To Give You Good Telephone Service

TELEPHONE employees have only one aim in their work—to give you good and continuous telephone service.

They are willing to make, and do make, sacrifices and suffer personal inconvenience that you might be satisfactorily served.

Every time a fire, storm or flood puts the service of a town in danger the telephone men are on the job, be it day or night, to keep the service going. And they don't object to long hours under disagreeable conditions.

The operators, too, are ever watchful to serve you at all hours and to give you prompt and accurate connections. They, too, do not hesitate to work hard and long when public service demands it.

Our engineering force is constantly studying ways and means to improve the service and equipment, while our office employees do everything in their power to make pleasant your transactions with the telephone company.

In short, all the telephone people—from the executives down to the newest clerks—have before them always the ideal of service.

We do not claim to be perfect, however, and probably there are times when you have some criticism to make of the service or equipment.

At such times we will consider it a favor if you will notify us immediately. It is our pleasure to serve you.
