GOOD ROADS ARE COSTLY; FEDERAL AID HELPS BUILD 'EM

Road projects in 18 states, totaling more than 265 miles and costing an average of over $29,000 per mile, were approved during July by the Bureau of Public Roads, United States Department of Agriculture, for federal aid, according to the bureau's publication, "Public Roads," just off the press. The total federal aid approved for these projects is placed at $3,023,152, the remainder of the cost being borne by the states.

All told, there were 56 such projects approved during the month. New York led with 20, Pennsylvania came second with 7, and Kentuckey and South Carolina tied for third with 5 projects each. Four Texas projects were approved; New Mexico, Washington and Wisconsin had two each; and Arizona, Arkansas, Kansas, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, Mississippi, Oklahoma, Tennessee and Virginia each had one project approved during the month.

Wide variation was shown in the character of materials to be used in building the approved roads, but concrete, bituminous macadam, and gravel were the chief materials.

MARYLAND FARMERS ARE KEEPING BUSY

College Park, Oct. 19.—While cities and towns are wondering what to do with their armies of unemployed, Maryland farms are operating at nearly normal capacity and providing employment for practically all available farm labor.

This in substance is the answer which the county agents of the state have made to a telegram from Secretary of Agriculture Henry C. Wallace to Dr. Thomas B. Symons, director of the University of Maryland Extension Service, requesting information regarding the unemployment on Maryland farms. A summary of the reports received, including all but one county of the state, shows an average estimated unemployment among farm help of only 5.2 per cent. Twelve counties reported no unemployment whatever and in some cases it was stated that farmers are making more complaint regarding inability to secure help than is coming from the ranks of the unemployed.

Somerset County reported the highest percentage of unemployment, 50 per cent, among colored farm laborers. About 90 per cent of the farm labor in Somerset County, according to County Agent C. Z. Keller, is made up of colored men and women who find their chief occupations in the picking and handling of truck crops. Unfavorable weather in this section materially lowered the yields of strawberries and early potatoes, it is said, while the slump in the canning industry resulted in a reduced acreage of tomatoes, thus affecting labor demands.

The situation in Somerset, however, is not considered serious, according to Mr. Keller, because of the fact that a large percentage of the colored farm hands own their own small places in negro settlements where they have small gardens and are able to raise their own hogs and poultry. A favorable oyster season with the opening up of the packing houses, also can be expected to furnish some relief in the opinion of Mr. Keller.

Unemployment in Calvert County is estimated at 25 per cent and in Washington County at 15 per cent, although in the latter county the report from County Agent S. E. Day states that out of 50 requests from farmers for help during corn harvest only about 10 per cent could be filled. With the exception of Somerset, Calvert and Washington counties, where the figures are exceptionally high, unemployment throughout the state averages little more than one per cent.
