CONAN DOYLE'S "LOST WORLD" IS NOW MOVIE

Famous Author's Master Novel of Prehistoric Monsters on Screen Here Soon

Probably the most unusual love drama ever put on the screen is "The Lost World," which comes to Redden's Palace Theatre Thursday, Friday and Saturday, January 21, 22 and 23.

The picture is an adaptation of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's novel of the same title. Doyle admits now that when he wrote the story he hadn't the slightest conception of its film possibilities. He painted a vivid word picture of a lost world in the vast, unexplored regions of the upper Amazon river which Time had forgot.

There Doyle's band of adventurers found prehistoric monsters that roamed the earth 10,000,000 years ago and battled each other to the death as in the days of old.

Into the heart of this monster-infested district went this party of explorers—three men and a girl. Their mission was to rescue her father, if he still lived, and prove to the world the existence of the prehistoric beasts—the brontosaurus, bigger than ten elephants; the tyrannosaurus, most fearsome creature that ever stalked this earth; the stegosaurus, triceratops, the pterodactyl, or great flying dragon, and other gigantic species.

As the modern humans watched, awe-inspired, these monsters gave deadly battle to one another—such battles as never before have been witnessed on a motion picture screen.

Numerous motion picture producers have tried in vain to film Doyle's story, but the reincarnation of the monsters was deemed impossible.

Finally, however, an embryo sculptor named Willis H. O'Brien "discovered" the monsters. He submitted his strange idea to Watterson R. Rothacker, owner of film laboratories in Chicago and Los Angeles. Rothacker saw its possibilities, and, joining heads with First National Pictures, launched work on the project.

That was seven years ago. Since then work has proceeded steadily, and now the picture is complete. It establishes probably the record for time production in the film industry as well as a record for uniqueness.

Bessie Love, Lewis Stone, Wallace Beery and Lloyd Hughes head the human cast, sharing honors with the prehistoric monsters. Supporting are 2,000 other players who participate in the huge scenes showing the return of the explorers to London. They bring with them a brontosaurus which escapes. Running amuck in the heart of London's shopping district, the monster proceeds to wreck the metropolis and finally crashes into the Thames, when the famous London bridge collapses under his weight.

Earl Hudson supervised the production for Rothacker and First National, the directorial staff including O'Brien and Harry Hoyt.

Hall's Catarrh Medicine

Those who are in a "run-down" condition will notice that Catarrh bothers them much more than when they are in good health. This fact proves that while Catarrh is a local disease, it is greatly influenced by constitutional conditions.

HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE is a Combined Treatment, both local and internal, and has been successful in the treatment of Catarrh for over forty years.

Sold by all druggists.
