WOMAN ESCAPES OPERATION

By Timely Use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Here is her own statement.

Cary, Maine.—"I feel it a duty I owe to all suffering women to tell what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. One year ago I found myself a terrible sufferer. I had pains in both sides and such a soreness I could scarcely straighten up at times. My back ached, I had no appetite and was so nervous I could not sleep, then I would be so tired mornings that I could scarcely get around. It seemed almost impossible to move or do a bit of work and I thought I never would be any better until I submitted to an operation. I commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and soon felt like a new woman. I had no pains, slept well, had good appetite and was fat and could do almost all my own work for a family of four. I shall always feel that I owe my good health to your medicine."—Mrs. HAYWARD SOWERS, Cary, Maine.

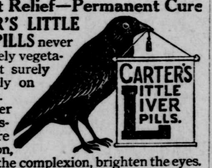

If you are ill do not drag along until an operation is necessary, but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

SPEAKS FOR ITSELF
Experience of a Southern Man.

"Please allow me to thank the originator of Postum, which in my case, speaks for itself," writes a Fla. man.

"I formerly drank so much coffee that my nervous system was almost a wreck." (Tea is just as injurious because it contains caffeine, the drug found in coffee.) "My physician told me to quit drinking it but I had to have something, so I tried Postum.

"To my great surprise I saw quite a change in my nerves in about 10 days. That was a year ago and now my nerves are steady and I don't have those bilious sick headaches which I regularly had while drinking coffee.

"Postum seems to have body-building properties and leaves the head clear. And I do not have the bad taste in my mouth when I get up mornings. When Postum is boiled good and strong, it is far better in taste than coffee. My advice to coffee drinkers is to try Postum and be convinced."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Write for copy of the little book, "The Road to Wellville."

Postum comes in two forms:

Regular Postum—must be well boiled.

Instant Postum is a soluble powder. A teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. Grocers sell both kinds.

"There's a reason" for Postum.

SAVE PENNIES AGAINST TIME SCHOOL ENDS

Children's Savings Bank of New York Doing a Really Remarkable Work.

DOES MUCH MORE THAN INCULCATE THRIFT

Pupils, Who Come From the Poorer Classes of the City, Are Thus Provided With a Small Fund When Their Time Comes to Enter the Working World—Scheme Has Been Found to Be of Great Benefit to the Pupils.

NEW YORK.—You remember O. Henry's story of the little shop girl who worked for $5 a week in the big department store selling the wonderful finery she herself never could hope to own, but who, because the strong face of Lord Kitchener, looking down from the colored print on the wall of her hall room, had stirred some innate warning too deep for her to understand, had refused to "go out" with the flashy young man who took all the other girls to dinner evenings? O. Henry called it the "Unfinished Story." He explained that the face of Lord Kitchener might not always be looking down from the wall, and you can draw your own conclusions.

It is to prevent just that sort of thing—the finishing of those tragic stories, so many of which find their ending daily in a big city, that John L. Fruauf has created as unique an organization as can be found anywhere in the country. It is a school savings bank—a bank for school children to drop their pennies and dimes into as insurance against the bondage that shadows those many girls who work for $5 weekly in the big shops of New York.

Started by Principal.

John Fruauf is principal of Public School No. 14, at No. 225 East Twenty-seventh street. Briefly, he has established his work on this theory: A girl with a trade that will earn her a good living is less apt to go wrong than a girl whose wages are insufficient to feed, let alone clothe and house her. This latter type of girl he points to as generally being the shop girl.

"A girl who graduates from public school," he says, "has two courses—to go to work at unskilled labor in a store for what she can get, generally $3 to $5 a week, or to enter a trade school, from which she will be graduated with the ability to earn a good living wage. The school savings bank we have established is intended to give children of the poor a chance to save enough money to learn a trade, and thus to prevent them from meeting the fate of the girl in the 'Unfinished Story.'"

Long Island Man Started It.

Public School No. 14 is situated between Second and Third avenues, in one of the poorest sections of the city. Can you imagine the children of that section of the East side acting as depositors in a savings bank, and can you imagine what cash balance such a bank would show after two years of existence? No, you cannot, for when you hear that those children of the tenements have on deposit in the school bank $10,350.29, you will be inclined to laugh. Yet such is the case.

When the Need Is Felt.

The matter of school savings banks originated with J. H. Thiry of Long Island City several years ago. The state board of education adopted resolutions permitting the establishment of such institutions where advisable, and thus, with the way opened, Principal Fruauf started out to make such a bank a reality in his school. The first thing he did was to appoint Dr. Herman J. Sonnenberg, one of the teachers in No. 14, active head and organizer of the bank. Dr. Sonnenberg, out of several schemes that had been tried, evolved, in February, 1911, the system that is still in use.

The bank was opened formally on February 20, that year, and the first day's deposits showed a total of $160.34. From that time to date the bank has accumulated deposits that total $14,055.11. In two years the total withdrawals have been but $3,704.02, leaving a balance of $10,350.29, which belongs to the little East siders who attend the school. Not one is older than fifteen.

The total number of depositors is 1,350. This makes the average deposit a little more than $7.66. The chief capitalist among the children is a girl. She can write her check for $135.31. The smallest depositor has a credit of one cent.

Monday Is Banking Day.

Monday is banking day. All deposits are made on that day. The system is a unique one. The children in each class arise alphabetically and go to the front of the room, where the teacher sits with a cash memorandum. Each child hands in its bank book with its deposit. The deposit is entered in the bank book, which is returned to the depositor. The teacher acting as receiving teller credits the deposit on the cash memorandum after the name of the depositor. Then the teacher counts the money and compares it with the balance of the cash memorandum sheet, after which the cash is placed in an envelope and sealed, the amount written on it, together with the class number and teacher's name. Each teacher then repairs to the room of Dr. Sonnenberg and deposits her class collections in a strong box, which is taken to one of the big savings banks. The bank opens the envelopes, compares the amounts within with the amounts written on them and, if correct, so stamps the envelopes, which are returned to the teachers as canceled vouchers. The money is then entered in the pass book of Public School No. 14.

As Dr. Sonnenberg explained, it is easy to deposit money, but, while each child depositor is, of course, entitled to draw at any time he or she desires, the bank is run on a strict saving theory, and it requires a good deal more red tape to get cash out than it does to put it in. To begin with, the parents of the children first must sign the check for withdrawal, and it then must be countersigned by the principal. This method, Principal Fruauf explained, prevents the withdrawal of funds for the purpose of lolly pops or other delicacies dear to the heart of children. It will be easily seen that his methods, praiseworthy as they are, have made him by no means popular with the candy venders who find their customers largely among the school children.

Over $200 In One Day.

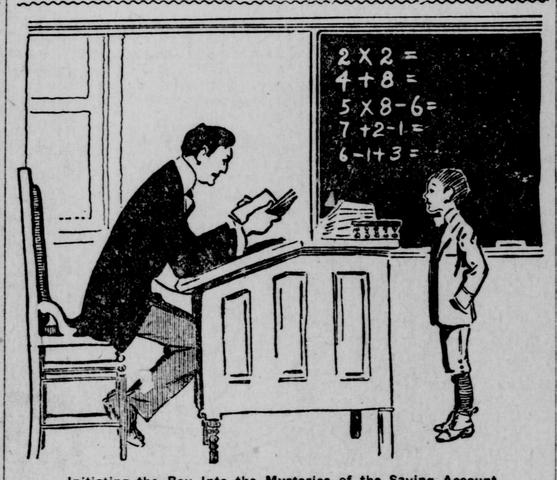

When any depositor has accumulated $5 in his account he is privileged to have the account transferred to his own name at the bank. In other words, he is given a regular pass book at the savings institution where the school bank deposits its funds, and thereafter is a bona fide depositor in the larger institution, save that he is still not allowed to draw his money without authorization from his parents and principal. This is a prerogative held by the school, for the reason that it was through it that the account was transferred.

"That our bank is a growing institution," said Mr. Fruauf, "is shown by the daily increase in our deposits. On the opening day we had deposits of $160.34, while last Monday $204.57 was credited to the accounts of our children.

"The bank does many things besides giving children of the poor a start in life once they are out of school. It teaches indelibly the theory of saving, creates a tendency to economy, promotes business sense in the handling of money and provides the competitive desire to save. You should see our little fellows and girls hoarding up their pennies against depositors' day.

Great Aim of Institution.

"But seriously, the greatest aim is to give the public school graduates—particularly the girls—a chance to get on their feet once they are out of school. Statistics have shown that girls who have trades are far better qualified to meet the battle for subsistence than those who have not and are obliged to take unskilled places at whatever employers choose to pay them. A girl, in my notion, rarely gets into trouble because she wants to. It is because she is driven to it by sheer desperation. You will find the percentage of girls who make mistakes greater among the classes who live in poverty than among those with plenty. The answer is simple. The poor girl must work to live. But under the present American standards she cannot live on what her work pays her. What, then, is there left for her. A vain struggle—a struggle as heroic as any within the scope of imagination—to live when living is impossible, and then the gradual breaking down by need. No man with a soul can blame mistakes that result from such causes. He can merely strive to remedy them."

Initiating the Boy Into the Mysteries of the Saving Account.

JUST CONVERSATION.

That women can smile, scrap, kiss and throw the harpoon into each other at the same time was demonstrated by a story told at a recent banquet by Senator William S. Kenyon of Iowa.

Some time ago, the senator said, a woman called on a female acquaintance whom she had not seen for several years. Fond embrace, kisses and all that sort of thing, and then the chirp began.

"Just think, Mary," observed the hostess an hour later, "it has been nearly ten years since we last met!"

"Yes, dearie," responded the caller, with a pointed glance at the other. "Ten long years! But you don't show your age one bit."

"Do you really think so, Mary?" was the delighted rejoinder of the hostess.

"I know it, dear," was the positive rejoinder of Mary. "When you went to the kitchen a few minutes ago I noticed that you had torn it out of the family Bible."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

OUGHT TO BE OF BENEFIT

Otherwise There Is No Excuse for the Publication of the Tolstoi Letters.

Word comes from St. Petersburg that the widow of the late Count Tolstoi has published more than 600 letters written to her by her late husband. The letters begin with the proposal of marriage, and cover the period of betrothal of the count and the countess and many years of their wedded life. The countess in her preface says that it is her desire to give all that cherish her husband's memory access to what was dearest to him in life. Nine letters are withheld, three because they concern living persons and the last six he wrote because the countess thinks that the time to publish them has not arrived. It is very rare, we believe, that letters of distinguished persons have been published to the world in this manner. As a rule, women are too sensitive to make public the most intimate affairs in their lives. Only a little while ago the world and his wife were shocked at the publication of the love letters of Robert Browning and Elizabeth Barrett Browning. It seemed as if it were little less than sacrilege to expose the intimate love-life of the two poets. Browning, we know, was the most sensitive of men, and it is easy to imagine his Berserker rage had anyone suggested such a proceeding during his life time. But the opportunity to make money evidently was too great a temptation to the heirs, and so the love story of the two poets was given to the world. But the Countess Tolstoi has not even the excuse of needing money. Yet unquestionably she is actuated by what she believes to be high motives in publishing her husband's letters. As it is impossible to criticise her action while in ignorance of the contents of the epistles, we may assume that there is something in the letters of value to the world. Assuredly she would never have consented to publishing mere love letters and epistles having to do with affairs of no interest to anyone outside the immediate family.

The Temples of Karnak.

Of all the monumental ruins of the ancient world there is probably no one of more intrinsic interest than Karnak, a "town of temples." With a history extending from the first dynasty down to the Roman occupation of Egypt, it epitomizes the history of religion for 5,000 years, and is quite unique as a historic document. Since $95 systematic excavations have been carried on there, and now a vast collection of photographs, and plans, and descriptions lie useless, because unpublished and unaccessible to scholars and the public. A correspondent of the London Times calls attention to the matter, and urges an immgediate compilation and publication of the Karnak data. This, he says, is what the archaeological world wants: "(1.) Complete plans, sections and elevations of the monument up to date. (2.) Short but complete description (with dates) of the course of the excavations. (3.) A detailed account of the temple or Osiris which is unique. (4.) Detailed accounts of objects found."—New York Evening Post.

Cultivate Decision.

Lack of decision often is due to pure ignorance. A man is ignorant of what he can be. Opportunity stands at the door and is not recognized. "There is a tide in the affairs of men which, taken at its floods, leads on to fortune; omitted, all the voyage of their life is bound in shallows and in miseries. . . . We must take the current when it serves, or lose our ventures."

What He Wrote.

An Atchison man has sent out a tracer for the old-fashioned correspondent who used to write: "We are all well and hope you are the same." That isn't what he said; he hoped "these few lines will find you the same."

A Victim of Impulse.

"You say Bliggins is an untruthful man?"

"Not exactly untruthful. But he's one of these people who impulsively use the first person singular in repeating every fish story they hear."

Familiar.

"So you recovered your stolen watch the same day you lost it?"

"Yes, when the thief brought it into the pawnshop the proprietor recognized it as mine right away."

PLEASANT FOR MISS SMITH

Of Course Harvard Man May Not Have Meant Anything, But Then Again.

There is a man in this town who knows a good story with which to begin an after-dinner speech. He has saved it for two years, and has not had a chance to use it. He has not heard anybody else use it in that time. He offers it here in the hope that it may aid those martyrs—not listed in Fox's book—of whom the toastmaster demands that most difficult oratorical effort—the happy after-dinner talk about something which one speaker has already discussed. Here it it, very short, but lending itself gracefully to elaboration:

A Harvard graduate student went to Chicago to pursue his studies. At one session of the class he attended the first speaker was a Chicago woman, a doctor of philosophy, severe and plain, but learned. The Harvard man was called on next.

"The discussion offers room for endless discussion," he began. Then he bethought him of chivalry, "but really when my learned colleague, Miss Smith, rose to her feet, it seemed that the ground was covered."—Newark Evening Star.

Nose-Blowing Drills.

A few years of school dental clinics have made toothbrush drills a daily familiar idea in many cities. It took the Toronto public nurses, or rather their supervisor, Lina L. Rogers, to originate another drill quite as unique and importance. Since last October the school children of Toronto, in squads of 20, have practiced daily nose-blowing drills, and the effect on the freshness of the atmosphere of the school rooms has been so noticeable that the teachers have become assiduous in seeing to it that no child comes to school unprovided with a pocket handkerchief. They often, indeed, themselves, order the drills without waiting for the coming of the nurse. The effect of the drill is perceptible already on individual children, in cases of catarrh, and the doctors predict that it will have an appreciable effect in time in lessening adenoids and other throat and nose affections.—The Survey.

RED, ROUGH HANDS MADE SOFT AND WHITE

For red, rough, chapped and bleeding hands, dry, fissured, itching, burning palms, and painful finger-ends, with shapeless nails, a one-night Cuticura treatment works wonders. Directions: Soak the hands, on retiring, in hot water and Cuticura Soap. Dry, anoint with Cuticura Ointment, and wear soft bandages or old, loose gloves during the night. These pure, sweet and gentle emollients preserve the hands, prevent redness, roughness and chapping, and impart in a single night that velvety softness and whiteness so much desired by women. For those whose occupations tend to injure the hands, Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment are wonderful.

Why Poison Ivy Poisons.

Poison ivy has long been a mystery both to scientists and laymen; why and with what manner it causes the peculiar rash and irritating inflammation have puzzled both botanists and physicians. At last the reason has been discovered. Dr. Mirande of Paris read to the Academy of Sciences in that city recently the results of his study of the poisonous weed. Poison ivy contains prussic acid. This is found principally in the young leaves and buds; in the older leaves there is very little of it. In three and one-half ounces of young leaves there is about a quarter of a grain of the acid. As with other plants in which prussic acid is found, the poisonous substance does not exist in its perfect form, but develops as soon as the leaves are bruised, a chemical action being set up through the union of an enzyme with a glucosid.

Hard to Reach Her.

A good planter's wife, "befo' de wah," was teaching a jet black house girl, just fourteen and fresh from the plantation, the alphabet. Betsy had learned the first two letters, but always forgot the useless letter "C."

"Don't you see with your eyes, Betsy? Can't you remember the word see?" said the mistress.

"Yassum," answered Betsy, but she couldn't. Five minutes later Betsy began again bravely: "A—B—" and there she stopped.

"What do you do with your eyes, Betsy?"

"I sleeps with 'em, mistiss." And this ended for that day the effort to "educate" Betsy.

Unconsciously.
