"Maryland Week."

"Maryland Week," which is the name for the annual exhibition of the State Horticulture and other allied societies, ought to be a name to conjure with, and there is every reason why the annual display should steadily grow in popularity and usefulness. This year the exhibition is to be held a little earlier than usual—from November 17 to 22—and it should profit by the advantage which comes from a date more convenient to the general public.

One thing that ought to be remembered is that "Maryland Week" is is not the farmers' week or the horticulturists' week alone—it is just as much the city people's week. In fact, in some ways it is more so, because, while the latter are equally concerned in the practical success of agriculture, the exhibits contain for them an element of interest and education with which the country people are familiar.—Balto. THE RESULT.

There has never been apparently a more hotly contested primary held in the county than that of Monday. However the Regulars seem to have won with ease and only in the 8th district did their candidates come out with less than a majority. In this district Lewis gets 105 against Smith's 72 and Hignutt gets 91 against Day's 95.

The total vote in the county was large. In 1911 G. Lawrence Wilson, for the Legislature got 1249 votes. Mr. Steele for Register of Will on Monday got 1241. The vote as we have been able to get it by telephone is as follows:

House of Delegates.

Downes,	756
Fooks,	960
Kauffman,	983
Kelley,	1092
Melvin,	881
Stevenson,	781

County Treasurer.

The result shows Kelley, Fooks and Kauffman to be the nominees for House of Delegates. Carroll for County Treasurer. Temple for Sheriff. Steele for Register of Wills. Jackson for County Commissioner. Boys for the Navy.

The following letter has been received from Washington:

Dear Sir:—

"Senator Jackson has the right to designate one principal and three alternates for appointment to the United States Naval Academy, the entrance examinations taking place in February or April 1914. Believing that the best interests of the Navy can be promoted by recruiting its officers after the widest competition among the people to whom the Navy belongs, and believing that every boy in Maryland of the required age should have the opportunity to enter the Naval Academy, he has decided to make these appointments as the result of a competitive examination to be held on October 22, 1913, by the Civil Service Commission at the usual places in Baltimore, Hagerstown, Frederick, Cumberland, Washington, Salisbury, and possibly Easton. The examinations will last six hours and the subject matter will be similar to the usual entrance examinations to the Naval Acedemy. These examinations will be open to every boy in Maryland who is of the proper age and has the proper physical requirements. It will simply be necessary for the applicant to fill out the blanks furnished by the examining officer on the day of the examination.

"Senator Jackson will regard it as a great favor if you will give this announcement as much publicity as convenient in order that the opportunity to enter the Academy may be as wide as possible."

Yours very truly,
A. W. W. Woodcock
Secretary.

Funeral of Clarence Baynard.

The funeral of Clarence Baynard, whose death was mentioned in the UNION of last week, was held in the M. E. Church on Friday afternoon. Clarence was a scholar in the Sunday School and many beautiful floral offerings and the high tributes paid by his pastor showed the love and esteem in which he was held by all who knew him. In the summer he camped for ten days with the boy scouts at Long Point and his old Scoutmaster, Mr. R. R. Shull, of Greensboro, was completely overcome with grief as he stood at his side a few hours after he had been drowned. The burial was in Denton ton cemetery and Worthington Downes, Howard Covey, Albert G. Towers, Jr., Howard Melvin, Jr., George D. Smith and Roland Miller, Boy Scout companions of about his own age, about 14 years, acted as pall-bearers. Rev. O. T. Baynard, of Chincoteague, his uncle, and many other relatives were present at the funeral.

New Industry Profitable.

A new agricultural industry has sprung up in Wicomico county in the growing of broom corn.

B. Frank Kennerly and Elisha T. Twilley last year started a broom factory in Salisbury and finding that broom corn was so expensive in freight from the States of Oklahoma and Indiana, distributed seed to many farmers in that section and many acres were grown. David J. Ward had a large display and won first prize at the Wicomico Fair. He spent some time in Indiana and Illinois, making a special study of the planting of this crop, and this year he will go to Oklahoma to study the housing and curing of the broom tops. He says that Wicomico county land will produce one ton of first-class broom corn fodder to an acre after being cured and should net the growers from $75 to $125 an acre.
