Two young Englishmen have been making a study of American prosperity, and have evolved nine reasons in explanation:

One—Promotion in America is by merit.

Two—America sticks to small profits and quick returns, on immense and rapid turnover.

Three—Rapid turnover is secured by simplification and cheapening of processes which necessitates less capital.

Four—America shows endless keenness in devising time-saving and trouble saving appliances.

Five—The American employer is not hostile to high wages.

Six—American manufacturers co-operate by exchanging ideas.

Seven—Americans are vigilant and acute in eliminating waste.

Eight—American welfare methods double high wages by surrounding the workers with cleanliness and light.

Nine—Americans encourage research.

UNATTRACTIVE AMERICAN NEWSPAPERS

IN AN Associated Press dispatch from Moscow, under date of February 5, Leon Trotsky, in a speech comparing Russian and American newspapers, is quoted as saying to an audience of Russian workers:

"It is scarcely possible to find anything less attractive than the contents of the average American Newspapers. But American editors have the faculty of giving their readers just what they desire."

Yes, and they will continue to do so, and also give the American people their best editorial opinion, on matters which would not please the Bolshevist leader. Naturally American newspapers are unattractive to Mr. Trotsky, for he has no power to muzzle them and control their comment, as he has in Russia.

America is the nation it is today because it has 20,000 publications for 110,000,000 people and everybody can read. Bolshevist dictators cannot exist in such a nation because there is no chance to fool millions of uninformed persons.

The quickest way to bring permanent stability to Russia, would be to ship in a lot of good American printing presses and American editors and let them discuss conditions as they found them, unhampered by the crushing hand of Bolshevik officialism.

Naturally, these would be "unattractive" papers to Mr. Trotsky because every one that was printed would shorten the reign of terror, and hasten the day of peace, plenty and education for the Russian people.

Let America be thankful that it has thousands of newspapers that are extremely unattractive to Mr. Trotsky and his supporters. —The Manufacturer.

RIDGELY

The Latest in Coiffures

Are you letting your hair grow out? Here's a way to make it look well-groomed. The hair should be slightly waved. It is arranged high on the left side and caught into a French role at the back. An interesting feature about this style is that girls with long hair can effect it and give the impression of a new type bob.

TUCKAHOE NECK

The Easter service at Thawley's was well attended Sunday morning.
