Mrs. J. T. Porter will sell some desirable household furniture at her residence on Franklin street on Saturday. See bills.

Quite a number of schools in the large towns held only one session during the excessively hot weather of the past two weeks.

Rev. Mr. Jester, of Burrsville, has been conducting revival services at Central church, on the Burrsville circuit, for the past ten days.

A fine rain on Saturday night cooled the asmosphere and laid the dust, and work and business of all kinds has been carried on with more comfort.

Many farmers are sowing scarlet clover seed in their corn fields, having been prevented from doing the work by the corn being blown down early in the season.

Mr. Hicks Long who for several years has been conducting business in both Federalsburg and Harrington, will open a store here in the Carter Block about Jan. 1st.

Mr. F. W. Redden has completed the new residence on Riverton avenue for Mr. Oran F. Smith, and Mr. and Mrs. Smith expect to occupy their new home after next week.

John Purnell, the Caroline county negro who escaped from Denton Jail during the excitement of the hanging of "Wish" Sheppard, was recaptured in Talbot county last week. The arrest was made by special Officer Miller.

Alonzo Boston, an industrious colored man who has worked for years for the Hughes Lumber and Coal Company, died at Cambridge Hospital on Sunday. He was injured some time ago while unloading lumber from a vessel and grew gradually worse until his death.

The real estate of the late Frank A. Porter, of Burrsville, was sold at public sale at the Court House on Tuesday. The widow purchased the home property in Burrsville at $2,225, W. A. Wooters purchased the canning house lot for $125 and Lyman R. Porter purchased the farm at $6,255.

That the Red Men remember their sick brethren in distress was evidenced last Monday afternoon, when about ten members of this organization went out in the country and harvested the corn crop of Mr. Terry Nichols, a fellow member, who because of illness had not been able to attend to his farm labors.—Federalsburg Courier.

Six or more persons were made seriously ill by what is thought to have been ptomaine poisoning, at the home of Mr. Daniel Nichols near Federalsburg, on Thursday afternoon. All the parties partook of some ice cream at the home of Mr. Nichols, and all were more or less sick. No serious results have been reported, although two doctors were called in Thursday night.

Mr. Lemuel Clough met with an accident on Sunday evening near Goldsboro, which put his new Buick car out of commission. Mr. Clough's car was in collision with a Ford car driven by a Mr. Melvin, of near Henderson, who was going in the opposite direction. Both cars were pretty badly damaged, but none of the passengers were seriously hurt. We understand Mr. Clough claims Mr. Melvin ran into him and Mr. Melvin says he was blinded by Mr. Clough's lights. Both must have been driving slowly or some one would have been hurt.

Mr. John Rutter returned on Saturday from Frankford, Mich. having been sent to that place by the Armour Packing Co., from Ridgely at the close of the berry season. He has been promoted to a position in the New York office and will leave for that city next Monday.

State Conventions Next

Both the Democratic and Republican conventions will be held the latter part of this week. Chairman Murray Vandiver, of the Democratic State Central Committee announced some weeks ago that his party's convention would be held Thursday, September 23, and Chairman Galen L. Tait, of the Republican State Central Committee, states that the Republicans will meet at the Academy of Music a day later next Friday, Sept. 24th. The Republicans will have a meeting of their State Committee the same day.

The chief business before the conventions will be the framing of the party platforms, and, as usually the actual work is done by the leaders the day before, the probabilities are that little time will be consumed in this. The Democrats also will select their State chairman. The conventions will nominate the candidates for Governor, Comptroller and Attorney-General, but that is a mere formality. The delegates from each county and each Legislative district of Baltimore city are compelled to vote according to the instructions given by their people in the primary.

The supplemental registration this fall will begin September 28, or six weeks before the general election, and end on October 5. Persons not yet on the books may then be enrolled, and those who have moved must apply for transfers. The setting on October 12 is for revision only and no new names are put on the books on that day.

Maryland and Delaware.

The Wilmington Y. W. C. A. is planning a campaign for $125,000 for a new building.

Keifer pears, one of Delaware's most prolific crops, are being shipped in large quantities.

The bridge spanning the Indian River at Millsboro, is being replaced by a concrete structure.

It is rumored at Lewes that a large fort is soon to be built on the Cape Henlopen sand dunes.

Many small circuses are being attracted to lower Delaware towns by the unusually active canning season.

From eight bushels of potatoes planted, William H. Singles, a farmer near Newark, harvested 110 bushels.

Former Governor Joseph Carey, of Wyoming, has been visiting his birth place and boyhood friends at Milton.

With special all-day services the ninety-first anniversary of Ebenezer Methodist Church will be observed at Newark, Sunday.

The Sussex Trust Company, of Laurel, has purchased the Horsey block, in the centre of the town, from Thomas J. Horsey.

While hunting squirrel, Thad Windsor, of Milford, was slightly shot by his brother when the latter's gun was accidently discharged.

The 1500 children who have been enrolled for the first time in the Wilmington public schools are to be vaccinated by the city vaccine physician.

Meetings of Peach Blossem Grange, of Middletown, suspended during July and August. have been resumed, and an active winter schedule is being prepared.

An automobile owned by Edward Burris, of Bear Station, was stolen in Wilmington, and badly damaged when the theif drove it into another machine while trying to escape.

Slipping on a tomato in the canning factory of H. P. Cannon & Son at Bridgeville, Miss Louise Ferrand fell and a knife she was carrying struck her in one side, inflicting a serious wound.

William P, Bancroft, president of the Wilmington Park Commission, has purchased a large tract of land and will hold it until the city is prepared to purchase it for a public athletic field.

James Moore, an aged resident of the Palmer Home for Old Folks, at Dover, was found unconcious in his room one morning last week. Gas was escaping from an unlighted jet in his room. Efforts to revive him were unsuccessful.

E. A. Toadvine, a candidate on the Democratic primary ticket for Clerk of the Court in Wicomico county, fell dead on Monday morning of last week, and on Tuesday was nominated by a large majority, it being too late to take his name from the ticket or notify the people of his death.

Messrs. Ronald Daugherty, a clerk in the Crisfield postoffice, and Carl Justice, a linotype operator in the office of the Crisfield Times, are enroute for the California Exposition on a motorcycle. Clad in khaki suits, with caps and leggins, and wearing goggles to protect their eyes, they set forth on their one machine, confident that they would reach the exposition grounds in twenty days.

Mrs. Alice Ross, teacher of the Tomahawk School in Kent county, who has served as tacher of the public schools of that county for many years, witnessed the marriage of Miss Ella Wix and Odotha Brown, of near Harrington, recently. Mrs. Ross taught the father and mother of Miss Wix when they were school children, and she expresses the hope that she may live to teach the children of the newly-weds.

James E. Ingram, Jr., is reported by a Chicago paper to be buying horses for the Allies for use in the European war. The British Government it is said, has placed an order for 1,000,000 of horses with him at a profit of $2 00 per head, which means a profit of $2,000,000. Mr. Ingram married Miss Mary Payne, the eldest daughter of Horace Payne, Esq., of Snow Hill. He formerly lived in Baltimore but now divides his time between Evanston, Ill., and New York.

There has been much speculation as to the future of the river boat service between Salisbury any Baltimore when, as decided by the Interstate Commerce Commission at Washington, the Baltimore, Chesapeake and Atlantic Railroad Company has to sell this and other lines of boats that are not lawfully a part of the system that should be owned by the company. Col. Carrington, Gov. Goldsborough and others are reported as being interested in a proposition to buy the boats for a syndicate which they have in mind to form.

Nothing can happen so bad as a lima bean failure.

ON THE WAY TO CALIFORNIA.

The many friends of Miss Nellie Valliant in Denton and vicinity will read with pleasure the account that follows of her trip during July to the San Francisco Exposition. Some time ago Miss Valliant became Mrs. E. H. Foster, and her home, during the winter months at least, is at Sarasota, Florida. Mrs. Foster and her husband are quite extensive travellers, and the following letter will show how entertainingly she is able to write of the pleasing sights of those enjoyable trips. These letters were first published in the Sarasoto Times, but Mrs. Foster has consented to allow us to use them.

"We chose the Dixie Flyer route to St. Louis not altogether because it was the fastest train but because of the scenic opportunities it affords, passing through Chattanooga, past historic Lookout Mountain, through Nashville and over the mountains of Tennessee by daylight. We found that we had several hours in Nashville, so we availed ourselves of the opportunity to visit many of the public buildings, chief among them the Capitol, artistic in its massive strength and its situation upon a commanding hill in the heart of the city. This in itself was a great and unexpected pleasure, to say nothing of the physical joy of stretching one's limbs and bringing muscles into full play after 36 hours of comparative inactivity.

"We were amazed at the marvelous growth and change in St. Louis since last visited in 1904. The most aristocratic residential section of 11 years ago we found interspersed with business blocks. Scarcely had the exclamation of admiration of some magnificient private residence surrounded by its spacious lawns, died upon our lips before we were confronted by a thoroughly up-to-date grocery store, with its French plate windows emblazoned with "fresh eggs 20 cents a dozen," in glaring red.

"Those who still desired to be truly exclusive had been forced to move further out where they had purchased an acre or so and ensconced themselves in a palatial house in the center of it.

"Our arrival in St. Louis was marked by a temperature of summer heat; our departure in 24 hours by a terrific wind, rain and hail storm that delayed our train considerably while the track was cleared of debris. From St. Louis to Kansas City our course, for a time, lay along the Meremac river, the favorite picnicing summer resort of the St. Louians, along whose banks great farms with their dormitories, diningrooms and various other buildings equipped to accommodate as many as a hundred and fifty people, are owned and operated by large business concerns of St. Louis for the sole purpose of giving free to their employees week and week-end outings during the summer months. We learned, too, that nurses are kept in regular attendance to care for the sick.

"A double motive prompted us to tarry over-night in Kansas City. Despite our æsthetic tastes the physical self begins to cry out for freedom and comfort after being continually infringed upon, and constant riding in a Pullman sleeper, even with an observation car attached, may well be catalogued with that particular class of infringement. Then, too, Kansas City, with its new Union Station erected at a cost of $40,000,000, including land-track and terminal construction, claims the greatest growth of any American city in the last ten years, and we could not pass it by unheeded.

"All along the route we had noted with interest the agricultural outlook of the different sections of the country. The acres and acres of young cotton plants of Georgia were evidence that the cotton growers had not succumbed to the discouragements of the cotton crop of last year but are optimistically looking forward and lending their assistance to a return of prosperity in the near future. In Missouri were vast fields of healthy young corn, with sleek, well-fed cattle contentedly looking on; and our next day's ride carried us through the rich wheated plains of Kansas. On either side of the track the waving golden grain stretched in unbroken sheets to the very horizon line. But beyond, the great agricultural sections were supplanted by those of mineral wealth. Sometime during the night our speed slackened, the train proceeded by a series of lurches, the wheels shrieking and groaning. This laborious travel told its own story of climbing the steep grades to the higher altitudes of Colorado, an ascent that could be accomplished only by the aid of two powerful mountain engines.

"In the early morning snow-capped mountains were fast receding in the distance. Many yielded but grudging passage to our train, but we threaded our way between and around them on into the arid regions of New Mexico, where the desert wastes between the mountains could boast only of sage and scrub cedar, mysterious ruins of Indian pueblos and queer little adobe houses, crowded beyond their capacity with Mexicans or Indians, baking in the sun. At various stops these interesting little people frequented the train, offered their wares for sale, or simply furnished amusement by butting their heads together in the scramble for small coin showered upon them. Naturally, kodaks were brought into play, when we discovered to our surprise a resistance on the part of the Indians, who are very superstitious in regard to having their pictures taken—a superstition which a quarter readily banished and brought forth a quiet, natural pose.

"Bald mountains, volcanic peaks, old lava beds, dusty river beds and desert stretches marked our progress to Grand Canyon, Arizona, where we arrived in the wee, small hours of the morning. At 5 o'clock Mr. Foster and I stood on the rim of the Canyon itself, and in the subdued light of the early morning witnessed for the first time that great rent in the earth, as it were, with a whole mountain range shaped into architectural forms, banded and mottled with every conceivable color, dropped into the abyss, while over all the softest purple glow blended the coloring into one harmonious whole.

"From our view point the distance of thirteen miles across the Canyon was so illconceived that we could in no measure appreciate its extent or proportions until we took the seventeen-mile ride along the rim. The stupendousness, the grandeur and sublimity of that labyrinth is beyond human expression—it is the expression of God.

"To further comprehend the vast proportions, we contemplated a descent into the Canyon on the Bright Angel Trail, which zigzagged at an unrelenting pitch to the plateau 25 hundred feet below—less than half the descent—dropping over the edge of the plateau, as it seemed, to the river below. I admit that I was a bit wary of that trail lest its name might have some bearing upon the future condition of the one who attempted such a hazardous ride, but after talking with various parties returning from the trail and being assured by the guides that the mules had not thrown a tourist over the precipice for at least two weeks, I finally summoned sufficient courage to attempt the ride on the third day. Mr. Foster had been in a state of preparedness all the while and totally oblivious of the hazard of the journey, would have welcomed the sight of bear or wolf on the trail, I believe, had he been provided with a Winchester.

"When the time came to start, I mounted my mule—Salome—with all the jauntiness I could force, as it was anything but natural, and sat carefully studying the animal, to whom my life was to be entrusted while the rest of the party mounted. Fortunately an old pioneer of that section sauntered up just then and I asked him what he thought of the cast of the eye and the turn of Salome's ears. He solemnly looked the mule over and assured me that I need have no fear, as Salome had killed but eleven tourists and well-knew that the twelfth would mean dismissal from the service.

"The ride was thrilling to be sure, for the mules seemed to take a finedish delight in walking on the outer edge of the narrow trail nor are they schooled beyond leaving the path occasionally and climbing a few steps to a nice, green edible leaf on the mountainside; but they never object to the rider going along, so in all, it is an experience one cannot afford to miss. Then, to stand on the bank of the Colorado and watch it in its downward rush, dashing over and against huge rocks, swinging, swirling, sweeping everything in its path and disappearing between great vertical walls of rock, is one the great joys of a visit to Grand Canyon."

Essentials Of Road Management

Summarized briefly, the essentials to successful State highway administration, as demonstrated by the experience of the various State highway departments, are as follows: (a) The elimination of politics as a factor in State highway work; (b) the control by the State highway department of all work on which State funds are expended; (c) adequate appropriations for continuous maintenance of highways under efficient supervision from the day the highways are completed; (d) State supervision as to surveys, plans, and specifications of roads and bridges constructed under bond issues, and supervision of such other road and bridge work as requires considerable cash outlay and the exercise of engineering skill and knowledge.—Yearbook, U. S. Dept. Agriculture.

Health And Happiness Depend Upon Your Liver

That sluggish liver with its sluggish flow of bile is what makes the world look so dark at times. A Wonderful Antiseptic

Germs and infection aggravate ailments and retard healing. Stop that infection at once. Kill the germs and get rid of the poisons. For this purpose a single application of Sloan's Liniment not only kills the pain but destroys the germs. This neutralizes infection and gives nature assistance by overcoming congestion and gives a chance for the free and normal flow of the blood. Sloan's Liniment is an emergency doctor and should be kept constantly on hand. 25c., 50. The $1.00 size contains six times as much as the 25c.

Incendiary In Cordova

The suspicion that the recent fire at the plant of the Talbot Packing and Preserving Co., at Cordova, was of incendiary origin is strengthened by the statement, that about 4 p. m. on Thursday, of last week, someone entered the house of Henry H. Hunteman and set ffre to the bed in Mr. Hunteman's bedroom. The fact that the door of the room was closed is believed to have prevented a serious fire. As it was, no great damage was done. Mr. Hunteman is one of the managers of the packing company.
