Rev. Charles Smith Arnett, one of the oldest and most widely known ministers of the Maryland Annual Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church, died Tuesday morning at 3.30 o'clock at his home near Baltimore. Political Pot Boiling.

The political pot in Talbot County has commenced to boil and it is expected by the time the primary election comes off it will be at fever heat. As it is the custom of the Democratic Party to take its candidate for Sheriff from the different districts in the county in rotation it creates a lively fight for the position, which is one of the best paying political positions in the county. Consequently there is always a large number of applicants for the nomination. This year the nominee for Sheriff comes from Chapel District, and so far there are six aspirants, viz: Thomas Quinby, Theodore Slaughter, Elmer Andrews John P. Stafford, Charles Coulby and William Walls. A warm fight for the nomination is expected.—Ledger.

A Fifth District Delegation Protests.

A delegation of taxpayers of the Fifth District was before the County Commissioners on Tuesday protesting against the proposition to build three miles of State Aid road from Preston to Grove with concrete or cement. The protest was against building so expensive a road when the State Aid roads so far built in the county have been built of shells.

The State Aid roads so far have all been built of the cheaper material and the claim is made that with the amount of money required for the proposed three miles it would be possible to build a connecting link toward Preston from the end of the State rood at the Bureau.

The County Commissioners will take the matter up at a later meeting after shey have secured an estimate for the concrete road.

Teachers to Meet at Annapolis.

Annapolis has been chosen for the annual meeting of the Maryland State Teachers' Association, and June 24th, 25th, 26th and 27th have been selected as the dates by the executive committee at the State Normal School.

The choice was largely due to the arguments of the Annapolis Board of Trade, helped by the fact that the association has not met there for a number of years, and the belief that many of the teachers living in the more remote sections of the State have never been to the ancient city. It was felt that they should be given an opportunity to see the points of interest with which the place teems and imbibe its historic associations. The association now has nearly 1,000 members.

Prof. J. B. Noble, formerly of Centreville, but now principal of the Cambridge High school, is president of the association.

Remarkable Old Woman.

The most remarkable woman for her age and activity in Sussex County is Catherine Tyndale, colored, who resides near the Old Furnace in Nanticoke Hundred. She is 107 years of age, but unlike most people at that age, does as much work as any of the younger women in the neighborhood. She regularly does the washing of four families, besides helping out when there is any extra work to be done in the neighborhood. She has raised nine children, the oldest twins being now in their 64th year, and the "baby" is just 52, besides helping with 35 grandchildren and 12 great grandchildren. She walks to and from her work daily over two miles, and when extra jobs are scarce she helps out with the farm work at her home. She says she never feels an ache or pain and that she has not employed a doctor for over 50 years, and then it was on account of a badly sprained leg. She was born in Sussex county near her present home. Her Husband died in 1892, aged 85 years.—Seaford News.

Mr. Saulsbury received 28 votes, the twenty-ninth Democratic member, Senator Blackstone being ill at his home. The four Kent county members, Senator Williams and Representatives Houston Cummins and Schneider, whose bolt of the caucus selection had caused a deadlock for a week, with scarcely no announcement of their intended action and much to the surprise of the major part of the crowded gallery, voted for Mr. Saulsbury on the ninth ballot. Mr. Saulsbury's term will commence on March '4 and will end March 4, 1919.

With the election of Mr. Saulsbury the Democratic strength in the United States Senate swings from 48, exactly one half, to 49.

ODD PHILANTHROPY

The failure of a philanthropy that deserved a better fate is involved in one of the biggest real estate transactions ever recorded in Worcester county, the purchase of what is known as the Klei Grange properties consisting of the village of Klei Grange and 5,000 acres of farm and timberland adjoining.

The purchase was made of the heirs of H. A. Drexel, a former New York multi-millionaire, and philanthropist, who bought the property more than a quarter of a century ago and laid it off into building lots and and small farms with a view to establishing a factory village and locating worthy poor, willing to own their own homes and pay for them by working in factories and on the farms.

The village was called Klei Grange after the first letter of the given name of Drexel's four daughters, but is known throughout Worcester county as "The Grange."

To carry out his philanthropic idea Drexel laid out 141 small farms, built a knitting factory and woolen mills and added more than 30 two-story conveniently arranged dwellings to those already on the farms. He also built at the same time a large storehouse, with a town hall above.

Then, that the children of those he colonized might have the advantages of such institutions, he built a school house and church. A clergyman was provided through Drexel's philanthropy for a number of years. Since then the Grange has grown in importance and now has two churches

PENINSULA ITEMS.

Easton has been selected as the next city in which the exhibit of the Peninsula Horticultural Society is to be held. This exhibit was held in Centreville several years ago.

H. B. Clark, of Kenton, sold at public sale recently some surplus cows that he had raised himself. They were fine Holstein cows and 17 of them sold for $1,700, an average of $100 per head. The highest price paid was $174. Mr. Clark has been quite successful in the dairy business and still has a herd of 40 cows.

With simple ceremonies, the body of John Paul Jones, first admiral of the American navy, was on Sunday placed in its final resting place in the new crypt under the Naval Academy chapel at Annapolis, Md. Secretary of the Navy Meyer, French Ambassador Jusserand and Governor Goldsborough were present.

The County Commissioners of Queen Annes county, at their regular weekly meeting purchased a Kelley-Springfild steam roller, to be used in the construction of the Shoemaker roads provided for in the recent $50,000 bond issue. The Kelley Springfield is a 10-ton, 25 horse power standard machine, with three wheels, double cylinder, two speeds, and is recognized as one of the best on the market.

After next July a standard barrel of apples must be 26 inches between the heads, 64 inches in circumference outside measurement around the middle, and the heads must be 17½ in diameter. In accordance with a recent act of Congress, such a barrel, if the apples in it are hand-picked and free from blemishes, may be labeled "standard." But a fine of $1 and costs will be exacted for every barrel that is marked "standard" and does not conform to the requirements.

Some Delawareans are preparing to lay claim to a part of the ownership of the site on which stands Trinity P. E. Church in New York City, which with other property owned by the church, is valued at $20,000,000. Stephen K. Betts, a merchant of Frederica and prothonotary of Kent county from 1891 to 1896, is one of the heirs, claiming a share in the property, and he and other claimants are preparing to prosecute legally, their contention in an effort to get a part of the vast estate.

Pennsylvania Railroad detectives are in Seaford looking for some one who removed a number of switch signal lamps from the track a few nights ago. The trouble occured near the same place where an obstruction was placed on the track several weeks since, and for which two colored men were arrested and placed in jail. It is thought the lights were removed for the purpose of wrecking one of the night trains. One of the lamps was found a distance of 1,400 feet away.

Odd Philanthropy.

under regular appointments from the conference to which they belong. The school is also under the supervision of the Worcester County School Board.

The mills, first operated in 1880, were run for a few years and made the Grange a hustling, business-like town. Owing, however, to a very appreciable decline in the market value of the factory output and the railroad facilities being inadequate, The Grange being located three miles from any railroad, and also to the fact that much of the help incompetent and inconsiderate, the plan as a philanthropy was abandoned and the knitting mill moved to Snow Hill, where it was operated for some years by A. D. Irvin, a former manager for Drexel, who purchased the plant and converted it into the Snow Hill whip factory, and operated by the Luray Manufacturing Co., one of the substantial industries of Snow Hill.

The farm side of the venture proved more of a success than the industrial, and many farms are now owned and operated by descendents of those who at that time settled on the lands—sassafras loam adapted to the raising of almost any crop. On the other hand, those who came as mill operatives have disappeared, and there is not a descendant of these now on the estate.

The purchasers of the estate, being principally interested in the proposition from a timber standpoint, will at once build steam saw mills on diffsections of the property to cut the 25,000,000 feet of pine. Besides the pine timber, there are thousands of feet of oak, gum and hickory on the estate, all of which have a high commercial value.

Delaware To Be Noted For Apples

Delaware, especially Kent and Sussex counties, will be one of the largest apple-producing sections in the United States, within a very few years, it is predicted, while sixty years ago there was hardly an apple tree in the State and no apples grown for market purposes. Not only will Delaware produce many apples, but they will be of the finest quality, a prophecy borne out by the quality that is now being grown by the few farmers who are reaping the cream from the industry by their foresight in planting orchards before the other farmers were awake to their opportunities. The large and extensive orchards of the Sopers, the Richardsons, the Bancrofts, the Derbys, the Townsends, the Harringtons and others are now among the finest orchards in the country, with every modern appliance for cultivating and picking, and with up-to-date packing plants where the fruit is packed in boxes and barrels, and shipments made all over the United States and even to Europe in active competition with the famous fruit of New York, Colorado or Oregon. The next five years will make Delaware famous as an apple State. This is not a prophecy, but a mere statement of facts, based on the actual work that is being done. In almost every section big orchards are being set out, some by individuals, some by companies. Men like Governor Pennewil, Henry Ridgely, of Dover; George Hall, of Milford; Oliver Newton, of Bridgeville; John Townsend, of Selbyville; Orlando Harrison, of Berlin; Andrew Marvel, of Georgetown, and others of equal prominence are enthusiastic over the future of the apple in Delaware, and in every case are backing their opinion by planting large orchards on their land. Since Thanksgiving day one man has planted 4000 trees near Milford, and it is understood that 16,000 more are to be planted before summer. At Bridgeville, Seaford, Georgetown, Dagsboro, Lewes, Selbyville and other towns large corporations have planted big orchards, and that they believe in their project is shown by the fact that they are selling no stock or are not exploiting their orchards, but instead are sitting tight and waiting for the orchards to bear the first crop. The fact that one variety will not bear the same amount of fruit each year has caused most of the orchards to plant many varities, and as a result the nurseries are doing a big business in the sale of trees A few years ago almost every farmer owned a peach orchard in Delaware. In the absence of spraying knowledge the orchards died and the farmers cut the trees down. Today the same land is being planted in apples, although many wise men are also planting peaches in large quantities, foreseeing the profits to be made in that fruit in a few years, when the peach orchards have been cut down. In the Chandler orchards near Milton, 4000 peach trees were planted last year. Once acknowledged as the "peach belt" of the world, Delaware will be known in a few short years as the "apple belt" for with the light sandy soil, with the warm sun and long seasons, apple growing in Delaware is almost as safe as the banking business. Frost blight in apples is unknown in Delaware, for frost is not heavy enough at the time the apples bloom to make any difference to the trees, and for that reason alone Delaware has just a slight advantage over the other apple-producing sections.
