The Emblem of LIBERTY AND HUMANITY

WHAT Has the Present Congress Done? is the title of a poster which is decorating the walls of numerous post-offices in this land of the free. For one thing, it has cut a billion dollars off the estimates of the administration department as submitted last year.

AN ingenious treasury statement conveys the agreeable information that that the national debt was reduced 715 millions dollars in March. That's fine reading, gives one quite a glow. Especially if we don't happen to know the sort of figuring the treasury uses to get those gratifying results.

DANIELS bears the blame, and i tis rendered heavier by the fact that he stubbornly placed his inexperience in opposition to the practical knowledge of naval men, overriding their suggestions and holding himself infallible with an obstinacy copied from his chief in the White House.

REPRESENTATIVE Humphreys. Mississippi, democrat, has heaved a few bricks toward the occupant of the White House, and in an effect to smoke Mr. Wilson out has told the world what he thinks would happen to a third term candidate and the party that advocated his election.

THE appointment of Mr. Morgenthau as ambassador to Mexico does not seem to be pleasing to Carranza, although the statement was made at the White House that it was intended to demonstrate the President's lack of sympathy with those who have been advocating intervention.

NO better evidence can be found of the irresistible growth of the Republican party than is shown by the calibre of men composing the Texas Republican Council. No stronger body of men was ever assembled under and form of organization than that which the roster of the association shows.

IF there is no other way this might be a good one. It remained for a Democrat to attempt to legislate Postmaster General Burleson out of a job. A member of that party from Missouri has introduced a bill to abolish the Post Office Department and turn over its present duties to a Federal postal commisson.

A. MITCHELL PALMER, federal attorney general, is called "the fighting Quaker," a sobriquet much made use of in exploitation of his candidacy for the democratic presidential nomination, but whom he has ever fought or is going to fight is involved in mystery. Certainly the profiteers and the sugar conspirators are not of [illegible] as ever laid low and [illegible]ct that they

The Denton National Bank
Denton, Md.

IS as unchangeable as the famous laws of the Medes and the Persians.

The individual who spends more than he earns—or, as is far too often the case, spends all before he earns—travels in a hopeless circle. He cannot advance, and "he who does not advance, recedes."

The person who ssves BEFORE he spends inevitably registers progress. Why not put the principle to the test?
