know to this minute what he has received of the debts due on it — as I have never been able to prevail on him to render me any acct of either that, or my dealings with him since the year 1768 since which my accts against him amounts to several hundred pounds — That some time afterwards talking with him about the Negroes, I told him my daughters were determined to endeavour to recover them, he said if they did he would get the matter into Chancery, where he would keep it twenty years and spend a thousand pounds before they should get them — that with regard to my Book of accts which Mr Ridgale took from me in the manner above related and which Book he told me was delevered to him by Mr John Hanson Jr Mr Ridgale is mistaken for Mr Hanson never had the least property in that Book — nor ever had in his possession unless it might be settle his own and some other particular accts as any other Gentleman might have done.
