ETIQUETTE by Flo

Readers desiring personal points of Etiquette or heart affairs may write Flo, care of this newspaper, enclosing a self addressed and stamped envelope.

Dear Miss Flo—Recently a freiend of mine entertained a guest from a large city. There was a dance, quite a simple affair, but this guest appeared in a striking evening costume. Of course, nobody else was in evening dress, which naturally made the lady quite conspicuous. Was it not very bad taste for the lady to appear dressed as she was? F. B.

The lady should have worn a simple afternoon frock, as the affair was not a formal one. However, it may be that her hostess was more at fault than she. The hostess could have mentioned to her guest the fact that no one would wear evening clothes. That would have avoided a perhaps embarrassing situation for the guest, who probably did not enjoy being the center of attraction.

Dear Miss Flo—At a formal party, is it proper for the hostess to arrange the places so that husband and wife may be partners at dinner, or should she arrange it so that they go in with other partners? Thank you. E. D.

The hostess should not arrange to have the husband and wife in to dinner together. They should have other partners.

Dear Miss Flo—At a dinner party, or luncheon, should the hostess take her place at the table first, or remain standing until her guests are seated? Thanks. D. S.

The hostess should remain standing until all her guests are seated—then she takes her place at the table.

Dear Miss Flo—When the young lady's mother and father accompany their daughter and her fiancee to a place of amusement—say, for instance, the theatre or dinner—who who should pay the bills—the father, or the young lady's fiancee? Thank you. A. S.

The one who extends the invitation should pay the bills. For instance, if the young lady's father invited the daughter and her fiancee to go to the theatre, he should pay all bills. If the young lady's fiancee invited the girl's parents to accompany them, he should pay the bill.

QUIZ

Editor's Note:— Through special arrangement with The Educational Book Co., N. Y., this newspaper now offers its readers this interesting feature, "QUIZ", being extracts from that book, endorsed by Eugene C. Gibney, Director of Extension Activities, New York Board of Education. These puzzles will be found intellectual as well as instructive.

Puzzle No. 29

A charitable lady met a few poor people and desired to distribute to them the money she had in her purse. She wanted to give each one nine cents but to do so she was short 32 cents. She decided therefore to distribute 7 cents to each and she had 24 cents left. How much money did she have and how many did she give to?

Puzzle No. 30

Replace the star with numerals—in such a manner that each row—horizontal or diagonal when multiplied will produce 32768. The cube of 32 is 32768.

American League—Yankees, Senators, White Sox, Red Sox, Athletics, Browns, Indians, Tigers. Puzzle No. 27. A king's son is the heir apparent, a bald head has no hair apparent, and an orphan has nary a parent. Puzzle No. 28. Stage, Heart, Spine, Shame, Flies, Trunk. Puzzle No. 23 (Two weeks ago). Arrange the figures this way: 173 plus 4—equals 177. 85 plus 92 equals 177.

Send your answers to this newspaper. The first five solutions received to each set of puzzles will receive ten credits, when such winner has obtained 100 credits he will be entitled to a "QUIZ CLUB" button or pin. 500 credits will entitle the winner to receive an attractive prize and also have his name printed on the honor roll.

Practical Instructions in HOME SEWING by Ruth Wyeth Spears

FITTING THE COLLAR.

A collar that is fitted to a V neckline should be snug to the neck in the back and have a smooth even roll at the sides as I have shown at A. If the collar stands away from the neck at the back and sides as at B the fault is usually with the neck of the bodice.

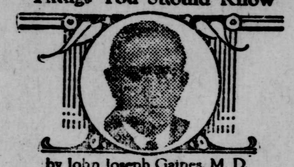

In making a dress it is very easy to stretch the neck out of shape. Even if the neckline is only slightly stretched, as shown at C, it will cause a collar to fit badly. The remedy is to run a gathering thread around the neck and draw the material into its natural shape as shown at D.

Sometimes the neck of a dress is cut too low in the back as shown at E. This also will cause a collar to fit badly. The only remedy in this case is to add a small section to build the neckline up as shown at F.

READERS—If you have dressmaking problems let Ruth Wyeth Spears solve them for you. Address her in care of this newspaper.

About Your Health

Things You Should Know

by John Joseph Gaines, M. D.

DOUGHY FOODS

Our people as a rule, are quick to resent what is termed "An old fogy notion." One of the oldest that I know of, is the mandate that we should avoid warm bread, and many otherwise intelligent folks are still sticking tight by that ancient dictum. I have tried faithfully, for many years, to discover harm in a nicely-browned hot roll or graham muffin, or a comfortably warm slice of cornbread with milk.—or even in the breakfast of hot griddle-cakes, and I have yet to treat any form of indigestion that could be traced to such causes. I have naught but praise too, for the old-fashioned buttermilk biscuit! So there!

On the other hand, if there is anything that appears more indifferent to digestion, or is less nourishing than a slab of cold, tough, tasteless, stringy, "light-bread" of commercial ancestry, I have failed to find it.

The sick man demands diet suitable to his condition of course, and a tough, wooly, asbestos-like piece of white bread is about the last thing I would prescribe for him, and even then, when there is nothing else in the house to eat.

It is human weakness that we indulge too freely in things that entice the appetite, and right there lies the objection to warm, nourishing, digestible breads. It is the quantity eaten, and not the temperature that does harm. If two biscuits are all we need, why eat six? Overeating is to be condemned, no matter what the article of diet.

A natural appetite is a pretty good guide to what the system needs. A depraved appetite is a dangerous possession. The natural appetite may be sated,—the depraved never! A careful study of our appetites might be better recreation than writing manifestos opposed to good nourishment.
