LABOR'S LATEST DEMAND

Almost before the shade of Samuel Gompers has passed into his greater sphere the spectre of renewed labor trouble arises to remind the world of the worth of the man who has gone. It is now proposed that The American Federation of Labor define a new policy, demanding that wages be increased, and that the working day be shortened. It is proposed to cut the hours of labor in proportion to the degree of development in labor saving machinery and water power. Where is this kind of radical thought to end? No sooner does industry get back on a sane basis of prosperity for labor than some one comes along to kick over the milk pail.

The report of the National Industrial Conference Board just made public shows that the average working hours today stand at 47.5 per week. There is a well defined increase in employment, and weekly earnings increased rather than decreased as a result of our slow reconstruction. Total employment in all industries is 10 per cent. higher in September this year than it was a year ago.

No workman today can complain of a poor wage, even in the face of present living costs nor can he complain of unemployment. In the country it is next to impossible to get work done at any price, and for the most part the results bear every evidence of incompetence or carelessness. Let the farmer need a new ceiling in his home and he will find himself compelled to pay twelve dollars a day for some one who will make a beautiful botch of the job unless the farmer himself takes a day or two off to boss the work.

There is of course little or no quarrel with the high wage. Every one wants to see the American working man self-respecting and well rewarded. But when it comes to shortening the work day, when it comes to handing over to industrial workers the gross result of genius in developing production, it is getting time to call a halt. Labor would like to burn the candle at both ends and leave the farmer sizzling in the middle.

HARMONY

We are sorry to report Dr. Duhadaway very ill at his homehere.

In the evening at 7:30 a musical will be given entitled "The Man of Galilee". This will be a service of sacred songs sung to old familiar tunes. The service will be unique and interesting throughout with a short address on "The Man of Galilee".

Our New School

We have a new school in Burrsville. It is painted white. There are large windows on the east side and they are close together. The windows on the west side are small and they are placed nearly up to the ceiling. There are two rooms to put your wraps in. One is for the girls and the other one is for the boys. We are going to have new single seats, a new stove, new blackboards, and a new sand table.
