payment of the interest, then due on the debt, on judgment - and that he would agree to let the principle sum remain on the judgment untill he made it convenient to pay the money, this proposition Mr. Bicknell said he thought a fair or reasonable one after this Mr. Bicknell moved the suit to the Court of Appeals.

This Defendant further states that some small error appears to be in the account stated by Mr. Bicknell against this defendant, and that the sum of £13.. 17.. 6. Current money is not due said Bicknell:

That this defendant further said he has a claim against said Bicknell as security to a Bond executed by a certain Richard Hall to said Brice Thomas Beale Worthington for the sum of fifteen pounds Current Money & that a balance of five pounds thirteen shillings and eight pence is now due this defendant, with Interest thereon from the 21st October 1790 which this Defendand holds in bar against the said account exhibited by said Bicknell; so far as the amount of the balance due on bond the over plush or balance of said account exhibited as aforesaid: This Defendant is ready and willing to make payment thereof so far as is just at any time to said complainant - That this defendant further states that as the money due on the said judgement is the right of said Henry Worthington - that no part of the account exhibited by the complainant against the defendant and marked No. 5. ought in equity to be received as any part of the bill of complainant exhibited by said Bicknell, and prays your Honour to dismiss it any part of said Bill.
