Sallie's Temptations

AND THEY LIVED---

"Why she would be the last person on earth I'd tell even if I had known the camp story at the time." he declared.

"You mean to tell me that your brother hadn't told you then?"

"No, and not even later, except by his look of astonisment and a few questions he asked when he saw Anne and I told him she was the girl to whom I'd been engaged. It's true he set me to thinking, (I know him so well) and in a flash it all came back to me. Then I, too, recalled the ugly tale at camp."

"She said you thought her face was familiar the first time you'd ever met."

"By Jove!" he exclaimed, "did she even remember that?" Then a puzzled expression swept over his face as if he were trying to figure things out.

Then he shook his head.

"What's the matter?"

"Nothing." he replied slowly, "it's just that I'm sorry she thought my brother or I would ever say anything about her that was the least bit unkind."

From what he had said and the varying emotions that played on his face, I began to understand the situation that, up to this time, had been a complicated affair. It was plain to me now that Anne, seeing Curtiss with his brother, and having a guilty conscience, figured that being his brother, he would tell Curtiss about her disgraceful behavior at the camp and so she imagined that if she told the story first, the sheer nerve of it would keep anyone from believeing any bit of scandal that might leak out. Poor Anne! She might have known that two such men would have shielded her name.

"Then, Curtiss, you didn't fall on your knees when she gave you back your ring, and cry?" I teased.

He laughed outright.

"I never heard such rot."

"She said you did and you see I wasn't very thrilled over being second choice," I said pouting, but when I saw he was about to reassure me by taking me in his arms, I stopped my pretending and flashed him a smile instead. "Let's stop talking about it, I feel sorry for her," I declared.

" You would, you wonderful, wonderful girl."

Again he tried to take me in his arms but I jumped up, and raced down the beach. He followed and we laughed happily as we ran. Reaching the cottage he turned to me and said, "You needn't run. It won't do you any good for I'm going to pursue you the rest of my life. Besides, your father has invited me to stay for dinner. Furthermore, you'll have to dine with me alone for he's gone to town with some friends."

"Does he know, I mean — er —" I stammered.

"If you mean does he know how I adore you. Yes, because I told him so, and moreover, young lady, I have his permission to win you, if I can, so you see you haven't much chance."

I made a terrific face at him and darted aside.

After dinner we walked on the porch.

Atlantic Beach is always entrancing whether at noontide, twilight or dawn. But there was a poignant beauty about the water tonight. Like a broad ribbon of pale gold, the moonbeams kept tryst with the capricious waves and they flung their golden hair about and danced madly while Florida stars looked down.

We stood motionless, beguiled by the delicate loveliness of the sight.

For one moment, there was silence between us. A breathless expectancy —a rapture known only to lovers who stand alone on majestic heights while the winds of the world rush by.

"Curtiss.'

"Yes, darling."

"I was just wondering something."

Silence.

"Yes, can I know what it is sweetheart?"

"I don't know. I've an idea though that you'd disapprove."

"Please, Sallie."

"Well, I was just wondering, Curtiss, if——"

"If what, sweetheart?"

"Well, if you'd mind VERY much if I showed you the lady in the moon?"

"You adorable little minx!" he cried and gathered me close in his arms.

THE FIRST GRADERS

..Do you remember how you felt when you began going to school? How strange everything was? What a new world you entered? Child health specialists all agee that much of the mental mal-adjustment—the nervousness that often crops up during the later years of a child's school life—could be avoided if a little special care were exercised during these early years. ..

..Speaking of the care needed by the little first-graders during the transition days from babyhood to childhood, Dr. J. H. M. Knox, Jr., chief of the Bureau of Child Hygiene of the State Department of Health, said, "Very few grown-ups realize the mental and physical strain the six year-olbds are under when they first start in on the great adventure of going to school. The child has some pretty hard problems to tackle, and needs all the reserve force that can be mustered for him.

"A little special care at this time, particularly with reference to regular hours of rest and sleep and avoidance of unnecessary excitedment, will do much to give these beginners at school the mental poise that is so much needed. It is equally important that care be taken of their diet; that they be given simple nourishing food, at times and in the quantities when it can be most easily digested.

"For instance, because of their anxiety to get off in time, little children often neglect their breakfast, or gobble it down in a hurry. To offset this, the child should take a simple lunch to school, a sandwich made of thin slices of bread and butter, or bread and jam, to be eaten at the mid-morning recess. If milk is served at the school, a glass of milk can be taken at the same time. When the child comes home at noon, the principal meal of the day should be eaten.

"But just as important is the afternoon rest. It is not necessary that the child actually sleep, but it should be encouraged to lie down in a quiet room for from half an hour to an hour. A child of six needs twelve hours sleep at night. After the beginning of the school year, 7.30 should be the regular bed time. And this rule should not be broken. Little children should never be taken out to evening entertainments—movies and other exciting diversions. There will be plenty of time for them later on."

THE ELECTRIC POWER AGE.
AN OLD MAID'S MONEY.
WHO IS RESPONSIBLE?
THE HORSE WITH CLAWS.

The State of Washington plans gigantic water power development, banks in Seattle reflect general prosperity in the Northwest. Those Seattle banks will need bigger vaults and capitalization increased by a billion, when the power begins its work.

Maine will harness 700,000 horsepower in the Bay of Fundy. The plan approved by voters and scientific experts calls for one hundred millions. Power enough will be produced to supply the whole of New England, and ten times one hundred million would not equal the value of such power.

In waterpower and the electric force generated lies not the hope, but the CERTAINTY of prosperity beyond imagination.

London is agitated because the great art collection of Lord Leverhulme, successful soap maker, is to be sold in New York City, not in London.

This is said to mean that the art centre of the world has moved from London to New York, but that isn't so.

The MONEY centre has moved, and in 1925, as in the days of the Medici, art goes where money is.

"How can I succeed?" is answered by Juge Gary thus:

"LISTEN. Let the other man do at least half the talking."

Judge Gary, of course, puts honesty ahead of all other qualities. And honesty is important, although Judge Gary knows more enterprises have been wrecked by honest fools than by dishonest knaves.

"The average man likes to hear himself talk too much," says Judge Gary. Salesmen should remember that. Thousands of them talk themselves INTO a sale, then talk themselves OUT again. When you [illegible] generation.

vice of Aristotle, who was the Judge Gary of his day. "Not too much, NOT TOO LITTLE."

A poor old maid of Massachusetts, called "poor," not because she was an old maid, but because she spent fifty-six years in the insane asylum, has just died. While she was in the asylum her small fortune increased to $2,000,000, to be divided now among seven nieces.

"Money runs into money" rapidly in this country, if you give it any sort of an opportunity.

What becomes of all the money the people earn? Why does the average American die with about enough to bury him or her?

The Deputy Attorney General of New York shows where some of the money goes. Bogus stock sales alone take $500,000,000 from the people of the State each year. Even that leaves a good deal of money for other swindlers to take.

Evidence at the Shenandoah investigation shows that Commander Lansdowne, who understood flying, protested against taking his ship through the storm belt of the Middle West, and asked for a postponement.

Those knowing nothing about flying, but unfortunately controlling aviation in the United States, ordered him to go, in order to "impress certain State fairs on the way." Because his advice was not taken, Lansdowne was killed.

Who is RESPONSIBLE for his death? And how good a suit for damages have his widow and the other Shenandoah widows against those that sent their husbands to death?

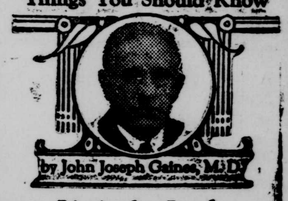

The Museum of Natural History will soon present to your kind attention a fossil horse, with claws instead of hoofs, dug up in Asia. According to scientists, this little creature, ancestor of the big horse of today with its hoofs, vanished from the earth long before men came here to need horses

It will amaze you to read the various kinds of "despair" listed by Professor Glenn Frank, new president of the University of Wisconsin.

There is BIOLOGICAL fear, PSYCHOLOGICAL fear, POLITICAL fear, ECONOMIC fear, HISTORICAL fear, ADMINISTRATIVE fear, MORAL fear. These fears can all be boiled down into one word, "NERVES." The only thing we need be afraid of is ourselves, our weaknesses. And fortunately, we die, and our fears with us. Then comes a new, unfrightened generation.

About Your Health

Things You Should Know

by John Joseph Gaines, M.D.

Limit the Intake

Let's talk awhile about absorption. It acts invisibly and also independently of our will. It is the one process of nature that never ceases unless, mayhap, there is nothing to absorb. It is our friend, until we over-crowd it, in which instance it becomes an unrelenting enemy. Our absorbing glands and channels know no taste—no discrimination. They take up strychnine or other deadly poison with the same avidity with which they welcome taffy or gruel. Absorption takes no cognizance of results. It goes on after we are dead!

The safe-guard against absorption, is not to overburden it. Heavy meals are dangerous. Many people complain of being over-fat. The trouble is, that they are crowding their absorbents. Large quantities of fluids are taken with meals, rendering absorption quicker and faster than it should go on. It is possible to reduce flesh by taking no fluid of any kind with meals. No amount of physical contortion called "Physical Culture" can displace over-supply of readily absorbable food. It is wrong to tax the sweat-glands with work that the more gross eliminants should do. The man or woman who expects to sweat out "three squares a day" will be disappointed. Neither can their billows be removed by massage. Limit the intake and get plenty of walking exercise—thus stimulating elimination, and let the absorbents rest.

A six-o'clock dinner is too often absorbed—not digested. Food in the average alimentary canal undergoes fermentation, and even in some cases decomposition! The longer it remains there, the more advanced the process. What can be worse for mental torpor than the absorption of such poisonous matter?
