LITTLE SHOP TALKS
I.—SERVICE

There are many things a department store may offer, countless needs it may supply, but have you ever paused to think that more important than the wares it displays is S E R V I C E it maintains.

Some stores contain most desirable goods which, however, remain for the most part on the shelves, season after season unsold. We cannot say just why this is, but we do believe that Personality behind the counter is a large factor in moving the goods; in other words, that a genuine interest in the customer's needs on the part of the salesperson and a sincere wish to aid him to a satisfactory purchase (rather than just "making a sale") will always result in a friendly relation which is far better to possess than a dissatisfied purchaser.

This store strives to maintain Service of this high type and to serve the public fully and well is its ideal. If there is anything in our service which may seem faulty or weak or in any way displeasing to you, will you not tell us frankly about it that it may be corrected? Help us to make this in the highest sense THE STORE THAT SERVES.

Yours for satisfactory service,

LONG & SHORT
