FALSE NOTIONS OF U. S. WEALTH

Prosperity and Activity Prove Deceptive

WILLIAMS GIVES WARNING

A Large Volume Of Money, Says The Comptroller Of The Currency, Cannot Mean Real Wealth.

Washington.—Warning that the prosperity and activity indicated by banking figures may become artificial and deceptive was given by John Skelton Williams in his annual report as comptroller of the currency.

Remarking that in 1919 there was not a national bank failure involving loss to depositors, and that the banking power of the country has increased 900 per cent. in the last 30 years, Mr. Williams added: "A large volume of money cannot mean increase of real wealth while there is decrease of production and the accumulation and movement of securities and currency represent abnormally inflated values put on diminished supplies of essentials.

"It is clear that no country can be enriched by merely increasing prices of products produced and consumed by its own people. We might prosper for the moment, if we could sell our products abroad at the higher prices and take payment in gold or in goods at normal prices, but we gain nothing when we sell and buy at corresponding abnormal prices."

All the gold in the world, aside from $3,135,000,000 held by this country was estimated by the comptroller at $6,000,000,000, or only about 40 per cent. of the credit balance of this country in the last six years. For that reason he urged that this country should adopt a policy of reasonable help and encouragement toward debtor countries with no assets immediately available, but having fair prospects of being able to pay out if given time.

Praise for the part played by the national banks in financing the world during a time of stress was given unstintingly by the Comptroller. He expressed hope that the conservative influence of the banks would lead manufacturers and business men to accept for the present smaller profits with a view to building up general prosperity and the habit of thrift and economy among the masses of the people.

CAN'T CURE UNREST BY LEGISLATION.

New York.—Industrial unrest cannot be cured by legislation, in the opinion of United States Senator James W. Wadsworth, who declared in an address at the luncheon of the Women's Republican Club that there are too many laws, about 60,000 being now on the statute books. Men's lives in industry and elsewhere cannot be governed by legislation, he asserted, and they cannot be made to do the things they do not want to do.

"You can't drive them; you must teach them," he added. "You must have closer human contact. It will do more to rectify unrest than the passage of laws."

NO AMERICAN AT LEAGUE COUNCIL

International Body Begins Work in London

ONE DISCOURAGING FEATURE

Absence Of An American Representative The One Blot That Mars The Symmetry Of The Original Plan Of The League.

London.—The Council of the League of Nations formally opened its meeting here at noon. Arthur J. Balfour, representing Great Britain, assumed the chair on the suggestion of Leon Bourgeois, representative of France.

In his speech of welcome to the delegates Mr. Balfour said there was only one blot on the meeting, and that was that there were eight nations represented instead of nine. He said that it was not desirable to touch on the absence of the United States, but he referred to it as marring the symmetry of the original plan of the league.

M. Bourgeois in reply added a word of regret that the nations represented were only eight in number.

"As I myself was one of the plenipotentiaries at Versailles, I am sure nobody I am now addressing and none of my friends in America will think I am doing wrong in expressing my personal regret, that for the moment at all events we have not reached our complete number," said Mr. Balfour in his reference to the lack of American representation in the council at the present time. He expressd the opinion that the members of the council would be able to do useful work and that an institution "which carries within itself so many promises for the future may do something towards the consummation which all desire."

The council intrusted M. Bourgeois with organization of the permanent court of international justice provided for by Article 14 of the league covenant, and consideration of the proposed list of international jurists to be invited to form a committee to prepare plans for constitution of the court; Count Quinones de Leon, Spanish ambassador to France, with consideration of the duties of the league relating to transit, port, waterways and railways; Dr. Gastoa Dachuna, Brazilian ambassador to France, with the constitution of an international body for dealing with health problems, and Baron Kelshiro Matsui, Japanese ambassador to France, with the league's guarantee with reference to the Polish minority treaty.

The addresses of Mr. Balfour and M. Bourgeois were interpreted into French and English. Mr. Balfour, with reference to the decision to hold secret sessions, explained: "We have concluded that the details of our work cannot advantageously take place in open assembly." He declared that if the work of the council was to be done efficiently, it was desirable, and even necessary, that the detailed discussions be carried on with perfect freedom.

John W. Davis, American Ambassador to the Court of St. James, will not attend either the second meeting of the Council of the League of Nations or the meeting of the Premiers of Great Britain, France and Italy, which will be held here this week, unless he is instructed by Washington, according to an announcement at the American embassy. Such instructions have not been received, it is said.

WILLING TO PLAY ROLE OF MARTYR

Crown Prince is Ready to Stand Trial

NOTIFIES ALL THE ALLIES

Says Consequences Would Be Immeasurable If Demands Were Carried Out—Prefers Being "Victim."

Washington.—President Wilson received a cablegram from the former Crown Prince William of Germany announcing that he is willing to stand trial instead of some of the German officers who were called for by the Allies.

The cablegram was dispatched from Wierengen and declared that if the Allies demanded a "victim" the Crown Prince was willing to be that victim rather than that many of the former German officers whose names were mentioned in the Allied list of war guilty, should be surrendered.

Text Of Cablegram.

Following is the text of the message the crown prince sent to President Wilson:

"To the President of the United States of North America.

"Mr. Wilson, Washington.

"Mr. President—The demand for the delivery of Germans of every walk of life has again confronted my country, sorely tried by four years of war and one year of severe internal struggles with a crisis that is without a precedent in the history of the world as affecting the life of a people. That a government can be found in Germany which would carry out the demanded surrender is out of the question; the consequences to Europe of an enforcement of the demand by violence are incalculable; hatred and revenge would be made eternal. As the former successor to the throne of my German fatherland, I am willing at this fateful hour to stand up for my compatriots.

"If the Allied and Associated governments want a victim, let them take me, instead of the 900 Germans, who have committed no offense other than that of serving their country during the war. WILHELM.

"Wieringen Island, February 9, 1920.

Sent To All The Allies.

London.—An Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Amsterdam says that the former German Crown Prince has telegraphed to President Wilson and the heads of the Allied governments saying he is willing to stand trial instead of the German officers who were demanded by the Allies last week.

The ex-Crown Prince was quoted as saying that "the consequences to all Europe would be immeasurable if the demand of the Allies for the listed German officers were carried into force."

REGIMENTS TO EVERY STATE.

Baker Announces Allocation Of Regulars For Purposes Of Recruiting.

Washington. — Regiments of the United States Army will be allocated to every state in the Union "for recruiting purposes" and to create a "bond of sympathetic interest" between the people and the "new army," according to a statement received from Secretary of War Baker by members of Congress.

Infantry, field artillery, coast artillery and cavalry will be allocated to most of the states, while engineers will be sent into a few states. Persons joining the Army in one state will be assigned to the regiment allocated to that state.

TRIBUTES TO LANE IN SENATE.

Myers And Phelan Regret Secretary's Retirement.

Washington.—A tribute to Secretary Lane, who will retire as Secretary of the Interior March 1, was paid in the Senate by Senator Myers, of Montana, and Phelan, of California, both Democrats.

Senator Myers said Mr. Lane was an able, far-seeing, efficient official, while Senator Phelan said he expressed "the feeling of the people of California and perhaps the entire nation when I say that his severance of relations as an official of the Government is a matter of profound regret."

WILSON'S HELP REQUESTED.

He Is Asked To Indorse Christian Americanization Plan.

Washington.—President Wilson was asked to indorse the Christian Americanization movement to raise $25,000,000 for the eradication of Bolshevism and other forms of radicalism through education rather than force.

Dr. David E. Olson, chancellor of the International Christian College of Minneapolis and general secretary of the movement, presented the plan to President Wilson through Secretary Tumulty.

PUBLIC WARNED AGAINST BAD FOOD.

Washington.—Formal warning to the public against food that show any evidences of decomposition was sent out by the Public Health Service as an aftermath of the recent cases at Memphis, Tenn., and elsewhere, in which fatalities followed the eating of ripe bottled olives, found subsequently to contain poison generated by decomposition.

"Persons are warned," telegrams sent to state health officers said, "not to eat any food that is off in color or odor or which is packed in containers that seem to have swelled, or which, when opened, show an accumulation of gas or evidences of decomposition."

The messages contained also information relative to the origin of poisons in the olive cases.

JAPS DRIVEN FROM NORTHERN KOREA

Korean Insurgents Are Aided by Bolsheviki

MOVEMENT IS WIDESPREAD

Japanese, Attacked By Superior Forces, Compelled To Give Ground After Sustaining Heavy Losses.

London.—Northern Korea has been evacuated by the Japanese, it is claimed in a wireless dispatch from Moscow quoting an Omsk message. The population rose to aid Korean forces from Chinese territory, it is declared.

The Omsk message, as given in the Bolshevik wireless, says that on February 6 bands of Koreans raised in Chinese territory, crossed the frontier and attacked the Japanese. Masses of the population are joining the insurgents, it is added, the Japanese retreating and evacuating Northern Korea.

Washington.—Official dispatches received here said a force of 2,000 Koreans, armed principally with equipment furnished by the Bolsheviki, crossed into Northern Korea from Kirin, Manchuria, and attacked a Japanese post of 700 men at night, killed 300 of them and routed the remainder.

According to these dispatches the attack was the initiation of an active rebellion in Korea. It was described as "the beginning of a tremendous affair."

TO ABOLISH HOUSING BODY.

By Senate Bill These Properties Will Go To Treasury.

Washington.—A bill by Senator Fernald, Republican, Maine, abolishing the Housing Corporation and transferring its affairs to the Treasury Department on June 30 next was passed by the Senate. It now goes to the House.

Before taking final action upon the bill the Senate amended it so as to provide for the turning over of the houses and dormitories constructed by the corporation at the naval reservation at Indian Head, Md.; at Charles Town, W. Va., and at Puget Sound Navy Yard, at Bremerton, Wash., to the Treasury Department instead of the Navy Department, as proposed by the committee. Without a record vote the Senate also adopted the committee provisions authorizing the Secretary of War to turn over to the Public Health Service such surplus hospital furniture and medical supplies as may be required by health service hospitals.

Allies Pay No Attention To Offer To Stand Trial As Substitute.

Paris.—The Allies will ignore the offer of the former German Crown Prince to stand trial instead of the German officers and state officials demanded for trial, it was learned from officials sources today. It was pointed out that if the ex-Crown Prince were sincere he would surrender himself instead of launching proclamations."

Himalayan Holidays

Cargo Boats on the Jhelum River.

"THERE are times in every man's life," says Sir Robert Baden-Powell in his charming book, "Indian Memories," "when his whole being cries out for a steady spell of doing nothing in particular, at least, nothing that matters. Nowhere is this so acutely felt as in India." And at no time, one might add, as toward the middle of an Indian hot weather, says A. L. Wright in Country Life. But though India in the plains may, at times, become well-nigh intolerable, India in the hills provides a solace such as may be enjoyed in few other countries in the world.

There is something particularly fascinating about the Himalayas. Maybe it is their immensity or their vast silences; but probably it is their infinite variety that makes the greatest appeal. For there is always some new aspect to be discovered, some new interest; and no man can hope to live long enough to be able to say he knows them thoroughly, nor is it possible to see so much of them that they begin to grow stale. No wonder that men who have first visited them as subalterns go back year after year, revisiting old haunts or discovering new, and that some have found them so attractive that even on retirement they have settled down in some peaceful valley to spend their declining years.

In times of peace the army officer in India is usually fortunate enough to be able to get away from his regiment and the plains for at least a part of the hot weather, and with a month or more at his disposal, the hills provide him with an endless choice as to how he should spend his leave.

Anything You May Wish Is There.

Of few places in the world can it be so truly said as of the Himalayas that they cater for every taste. Do you want a month's sheer idleness? Under what more attractive circumstances can it be obtained than on the Jhelum river, floating leisurely along in a Kashmiri doonga, or houseboat? A perfect climate, gorgeous scenery and everything complete for thorough laziness; what could be more ideal? And should mere loafing become monotonous, it can always be varied with a little gentle fish-spearing, or short trips may be made into the mountains, which come down on either side, offering tempting fields for exploration. But the average healthy young man will probably require something more strenuous. Mountaineering? One has only to read of the exploits of the Bullock-Workmans to realize that the Himalayas provide sufficient tests of skill even for the most experienced climber. Big game shooting? Given sufficient time, there are places beyond Kashmir, such as Chilas, Astore, Baltistan and Ladakh, which are veritable sportsmen's paradises. With luck the bag may include both black and brown bear, thar, ibex, burhel, gural, the ordinary leopard; maybe the snow leopard, and possibly the wild sheep, the Ovis ammon. A shooting trip of this nature is, however, rather a long and serious undertaking, but even with two months' leave or less there are many places where excellent sport can be obtained. There is, of course, the country in the immediate vicinity of Kashmir, but, as may be imagined, this has been much harried and shot over, and other places equally accessible, though less frequented, are preferable where sport is the main object.

Small game shooting, being closed till the middle of September, is rarely enjoyed by the visitor to the hills unless he specially takes his leave right at the end of the hot weather. The Himalayas, however, abound in small game. Probably nowhere in the world are pheasants found in greater variety, but, though in abundance, their shooting is often apt to prove disappointing, usually owing to the vastness of the forests they inhabit. The same cannot be said of the chikore, which can give as fine a day's sport and exercise as the keenest shikari can hope for. The fisherman will also find himself catered for, as both in Kashmir and Kulu trout have been put out in the streams and now give excellent sport.

Wonders of the Forests.

Shikar, though by no means the least, is however, but one of the many attractions of the hills. The botanist, naturalist or entomologist will all find plenty to occupy their time, while in few places is there greater scope for the artist and photographer. The forests, too, are full of interest. Get the local forest officer to show you round his jungles—he is a lonely man and usually only too pleased to see a visitor—and you may then begin to realize what is involved in the making of a railway sleeper. You may even get some idea of what is meant by forestry. You will see trees such as are rarely to be found at home, magnificent old groves of deodar, maybe from 800 to 1,000 years old, which have been spared from the ax on account of their sanctity—for the deodar is indeed the tree of the gods and no hill temple is complete without its grove. Felling on precipitous hillsides and floating down roaring hill torrents provide ample excitement for those who want it, but, perhaps, most wonderful to the ordinary visitor are the primitive methods of conversion. Sawing is still carried out entirely by hand, and carriage from the forest to the floating stream is nearly all done by human transport. Although wire ropeways are now beginning to be used in places, it is still by no means uncommon to come across a sturdy hill-woman almost running down a steep mountain path with two broad-gauge sleepers on her back and a baby suspended in a blanket in front.

To the student of folklore and anthropology the Himalayas offer a wide field of research, particularly the Hindu-inhabited tract in the eastern Punjab. It is, however, by no means an easy matter to get the people to talk of their religion and customs. The hillman is a simple-minded soul, a splendid fellow when you get to know him, but he takes a lot of knowing. His inherent shyness and what is almost a timid distrust of strangers make it next to impossible for anyone who has not lived in the hills or visited the same tract year after year, to get him to speak of his religious beliefs. But if ever you are fortunate enough to get him talking, you are taken back at once to the days of the Old Testament and find yourself living amid gods who speak and dispense justice to their devotees, rewarding or punishing as may be necessary. You will find an explanation of every phenomenon of nature.

The hillman is passionately attached to his native highlands, and nothing will induce him to forsake them for the plains, which he regards almost as a foreign country. And having learned to love the hills oneself, one can well understand his attachment, for the call of the Himalayas is well-nigh irresistible.

HOW OCEAN BECAME SALTY

Scandinavian Myth Is One of the Best Known of the Legends on the Subject.

The old Scandinavian myth, with a good many reefs to fit this space, is like this: There were two brothers, one of whom was rich and mean and the other poor, but rather a good sort. The poor one having asked the rich one for something for dinner received a ham and was told to go to a certain place noted for its warm climate. The poor man innocently started off to find the place, and upon his arrival managed to trade the ham for a machine that would grind out anything its owner wished for. He carried it home and to please an irate wife, who was huffy because he had provided nothing to eat, set the mill going, and it ground a fine dinner, including a tablecloth. It was borrowed by the rich brother, who asked it to grind fish and gruel, an odd combination, but there is no accounting for tastes. The rich brother did not know how to stop it and the place was submerged in fish and gruel. The brother was sent for, who stopped it and took it home and, after he had made himself enormously wealthy and pasted his premises with gold, let a sea captain take it, who wanted a cargo of salt. The captain forgot to ask for the combination that would stop the mill, so it ground until the ship went to the bottom; and it is still grinding away in the briny deep.

New Optical Glass.

A new German optical glass is designed for colorless spectacles—instead of the usual colored ones—to give protection against ultra-violet rays, such as give trouble in climbing high mountains or working in the light of the mercury-quartz lamp. The glass is due to the discovery that a suitable mixture of rare earths in glass flux absorbs the harmful rays. Such earths as neodymium, erbium, cerium, lanthanium and thorium may be used in varying combinations; and the protective glass shows objects and landscapes in natural colors.
