Town and County News

THURSDAY, JUNE 12th, 1913.

Monday is said to have been the coldest June day in 42 years.

The Chautauqua has come and gone —every day there was something worth while.

The statements of both of Denton's banking institutions appear in this issue. Look them over.

There were no services in the town churches on Sunday afternoon, Rev. Dr. Cadman preaching at the Chautauqua tent.

Travel across the bridge except on foot was suspended on Monday and Tuesday while the floor of the old bridge was being put down on the temporary bridge.

The heavy rain on Saturday night did not disturb the exercises at the Chautauqua tent very greatly, as there were only a few places where the water leaked through.

Mr. James L. Payne, well-known to many people in our county, having lived and farmed most of his life in the 4th district, died at the home of Mr. J. T. Willis, near Easton on Monday.

The Denton base ball club played a return game with the Hillsboro nine on Saturday winning by a score of 17 to 12. The ground and ball were in poor condition owing to the heavy rain.

The Chautauqua tent and chairs were moved to the train Monday morning and Captain Lucas and his crew left for Parsonsburg, Chester county, Pa., where a Chautauqua is now in progress.

The Wilmington Board of Education is selling $40,000 school bonds to local subscribers, the bid of a banking house having been rejected when a broker demanded $1600 commission for selling the entire issue.

The Ladies' Circle, of the M. E. Church, will hold a Saturday Market in the afternoon and evening of the 14th, at the former parsonage adjoining the church. Cake, ice cream and sherbits will be for sale.

A man living at Auburn, New York had a severe attack of kidney and bladder trouble. Being a working man, not wanting to lose time, he cured himself completely by using Foley Kidndey Pills. A year later he says: "It is a pleasure to report that the cure was permanent. His name is J. A. Farmer. Sold by A. L. Duffey, Hillsboro Md.

Efforts are being made by the Lewes Board of Trade to prevent the abandonment of the wireless telegraph station at Henlopen. Senator Saulsbury is using his influence and has written a letter to Hon. Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the Navy, urging that this station be maintained as heretofore.

Rev. L. A. Bennett, pastor of Milford Methodist Protestant Church, has received an offer of $5,000 for his church provided he can raise the sum of $3,000 by the first day of December, 1913. These two sums would liquidate the entire debt against this new edifice and Mr. Bennett will work hard to raise the require guarantee.

Rev. G. S. Rairigh returned on Saturday from Winona Lake, Ind., where he attended the National Conference of the Church of the Brethren. The attendance on Sunday 1st was estimated at from 40,000 to 50,000. Over 500 delegates were present. Rev. Mr. Rairigh representing the Denton congregation. The conference next year will be held in the State of Washington.

The Laurel-Bethel camp meeting grounds the largest and most picturesque in the country, is being renovated and the Sussex county levy court is being urged to improve the road that leads from the nearest railroad station to the camp grounds. During former sessions of the camp, visitors have been compelled to either ride through an overpowering dust or be splattered with mud and, as the road is greatly used during the camp meetings, the court will probably put it in proper shape.

An Interesting Relic.

Mr. Hubert A. Roop, one of the veteran printers of Wilmington, Delaware, is the possessor of an interesting relic of the War of 1812. It is a flattened bullet taken from the flagship Lawrence of Admiral Perry's fleet in that war. The Lawrence is the ship which Perry and his party left as she was sinking.

Mr. Roop purchased the relic at the Centennial Exposition from Sergeant Bates, who was in charge of the hulk of the flagship which was displayed at the exposition. Sergeant Bates stated that he went through England unmolested, carrying an American flag.

The relic possessed by Mr. Roop is inscribed on one side with the initials "F S. L." and on the other with an anchor.

The Chautauqua Popular.

The last meeting of the Denton Chautauqua for 1913 was held on Sunday evening, when Dr. A. E. Turner delivered his final address. Dr. Turner's daily lectures on Sociology were one of the features of the week, and as a stage manager and general gentleman he has few equals, and Dr. Pearson could not please our people better than by returning him to Denton for next year's Chautauqua. The big features of the Chautauqua session to the majority of those in attendance were the series lectures of Dr. Turner and the special lecture "An Outgrown Constitution," by Frank Dixon; "The Joy of Living," by Paul M. Pearson; the splendid lecture by Ex-Governor Glenn, and "A Modern Babylon," by Dr. S. Parkes Cadman. Dr. Cadman also preached to a congregation of not less than fifteen hundred people on Sunday afternoon.

The Dickens impersonations by William Sterling Battis were of a high order of excellence, and were greatly enjoyed by all lovers of that noted author, and the manner in which Mr. Battis made up to represent the different characters in full view of his audience was extremely clever and interesting to almost every one.

The scientific lecture of Reno B. Welbourn, we have heard many persons declare, was worth half the price of their season ticket.

From beginning to end the entertainments were of the highest order. The music, the juggling and magic, the singing and moving pictures, were entertainments of a high class and were well received. There is no doubt that the Chautauqua has brought to Denton lecturers and special entertainments, the like of which many persons have not been privileged to hear or see before in their lifetime, and the influence upon the entire public has been for good. When from one thousand to twelve hundred people congregate every afternoon and evening for a week and maintain such splendid order that the presence of a police officer is never needed, and a man under the influence of liquor is not seen, we have reason to feel proud of our citizens and are satisfied that the Chautauqua is a good thing.

On Thursday a movement was started for the return of the Chautauqua in 1914, and while there were a few who could not measure its benefits except by dollars and cents, little trouble was experienced in getting over seventy-five guarantors and on Saturday night the committee had in its hands signed pledges for the purchase of seven hundred and four tickets for next year. The Association requires a guarantee of the sale of seven hurdred tickets or $1,400, and takes the chances of taking in an additional $600 at the gate. In 1912, from bad weather and the fact that the guarantee was placed at $1,200, we are informed the Association lost about $20,000.

The social feature of the meeting is especially pleasing. Friends who have not seen each other for months meet at the Chautauqua, and this will, no doubt, be more throughly enjoyed next year.

Umpire and the Game.

It is not the pitcher who put the sphere over the plate, the batter who connects with the ball, or the fielder who never makes an error who wins the baseball game. It is the umpire.

The umpire is, of course, a necessary adjunct to the game, and it may be that the arbitary power which he exercises cannot be curtailed. At the same time it would be worth while for some baseball statistician to figure out how many games have been lost or won through close decisions of the umpire and which, to an impartial observer, seemed incorrect. The facts would certaily show that any nine which had the umpire upon its side would win many games to which it was not entitled, while the nine that had for any reason incurred the enmity of the umpire might as well retire from the field, for its chances of victory are reduced to a minimum.

It would not be fair, perhaps, to charge any umpire with being actually dishonest, nor could such a charge be easily proven. It is very easy for an umpire, however, especially if he is of a callous nature, to deliberately decide against one team and in favor of the other. Evidences of such discrimination are fortunately not frequent.

Murder At Bridgeville.

Another murder was commited near Bridgeville on Sunday morning June 1. Arnold Tenant, colored, aged 25, was accosted by George Dutton, colored, of Middletown, and over an old grudge, without having any words, Dutton pulled a revolver and said he was going to kill Tenant.

The shooting took place on the farm of Mr. L. Newton, two miles north of Bridgeville, where they with a gang of negroes were shooting crap. He began shooting and Tenant failing on his knees asked for mercy and pleaded not to shoot. Upon seeing Dutton meant to be as good as his word he started to run, Dutton shooting after him four or five times, one bullet taking effect in the lower part of his back, killing him instantly.

Coroner John Russell, who lives near Bridgeville, was notified and after examining the body called a jury and held an inquest which came to the decision that Tenant met his death from a bullet wound inflicted by the hands of George Dutton. After the Coroner left the place of the shooting Dutton returned to the scene of the murder and ran everybody in sight with his gun, swearing vengance on the witnesses. He made good his escape and has not at this time been apprehended.

On Tuesday Governor Miller offered a reward of $100.00 for his body delivered to the Sheriff at Georgetown, and in a telegram to the Sheriff told him to spare no expense in effecting his capture, and to deputize as many persons as needed.

Dutton is said to have made the assertion that after he had fixed three other men they could do what they d— pleased with him.

Shoots Himself on Street.

William Lankford, well known in Hickman where he worked for some time in Abbott's Mill, shot and killed himself near Austin's stables on Thursday morning. He had lately been working in a mill near Dover where he lived with his family. His wife and three children have been stopping with friends near Denton for several weeks, having left their home in Dover. Lankford appeared in Denton last week and tried to persuade his wife to return to her home. This she refused to do and he threatened to kill himself. On Wednesday he had taken a large dose of laudanum, and a bottle containing more of the drug was taken from him. He threatened to throw himself under the train at the station, but a friend succeeded in calling him away from the tracks. On Thursday morning he again called upon his wife and asked her to accompany him back to Dover, but she refused. He told her he was going over to Queen Anne on the morning train and then around by Clayton to Dover. He, however, bought the pistol in Hillsboro and returned to Denton on the next train, and on his way to Austin's stables stopped on the street under a tree and shot himself in the right temple.

In his pocket was found a note to his wife in which he asked her forgiveness and said he had been full of liquor. The note appeared to have been written only a few minutes before he did the shooting. Justice Hignutt held an inquest which rendered a verdict of suicide according to the facts shown. Undertaker Moore took charge of the body, which was buried at Concord Saturday morning.

The Preston Cement Road.

Federalsburg, June 6th, 1913.

MR. EDITOR—

I desire, as a citizen of the much abused fifth, and also personally, to express appreciation of the articles which have appeared in the two last issues of the UNION.

The paper of last week contained the only article which I found in any of the County papers which appeared to show much grasp of the subject, or any disposition to look at the situation from the view point of the disinterested citizen and taxpayer, while the second editorial in the issue of this week is a fine piece of work.

We of the fifth can not understand why dollars should have so great a value when used for the erection of necessary school buildings, and so little value when they are to be used for road construction in some places.

The people of the fifth have been somewhat severely criticized in the past for drawing so heavily upon the funds of the county for road construction, yet, notwithstanding that from our very unfavorable location in the midst of a bed of sand, and the fact that we were compelled to improve a great many miles of road in order to make our town a practical shipping point for truck and berries, we have not during the entire time during which we have been taking advantage of State Aid to improved our road system taken from the county a total of but very little more money than is being asked from the county for this one short piece of road, and this is already a good road, one on which it is customary to haul from forty to sixty cases of No. 3 canned goods with an ordinary two horse or mule team.

In fact, as you will note by examination of the enclosed table, the county has only put up for State Aid roads in the fifth district $8751.07, unless the bridge is taken into account. The bridge cost the county $7000, although the total cost of the improvement was over $18,000. The Dover bridge will cost the county at least $10,000, and on that work the people of the fourth have never put up a cent. We consider that we have made much the best showing on the bridge proposition, and that our roads have been of much real value to the county and the people than Preston—Grove road will ever be, although they have cost the county only $8751.07, as against a probable cost to the county on the Preston—Grove road of $13,000 or more.

You will understand that while the figures as made from the bid show an expenditure of $11,900, there are always extra charges which swell the total cost of such a contract some times as much as several thousand dollars, and that under such a bond as was put up by the fourth district people at the last Tuesday's meeting the county has no assurance of an actual cost, but may be called upon for as much possibly as $15,000 or even more. In fact there is no limit, but the cost will not be less than $11,900, and will likely be between that and $15,000.

The article in the Journal is a little misleading inasmuch as while it speaks strongly of the fact that concrete roads do not require continual repairs it does not mention the fact that the State takes care of the cost of repair of State Aid roads, so that this item of repairs need not enter into the calculation at all, while it is a patent fact that it would be a much better investment to the county to construct twice the number of miles with the same money, and by that means get the State to take over the cost of repair of just that much more road.

That is, if the road should be built all the way from Preston to Bureau, which could readily be done with the sum which it is desired to expend, the people of the 4th and the 8th would have a good road all the way to Denton and to Greensboro, and the county would be released from the cost of repair of all the road from Preston to Two John, or rather to Bureau. Would not this then be a much more profitable expenditure of the money. I can't see why not. It don't cost the county a cent more, they get twice as much road, the people get a good road all the way instead of a Boulevard half the way and a very bad sandy road the rest of the way, the people of the 8th are accommodated in visiting Denton as well as those of the 4th, and the County gets clear of the cost of repairs along the entire stretch of road.

There can be no reasonable doubt in any thinking mans mind that the next move will be the construction of the road from Harmony to Bureau either by State Aid or by the State. If the people of the 4th will come out in the open and admit that they expect the State to build it they will at once define their position and we will all know where we stand, but they strenuously deny that there is any intention whatever on the part of the State Road Commission to change the route of the State road to that line. If the State does not then the County must, as the road now called for will be of little use until connected with the Bureau, and we may look at some very early date for another demand for a like amount, and this apparently with little help in the way of a subscription from the people of Preston, as all their talk and actions show plainly that they do not expect to help any further. In fact they have explicitly stated that this is the last and the only State Aid road that they intend to apply for. The people of the 8th will not subscribe very heavily on such a road, as it passes through the extreme western portion of the district, and they are not in a position in any case to put up a large subscription on any road no matter how much they may desire it.

There seems very little doubt however but that there is an explicit or at least an implied arrangment between the present State Road Commission and the people of the 4th that in case they will secure the construction of this piece of road as at present applied for that the State will construct the connecting link between the end of this road and the South end of the road from Denton to below Williston at present completed.

This being once done there can be little doubt but that the building of State Road in Caroline will cease, and our system will consist of a road from Greensboro to Preston, and one from Federalsburg to Hurlock. There will not likely be sufficient money available to proceed further than this, and the Commission will contend that Caroline is very well served by being connected with the main line at the nearest practical points.

This is the great danger which stares us in the face, and has done so ever since the first inception of the State road system. By active work the old State Road Commission was induced to lay out a through county route and partially complete the same, but you know the history of the change of front made by the new Commission, and I believe that the only way to avoid such change in the plan as would result in disaster to the business interests of Caroline is to block the the construction of State Road between Preston and the Bureau, and if possible secure at the next session of the Legislature a special appropriation for this county sufficient to re-imburse her for whatever amount of money may be needed to construct the road from Linchester to the Choptank river at Dover bridge, including Carolines proportion of the cost of the bridge and the causway.

This is perfectly proper, as it has been done in several instances in this State where a section of road has been constructed which has been as this one is, a connecting link of more importance to adjacent counties than to the county through which the road is built, and all, I believe, of the large bridges connecting counties have been built by special appropriations.

If we can secure an appropriation, to the amount of probably $70,000, that would furnish sufficient money to complete the Linchester Dover Bridge road, and the amount already expended on that improvement and on the bridge and causway, which would be returned to the credit of the county, added to Carolines share of the next bond issue, would carry construction on our main North and South route so far along that it would certainly be completed in some manner in the near future.

Your remarks on the necessity for getting together are good. You suggest that both parties to the contention should make concessions. The suggestion is a good one. I trust that we shall not be found wanting when the time comes to make such concessions. Please note that the people of the 8th are as warmly interested in this matter as are those of the 5th, although the responsibility so far seems to be thrown on the 5th, and that the people of the two districts have already stated that they were willing to have the road built if the people interested in its construction would take care of all the expense in excess of $2500 per mile, also that they will get behind the construction of a road all the way from Preston to Bureau to cost the same amount as the road proposed, and will contribute towards the cost of its construction.

As the cost to the county of the roads built in the 5th has been less than $1500 per mile on the average the first proposition certainly seems reasonable to us, and as a road from Preston to Bureau is of much more benefit to every one concerned, especially the people of the 4th district themselves, we cannot understand why they should object to it, especially as they strenuously deny that they have any intention what ever of affecting a diversion of the State road to the Preston route.

Should they raise sufficient money to take care of all the expense of building the road in excess of $2500 per mile they would undoubtedly be entitled to their road, although its construction will most certainly be in the light of a disaster to the balance of the people of the county, and I don't believe in the end it would be of any lasting and real benefit to the people of the 4th themselves.
