municipalities to make speed regulations for automobiles, but the fines will have to go the same way—to the state road fund.

In and about Milford there is a rapidly growing sentiment in favor of having a law which will compel all wagons to use nothing less than a tire four inches wide, and also to compel all vehicles to carry lights at night. The first it is argued, will help keep the roads in better shape for use, and the latter will be a safeguard for carriages and their occupants when on the highways at night. Many of the leading farmers favor this progressive measure.

The annual report of the Biological Survey, just made to Secretary of Agriculture James Wilson, contains an interesting review of the muskrat indstry on the Eastern Shore of Maryland. This report says that the muskrat farming of that section has probably reached its highest point of development in America. Muskrat marshes, the Government scientists say, are worth more on the Eastern Shore, measured by their income than are the marshes now used for the same purpose anywhere else in the country.

Peninsula Horticultural Meeting.

Much interest is manifested regarding the address to be delivered by O. H. Benson, of the United States Department of Agriculture, at the convention of the Peninsula Horticultural Society at Wilmington, January 14-17.

"Our culture must be strongly mixed with American Agriculture," says Mr. Bensn. "The true function of a school is to give expression to child-life within its immediate surroundings. There is quite as much education and true learning in the analysis of an ear of corn as in the analysis of a complex sentence; ability to analyze clover and alfalfa roots savors of quite as much culture as does the study of the Latin and Greek roots. Our educational policy should be built from the ground up rather than from the top to the ground. Instead of the exploitations of wars and bloodshed in United States history," continues Mr. Benson, "let us substitute the story of the history of our national agriculture and the captains of our national industries. The religion which ignores the sacredness of God's acres is not efficient and cannot administer to man's true spiritual needs.

"The school exists for the child and the taxpayers and therefore should serve local needs first. Our education for 1913 should conserve equally well the training of the head heart, hands and therefore our truly educated should be four-square. Careful selection of rural school literature has quite as much significance as the careful selection of seed corn, if we hope to get a good crop of lovers of good literature in our rural schools.

"Redirect your rural and village education along agricultural lines and you will turn the tide of American manhood back to the farm, or better still, you will keep the best of rural energy where it is most efficient. Continue the old policy of 'culture sake' education and you will impoverish American manhood as agriculture; a new downfall of Rome will be experienced but this time in America."

Mr. Benson is a thorough believer in a practical agricultural education, for he says: "To be able to recognize a Latin verb at sight but know nothing about the composition of the soil at our feet is evidence of misdirection and ignorance." He believes school books should be localized and that the way to do this is for every state to write and publish its own books. Educational circles will be given a sensation by Mr. Benson's discussion at the convention of the "Education of the American Boy."

Escaped With His Life.

"Twenty-one years ago I faced an awful death," writes, H. B. Martin, Port Harrelson, S. C. "Doctors said I had consumption and the dreadful cough I had looked like it, sure enough. I tried everything, I could hear of, for my cough, and was under the treatment of the best doctor in Georgetown, S. C. for a year, but could get no relief. A friend advised me to try Dr. Kings New Discovery. I did so, and was completely cured. I feel that I owe my life to this great throat and lung cure." CREDITOR TOOK HIS LEAVE

Journalist May or May Not Have Meant Threat, but Visitor Would Not Chance It.

Lespes, the French journalist, known as "Timothee Trimm," was once disagreeably intruded on by a creditor, who announced his intention of not departing until he was paid. The creditor planted himself on a chair, and Lespes beheld him, with consternation, draw bread and cheese from his pockets as though to fortify himself against events. Several hours glided by; Lespes had resumed his writing and finished an article. The creditor showed no signs of moving. Suddenly Lespes rose, and with bits of newspaper began carefully blocking all the apertures through which air could come into the room. He then made preparations for lighting a charcoal fire; but before applying the match, pasted on the wall, just opposite the creditor's eyes, a paper thus laconically worded: "Take notice that we died of our own will." "What are you doing?" exclaimed the creditor, uneasily. "Your society would render life intolerable, so we are going to commit suicide together," answered Timothee, tranquilly. It is needless to say that the creditor decamped.

HER FEELINGS NOT SOOTHED

Butcher Boy Evidently Not One Who Was Quick to See the Error of His Ways.

An amusing telephone story is told of a lady whose name is Brown. One morning recently she proceeded from the breakfast table to the telephone in the hall, to order some things from the butcher.

"Halloa!" said Mrs. Brown. "'Is that Mr. Batty's?"

"Yes."

"Well, this is Mrs. Brown's residence. Will you send me a large, thick steak by four o'clock?"

The boy in the butcher shop happened to answer the telephone, and promptly responded:

"Well, you just bet your sweet life I will."

"Do you know, sir, to whom you are speaking?" indignantly inquired Mrs. Brown.

"Sure I do," said the boy. "You're Jenny, Mrs. Brown's cook.

"You are mistaken, young man. You are speaking to Mrs. Brown herself.'

"Is that so?' replied the boy. "Then in that case, madam, we'll call the bet off."

Moving One's Home.

When a small settler in western Canada decides to move, he very often takes his "shack" with him; you cannot rely upon finding houses just where you want them in a new country, and the cost of transporting materials makes it well worth while going to a little expense to move one's own residence. The houses, of course, are built of wood, and are raised by means of jacks and levers on to low trucks. Poles are then run from the front axle to the rear, in place of the ordinary tongue, and a good team of powerful horses proceeds to haul the dwelling to its new site. Naturally, in moving such cumbersome loads great care has to be taken, but many a cottage has been moved nearly a mile uphill without any damage being done to the structure.—Wide World Magazine.

Nothing But the Truth.

Everything depended upon the testimony of this particular witness, and the lawyer realized the fact.

"Now," he said, shaking his finger warningly, "we want to hear just what you know. Don't tell us what you think, or what you've heard, or what somebody else knows. Do you understand?"

The witness brightened visibly, and showed by his gladsome smile that he understood.

"It was like this, sir," he began. "Old Bill Grubbs said to me that Jim Payne told him he heard Thomas John's wife tell Sid Lewis' girl that her husband was the 'ero of the fight, and that they paved into one another like—"

But then the judge told him to stand down.

"More of the Same."

The common belief is that the Indian child is both stolid and stupid. One traveler, however, when in South Dakota witnessed an incident that speedily disillusionized him upon this point.

A precocious Indian child, two and a half years old, was disagreeably voluble at dinner, so much so that his mother leaned over, and, stuffing a piece of fat meat into his mouth, said: "There, I will stop up that hole now."

As soon as the baby had devoured enough of his mouthful to enable him to articulate, he gasped: "Stop it up again, mother, stop it up again!"—Youth's Companion.

His Beauty Not the Cause.

Fernando de Leyba, who took command of St. Louis on June 14, 1778, wrote:

"I have been received by all the inhabitants with extraordinary signs of rejoicing, which I do not attribute to my beauty, nor to the fact that they were dissatisfied with my predecessor, but only that in the creature they praise the Creator."

It was addressed to the governor general of Louisiana.
