Your home newspaper hearlded to the world your birth. It told of your entry into school. Mentioned your birthday party when you were sixteen. Applauded your graduation from the high school, started you to college, and when you returned mentioned the first job you secured. Told of your marriage to the sweetest girl in town and also mentioned the advent (or event) of your firstborn. Told of the visits of Pa and Ma, sympathized with you in your sorrow, laughed with you in your joy, and when you die it will do its best to get you through the pearly gates at only $1 a year.—Warrenton Banner.

Less than 20 season tickets for the Chautauqua are now in the hands of Mr. T. Pliny Fisher, chairman of the ticket committee, therefore if you want a ticket see some of the guarantors who will provide you with one. Buy one before the entertainments begin as there may not be any on sale at the grounds. All single tickets will be 35 cents for afternoon program, 50 cents for evening. Mr. Joseph M. Everngam died at the home of his son W. J. Everngam on Monday morning aged 74 years. The funeral took place at Concord yesterday at 2 o'clock. Mr. Everngam had been a sufferer for several months with a cancer, and his death was not unexpected. He was a well-known farmer in the neighborhood where he lived but had retired from active work several years ago.

The Origin of "Chautauqua."

A thoughtless squaw, in the days when the watering places of Northern New York marked "stop-overs" on Indian trails, allowed her wobbly legged infant to fall into a lake, so the story goes. The warrior-to-be was rescued, it happened. The high little lake south of Erie was named on the spot, the place where the child was taken out, and a new word waited its chance to slip into the common-noun page of Webster's.

This is how it came about.

Twenty-five years ago the idea of putting some real pedagogical push into the teaching of Sunday School classes took hold of Bishop John H. Vincent. A Bible Training School was the thing! A vacation camp institution was favored from the start. In the way of a natural beauty spot, the banks of the lake where the copper-colored baby had given his parent such a fright had no competitor that counted. Chautauqua Institution was planted and prospered.

Bishop Vincent went on thinking. He saw a place for lectures on travel, government and popular science, as well as for instruction in old-time prophets and Sunday School tactics. The first season's camp-meeting became a great summer university for adults.

Just at this stage, when Chautauqua had taken on this great new definition, a sagacious Westener came along, tucked the "notion" and the name as well inside his carpet bag, went back to Kansas, hired a few men of the hour and a band, made a squatters' holiday and called it Chautauqua; it was a tent affair, it came in the dull time of the business year, it aimed at a man's brains, it gave self centered neighbors grist for friendly gossip, it called out the tune in a person's make-up.

The Kansas farmer's festival gave the name Chautauqua the greatest meaning that it will ever have. West of the Mississippi it vied in importance with the term Public Schools. Two years ago there were at least a thousand of these Chautauquas scattered through the small towns from Arizona to Ohio.

In 1912, through the magnanimous effort of Prof. Paul M. Pearson of Swarthmore, the meaning of Chautauqua came home to forty-one towns in the East. This year the forty-one town circle has admitted sixty-one more.

Now, in centres where schools are not in session, an extension series of morning entertainments for boys and girls makes Chautauqua, by definition, the place where the child is not taken out.

Denton was represented by Henry Hollingsworth and Myra Ramsdell. Ridgely was represented by Misses Sara Neff and Esther Shaw. Denton stood second in the contest, and during the year has scored the highest number of points in debates, athletic contests, etc., thereby retaining the silver trophy won last year. The audience was very enthusiastic showing a thorough appreciation of the efforts of the young people who acquitted themselves with much credit to themselves and their teachers.

Buy A Mackerel Get A Drink.

A new industry to overcome local-option conditions in lower Delaware has developed at Lewes and at the Delaware Breakwater, Mackerel fishermen from New England ports are supplying the "dry" section with liquor by selling pints and half-pints concealed in mackerel.

"Buy a fish and get a big drink," is the slogan of the fishermen, and it is netting them considerable money.

When Governor Miller recently approved an act prohibiting the shipment of liquor into Kent and Sussex counties, "dry" sections, the bibulous residents of Lewes and vicinity became alarmed. The Webb bill had previously stopped interstate shipments of "boose."

Ingenious Yankees on a mackerel boat from New England laid in a large supply of "boose" before reaching Delaware, and opened a large number of fish and placed bottles of liquor inside. Then the fish "and contents" were offered for sale.

There was soon a big demand for the fish, and other mackerel fishermen learned of the plan and emulated it.

How To Make $25,000.

Readers who are especiall gifted in mathematics will be interested, if not allured, by the apparently simple way to make a fortune that the London Sphere points out.

Twenty-five thousand dollars awaits the student who will prove a proposition of the French mathematician, Fermat, who lived about 250 years ago. The prize will remain open to all comers for a century.

Prof. G. A. Miller, who told of it in a recent address on modern mathematical research, not unreasonably fears that such a large inducement may set all sorts of mediocre mathematicians to wasting their time on the problem.

The proposition to be proved is that the sum of no two powers except squares is itself a power of the same degree. Sums of squares. For instance, the square of three is nine, and that of four is sixteen. Add sixteen and nine and you have twenty-five which is the square of five. But this has never been found to be true for cubes or fourth powers, or any powers above squares, and Fermat asserted that no such cases would or could ever be found.

He proved it too—at least he said he had done so—but his proof is lost and no one has ever recovered it or discovered another, although proofs have been found for definite powers. Some of the world's greatest mathematicians have worked on the problem.

TAX PAYERS PROTEST.

A delegation of more than a hundred tax payers from the Fifth and Eighth Districts was in town Tuesday, and went before the County Commissioners with a protest against building 2.92 miles of road from Preston to Grove at a cost of $11,-900.

Bids have been advertised for in the Democratic papers of the county for several weeks, and those received were opened on Tuesday at the office of the County Commissioners. The road is to be built under the State Aid law, but the promoters from Preston and along the road, agree to guarantee that it shall not cost the county more than $11,900, or about $4,000 per mile. The promoters also claim that the Fourth District, up to this time, has received no benefits from the State Aid law.

On the other hand those who are opposing the high priced road claim that there are other Districts in the county that have received no benefit from the law, and the other Districts which have taken advantage of the law by putting up from 10 per cent. to 20 per cent. of the cost of their roads, have built roads that did not cost the county more than $1,500 per mile. As far as we have been able to learn there is no objection to the building of a State Aid road, but the protest is against giving twice as much per mile for it as has been expended on State Aid roads in other parts of the county. No action was taken on the protest on Tuesday.

The bids opened by the Commissioners were G. W. Forsyth, Belair, stone $35,037.46; concrete $43,295.58. Chesapeake Construction Co., stone $30,487 74; concrete with bituminous top, $36,810.38; concrete $33,176.78. Hassan Paving Co., Worcester, Mass., concrete with bituminous top, $46,-690.94. The bids of the Chesapeake company will be forwarded to the State Roads Commission.

Salisbury Complains.

If the present conditions with respect to drunknness prevail in Salisbury for any length of time, the legislature will be asked to pass a law that will prevent that town and county being used as a dumping ground for the whiskey for persons in the nearby counties of Sussex. Every day hundreds of packages of liquor and beer are being received at the local express and freight offices, where it is ordered sent by purchasers who cannot have it shipped to them where they live.

The purchasers go for their goods, and as a result more drunks have been seen in Salisbury during the past month than for a great many years. The drunkenness is not confined to any particular day of the week, the shipments coming in every day. The B. C. & A. railroad boat from Baltimore brings particularly large quantities of wet goods for people in Delmar, Seaford, Laurel and other Sussex towns.—Ex

Some weeks ago we spoke of this very state of affairs which is likely to occur in all the eastern shore towns. The trouble now is that we are just a little behind the times, and the next session of the Legislature must find us asking for laws that will give us protection from these annoyances. The liquor dealers are wide awake and will ship their goods to any point the law will allow, in any old package from an oil can, or fruit can to a five gallon jug.—Ed

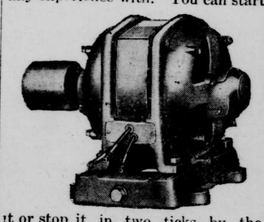

One Aviator's Good Sense.

Lincoln Beachey has declared he will never fly again: and he gives a reason that deserves serious attention. He is not afraid of being killed, but he finds that the example of his skill and daring causes, other fliers to take chances which too often mean fatalities. The crowds that gather to see him fly want stunts; they coolly bet on whether he will land alive, and give odds against him. Beachey doesn't care to provide amusement for that sort of audiences.

Perhaps the stunt business, the spirals, the figures of eight and all the difficult and dangerous moonshines are necessary in order to develop exact understanding of what navigation involves. Probably they are not. The war-time service of the aeroplane is not likely to demand reverse spirals over the enemy's lines. Its business will be to get there and get back without any foolishness. Why not regulate a little more sense into the aviation business, and a lot of frills and foolishness out of it? —Baltimore News.

THIS IS IT.

This little buzzer hangs on the ceiling of the UNION office and when needed we press the button and the electric company does the rest. We find it the cheapest, cleanest, most satisfactory power we have ever had any experience with. You can start it or stop it in two ticks by the watch. We have been using two horse power for a month or more and it all comes from a little machine that you could put in a water bucket. The Electric Light Company would be glad to have you see it work, and you are welcome to look in any time. Ours is the first business office in the county to employ electric power.
