you'd come into the House and talk a little with your uncle, he seems to me to be something obstinate for he seems to leave all to some and none to the rest he seems to leave all his Land to two of his children and none to the third son and said I think it looks a little hard upon which this Deponent went into the House and said to the Deceased I think its a pitty but what you should leave the value of one hundred Acres of Land and better to Joshua, the Deceased answered I shant leave any to him, upon which this Deponent and Mr Jones both used pearsuasive arguments to leave him for Joshua the quantity of Land aforementioned but the Deced seemed displeased with this deponent and the said Jones and said it would do him no Service to leave him any Land for he's very weak and you know what sort of neighbourhood here is they'll soot him out of it. upon which Mr Jones said I cant stay any longer for I must go away about my Business before the Justice and upon the same went of and when he was gone this deponent said to the Deceased I suppose you dont intend to have any more writing done for you then the deced answered no it's late in the day and I am not well in the latter part of the day upon which this deponent said if you Dont intend to have any more done I may go home too the Deceased said if you do you might as well not have come for I cant do any thing but in a morning and this deponent staid till the morning and then asked the the presence of William Tell William Neal and Desmond Dickinson and then desired they would sign it as Witnesses to what he had done to which they did and then the deceased desired desired this to keep it upon which he took the Will and went home and about eight days afterwards Josiah Dickinson came again to him to this deponent and told him his father wanted him again and to make a present of what he designed to do upon which this deponent went to the Deceased and when he this deponent came into the House he asked the Deceased how he did he answered much as I was
