Make This Test For Acid-Stomach

There are millions of people who suffer almost daily from the horrors of an acid-stomach—indigestion; sour, gassy, stomach; distressing heartburn; sickening food-repeating; painful bloat and that miserable, puffed up, lumpy feeling after eating. Many of these people have tried treatment after treatment; medicine after medicine; others have gone to doctors and stomach specialists and some to hospitals, but in spite of all of their efforts they have obtained no lasting relief or a permanent cure.

These symptoms simply mean acid-stomach. If allowed to run on, they are very likely to cause a lot of serious trouble. Dyspepsia, rheumatism, gout, lumbago, sciatica, splitting headache, dizzy spells, nervousness, sleeplessness, mental depression, melancholia, a feeling of listlessness and all-goneness—these are just a few of the disorders which can be traced to acid-stomach. As a matter of fact, acid-stomach is often the direct cause of those almost incurable conditions known as catarrh of the stomach, intestinal ulcer, and cancer of the stomach. The lives of those who suffer from these serious troubles are nothing short of daily agony. Surely, then, you must see how important it is to go at once to the seat of the trouble—acid-stomach. You know what acid-mouth does to the teeth—how it eats right through the hard enamel and causes them to decay. Think then of the havoc that must be caused by excess acid in the stomach!

Even if you are not suffering any immediate stomach pains, but are not feeling just as fit and fine as you should, you should by all means make this test: Go to your drug store at once and get a big box of EATONIC. It is in the form of pleasant-tasting tablets—you eat them like a bit of candy. EATONIC is prepared for just one purpose—correcting acid-stomach by driving out the excess acid. EATONIC literally absorbs the excess acid. It brings instant relief from the pains of indigestion, heartburn belching, sour, gassy stomach, bloat, etc. It makes the stomach pure, sweet, cool and comfortable, puts it in a normal, healthy condition, so that your food is properly digested. You need every bit of strength you can possibly get out of the food you eat—and EATONIC helps you get it.

Don't put this test off if you value your future good health and happiness. You run no chance at all because EATONIC is absolutely guaranteed to give you relief or your druggist will refund your money. The cost is a mere trifle.

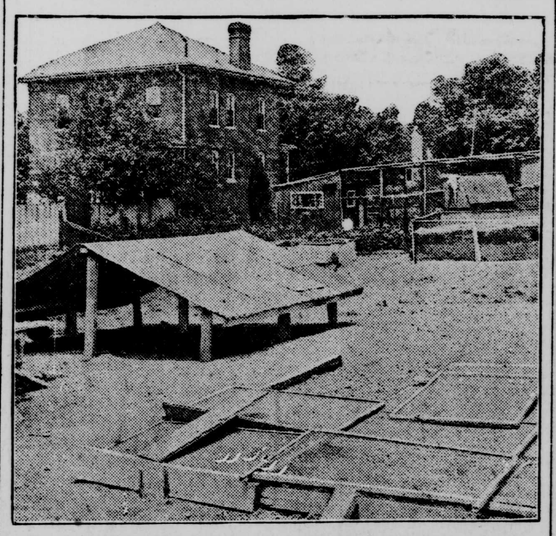
TOWN DWELLERS CAN FIGHT HIGH PRICES OF MEAT AND EGGS BY RAISING POULTRY



Shelter From Rays of the Sun, Especially During the Hot Season of Summer, Is Necessary for the Chickens.

Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Perhaps the fact that the early morning crow of chanticleer does not adjust itself to the daylight saving law may explain why the rooster is unpopular within city confines. Anyway, the metropolitan prejudice against the cock crow exists. To meet it the United States department of agriculture suggests roosterless flocks. It is pointed out that hens will lay just as well without a rooster in the flock, and eggs, not chickens, are the principal product for which town dwellers keep poultry. Where roosters are objectionable and it is desired to raise chicks these can be purchased when a few days old.

Small flocks of laying hens in town and city back yards are an important branch of poultry keeping. Though the value of each flock's product may be small, the aggregate is large. The product of such a flock, both in eggs and fowls for the table, may be obtained at a relatively low cost, because of the possibility of utilizing table scraps and kitchen waste which would otherwise be thrown away. A small flock of hens, even as few as six or eight, should produce eggs enough, where used economically, for a family of four or five persons throughout the entire year, except during the molting period of the fall and early winter.

Small Flock Helps.

By the preservation of surplus eggs produced during the spring and early summer, the period of scant egg production can be provided for. The keeping of pullets instead of hens also will insure the production of eggs at this time. Not only will eggs from the home flock materially reduce the cost of living, but superior freshness and quality are in themselves well worth the effort expended. Eggs are a highly nutritious food and are so widely used as to be almost indispensable, while an occasional chicken dinner is relished universally.

Objection is frequently raised to the keeping of poultry in towns and cities because of the odor which may result, and the noise made by the roosters' crowing, particularly in the early morning. In some cases city regulations have been formulated to control poultry keeping. Where there are city regulations it is necessary to become familiar with their provisions and to conform to them. There is no necessity for the poultry flock to become a nuisance to the neighborhood when dropping boards are cleaned daily and the houses and yards are maintained in sanitary condition.

The rooster need not be a source of annoyance. Unless it is intended to hatch chickens from the flock it is unnecessary to keep a male bird. The fact that there is no male in the flock will exert no bad influence on the egg output. As a rule, according to the present practices of the leading poultrymen, it is customary to dispose of the male birds just as soon as the hatching season is over. This is desirable not only from the standpoint of eliminating noise, but also as a food economy measure and in order that the subsequent production of eggs may be infertile, as such eggs keep better and are superior for preserving or for marketing. The suburban or city flock is often roosterless, while the hens are required to observe restricted "metes and bounds" so that they will not stray into the neighboring yards and gardens.

General-Purpose Breeds Are Good.

One of the general-purpose breeds, such as the Plymouth Rock, Wyandotte, Rhode Island Red, and Orpington, is best adapted for general backyard poultrying, the mature fowls of these breeds, because of their larger size, making better table fowls than the Leghorns, while the young chickens for the same reason make better friers and roasters, as compared with young of the egg breeds which are only suitable as smaller broilers. The general-purpose breeds are also "broody," the hens making good sitters and mothers, which is a decided advantage when it is desired to hatch and to raise chickens, as the hens of the egg breeds seldom are broody and in any event are unreliable sitters and mothers.

It is advisable to keep some pure breed or variety. Where this is done, sales at a profitable figure can often be made of breeding stock or of eggs for hatching.

The size of the flock which can be most efficiently kept will depend upon the space and upon the amount of table scraps or other waste available for feed. It is a mistake to overstock the available yardage, as better results will come from the maintenance of a few hens in a small yard where the fowls have plenty of scratching room.

Hens in Every Back Yard.

In view of the high price of poultry products on city markets, specialists of the United States department of agriculture recommend that every town or city family in a position to do so should maintain a back-yard flock. The financial outlay is small, while the returns are comparatively large if the proper management is practiced. No fowl other than hens need be purchased in the late spring, and they will develop into early laying pullets which will yield a stream of eggs during the time when eggs are relatively scarce and high in price. The owner can continue this practice of either buying day-old chicks in the spring or purchasing pullets in the early fall, and in this way can maintain his flock despite the absence of Chanticleer.

USE STANDARD-BRED TO IMPROVE QUALITY

Poultry Specialists Urge Replacement of Mongrel Stock.

Interest in Improved Stock Shown by Number of Undesirable Fowls Culled From Flocks in All Parts of the Country.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Quality, as well as quantity, is the object of the poultry drive now being conducted by poultry specialists of the United States department of agriculture. Special emphasis was placed last year on increasing production. This being accomplished, the poultry specialists, working in co-operation with the state extension forces, now urge replacement of mongrel stock with standard-bred stock to improve both production and quality. The campaign really began last fall when decided interest in improved stock was shown by the number of undesirable birds culled from flocks in all parts of the country. The culling work done in Mississippi is illustrative of what has been done in many localities. The poultry specialists worked in nine counties and secured the culling of 1,349 flocks, from which 10,792 birds, weighing 25,900 pounds, were discarded as unprofitable producers. As can be seen from the extremely small average weight of the birds culled—2.4 pounds—the poultry stock in this section needed the culling. The eggs were small and inferior and did not have a good standing on the New Orleans market. As the culling campaign progressed, the poultry specialists urged the keeping of improved stock. Enough progress along this line has already been made to give Mississippi eggs a better reputation on the New Orleans market.

Every chicken lost represents not only a loss of what has cost money to produce, but also the loss of future profit.

* * *

To make a success with chickens it is necessary not to keep too many hens over one year old, using mostly pullets.

Frequent use of some good liquid disinfectant in brood coops, brooders, etc., will often prevent disease which otherwise would prove troublesome.

Do not on any account breed from any kind of fowls which are not in fine health and strong and vigorous, because weak or sickly breeders produce weak and sickly chicks.

Build Nests Like an Oven.

Do you know how the oven bird got its name? Well, it was because its nest built among the leaves or pine needles on the ground is arched of pine an oven-like appearance, says the American Forestry association, Washington, which is encouraging bird conservation through bird-house building contests among school children and is conducting a national campaign. You do not see the oven bird sitting on the topmost twig of a tree like some other members of the feathery tribe, but he sticks close to the ground, mounting to the lower branches of a tree only to sing or to scold an intruder. The song of the oven bird somewhat resembles the word "teacher."
