SHORT OR LONG, THAT'S THE QUESTION

Mrs. John B. Henderson, Washington society leader who wages war against short skirts and cigarettes for American girls seems to have been incited to the fray by secret worry over what happened to Rome.

"America is going the same way that Rome went to her ruin," says Mrs. Henderson. "Remember it was luxury and recklessness, too much thought of pleasure, that caused the fall of Rome," she adds, all of which may be alarming but not calculated to cause high blood pressure in 1926. The Washington girls rising coyly in defense of modernism point out that Mrs. Henderson has had her fling, while they have theirs before them and ought to be permitted to enjoy it. Nor does Mrs. Mrs. Henderson's latest effort to gather the country girls around her banner of super morality seem to have caught on. Replying to her critics in the National capitol, Mrs. Henderson, says "that sort of talk comes from women of the so-called smart set. The women of the smaller cities and the country villages have higher moral ideals than the average Washington debutante. The women of the so-called smart set are the worst offenders in regard to immoral styles and smoking habits." This thought is in direct accord with that of the proprietor of a New York beanery, soberly remarking "Cut it our girlie, where do you think you are, in the Ritz?"

Fact is however, that most of the Washington debutantes are girls from the country. Indeed if it were not for Washington's shifting population and the heavy influx of the rural flapper it is hard to conceive how life would be bearable in the great city of statesmen. And the short skirts help not a little.

Mrs. Henderson need have no fear for the morals of the American girl. They are inherent and not to be gauged by the fluctuating use of the tape measure. We all loved Victoria in her day. We admired our Nancy Hanks. But times have changed, and so have skirts and sanitation and human minds. Limbs have become legs thank God, and hypocrisy is on the decline.
