DENTON, MARYLAND:

Thursday Morning, Sept, 16 1875

The Will of a Wealthy Man.

The will of Isaac M. Singer, of the Singer Sewing Machine Company celebrity, was probated before the Hon. Owen T. Coffin, Surrogate of Westchester county, on the 4th inst. The documents presented in the case appraised the value of the property in the United States at $9,000,000 and in Europe at $1,000,000.

Fire and Loss of Life.

Monday morning the house of Mrs. Sallie Whittington, near Marion Station, Somerset county, was burned to the ground. The inmates of the house at the time were Mrs. Whittington, a Miss Colbourne, a little boy of Mr. Stephen Whittington's aged six years and a colored girl about sixteen. The colored girl, in attempting to save the life of the little boy, ascended to the room where he laid, but, before she could reach a place of safety, was enveloped by the flames, and the charred remains of the two were afterwards found, clasped in each other's embrace.

Charley Ross.

In the case of Wm. W. Westervelt, on trial at Philadelphia for complicity in the abduction of Charley Ross, the prisoner took the stand on Monday and emphatically denied that he rode in a Brooklyn street car on July 6th, 1874, with a child resembling Charley Ross, as stated by Mrs. Peers. He made a lengthy statement as to his whereabouts before and since the abduction, but nothing of importance was developed. He denies having any knowledge of the letters said to have been written by Mosher; declared he never saw Charley Ross, and in reply to an inquiry whether he had any knowledge as to his whereabouts, he said: "No, sir; I wish to God I had."

The Worcester and Somerset (Md.) Rail Road.

Some of the bondholders of the Worcester and Somerset railroad are desirous of leasing and extending the road to the seashore, and to this end a meeting was held the other day, but nothing definite was reached. The proposition is to extend it on from Newtown to Swansgut, and erect a pier some distance into the bay, in order to allow the transfer of oysters direct from the boats into the cars of the company, thus acquiring better facilities than the Old Dominion Steamship Company has for New York, and virtually controlling the oyster trade. The estimated cost of the extension is $75,000. Swansgut is nine miles from Newtown, opposite Chincoteague Island.

Maine Election.

One hundred and forty towns gives Conner, Republican, 28,670; Roberts, 26,198, against 25,254 republican and 16,689 democratic last year, being a republican majority 2,472 against 5,565 last year. This indicates that the total majority, which was 10,000, will be this year not above 5,000. The election for Congressman in the fourth district is in doubt.

Sufficient returns have not yet been received to indicate the result. It will be very close. The republicans have probably carried eleven counties and the democrats five, which will fairly represent the vote in the Senate, being a democratic gain, as the Senate stood last year 28 republicans to 3 democrats. In the House the republicans do not seem to have lost.

Nominations by the Reformers.

The Baltimore American of Monday says: The slate as now made up for the Independent Reform nominations for State officers contain the names of Hon. J. Morrison Harris for Governor, Hon. S. Teakle Wallis for Attorney General, and Col. Edward Wilkins for Comptroller. Mr. Harris was visited on Saturday by the committees representing the Citizens' party, the Republicans and the Merchants, and the tender of the nomination made. Not being prepared to make an immediate decision he requested time to consider the subject. Mr. Wallis has been addressed by letter in regard to the Attorney Generalship, but he is out of town and no reply has yet been received from him. The conferences between the committees as above stated, representing the various elements in opposition to the Rings, continue to be harmonious, and give promise of united and amicable action in the campaign."

The Horse Disease.

ITS CONTINUED PRESENCE ABOUT SMYRNA, BUT IN A MILDER FORM.

From forty to fifty horses have died in Thoroughfare and Raymond's Neck since Tuesday of last week, of the staggers, or cerebro spinal meningitis, and new cases daily reported, but fatality is not so frequent. The cessation of the rains for over a week have somewhat checked the spread of the epidemic, however, and this, with enforced caution of the farmers, may terminate the calamity. The assertion is made in some quarters that the disease has been caused in not a few instances by over work and lack of proper food. Provender is short and many farmers have had nothing much but grass to feed with. Even under favorable circumstances this could not have continued longer without some disadvantage; but when we take the watery, vapid condition of the grass into the account the fatality is not so remarkable after all. Of course, a number of well fed horses have died, but the majority have been of the other sort, we are told.—Young horses have suffered far more than old ones, and when the disease gets fast hold it is beyond all remedies we are told. Such is experience. Remedies are numerous, however, and a gentleman sends us the following, sent him by a friend:

"This disease generally prevails during the months of August, September and October. As soon as it is known that the disease is blind staggers, take pork brine and rub it over the horse's body; rub it well with the hand; the heat of the disease will soon dry it in; then apply it two or three times, rub it well with the hand. This I have tried a number of times, and never failed to cure. From the pen of one of your most aged subscribers, purely for the public good."

The sugar and molasses crop of Louisiana last year was one of the largest on record—116,867 hogsheads of sugar and 11,616,828 gallons of molasses, and this year's crop is expected to exceed it. A similar report is made of this year's rice crop, which is estimated at 104,963 barrels, and cotton will probably do as well.

The Reputation of Maine.

A European letter to the Shoe and Leather Reporter says:

When I told a Swede, as we were riding in the cars in Sweden, that I was from Maine, he instantly said, "They are a very sober people in Maine, are they not?" He had heard of the Maine law, the report of which has gone out to the ends of the earth. In the last fourteen months I have travelled extensively in England and Scotland, and in the Northern countries of the Continent, and, when I compare the humbler classes of people in these countries with the people in Maine who hold a similar sociable position, I see the inestimable value of temperance. It is the free use of intoxicating drinks that makes the laboring men so poor, and sends their wives and daughters into the fields to work, or into the boat to fish. I have seen women mixing mortar, and others of them carrying it up a high building in buckets to the bricklayers, a yoke across the neck, and bucket at each end of the yoke. I have seen women swinging the scythe, binding sheaves, stowing grain in carts, feeding grain in threshing machines—in short, doing every kind of farm work—and all this that men may gratify their love for liquor. How miserably poor are some of these people, who, but for strong drink, would be in comfortable circumstances. I do not believe there is a body of people on the face of the earth so comfortable in their living, so free from vice, so happy, and on the whole, so prosperous, as the people who dwell within the boundaries of the State of Maine.

Painful Death.

A YOUNG MAN VAULTED INTO THE AIR AND FATALLY INJURED.

On Friday last, Elias, 18 years of age, son of Elias T. Booth, near Farmington, met with a terrible accident, which resulted in death in less than twenty-four hours. He was hauling, says the Milford News, a heavy log from the woods swinging under two pair of wheels when the four wheels fell into a deep rut, from which the team could not extricate them. To aid in extricating, the four wheels were detached from the hind ones and the team hitched to the felloe of one of the four wheels while the young man held down the tongue of the cart. The weight of the log swinging on the wheels caused the tongue to act as a lever, which possibly two or three men might have managed, but which Elias was not able to do, and when the team started the tongue flew up carrying him high in the air. He came down striking his side heavily across the log. His back did not appear to be broken but he was so severely injured internally that he died on Saturday in great agony.

Robbery of the Treasury.

A meeting was held in Baltimore, at Masonic Temple, on Tuesday night, composed of merchants and business men of the city, which was addressed among other speakers, by Judge Maulsby, a strong Democrat. The Judge read the following paper as part of his speech:

"I invite your attention," said the Judge, "to the following figures, taken from the official documents, by way of illustrating how far our trusted agents have acted in good faith towards the State, and towards maintaining the honors of the party which entrusted them with its power, and whether reform is required. The report of the Comptroller for 1864 shows that the amount disbursed for and on account of the expenses of the Legislature was $88,517.90. The report of the Comptroller for 1874 shows that the amount disbursed for and on account of the expenses of the Legislature was $191,152.67. The same report shows that there was disbursed in addition for the same year under the head "various acts," $95,443.72. The report contains one hundred and thirty-six items of disbursements, and refers to each act of Assembly, by year and chapter, which authorized each item of disbursement, except only this sum of $95,443.52. Many of the one hundred and thirty-five items the authority for which is so specified, are less in amount than $500; one so small as $147.92. The single item for which authority is not specified is this of $95,443.72. The same report shows an estimated probable disbursement for the year 1875 on account of Legislature of $3,000. As no Legislature was to sit during 1875, it is a necessary inference that this last sum was estimated to be required to pay expenses of the Legislature of 1874 remaining unpaid.

The sum of $95,443.72 could not have embraced any appropriation for educational or charitable institutions; because the very liberal, not to say profuse appropriations, made to institutions of that class are set on seriatim in the same report. The above figures will all be found on page 4 to 8 inclusive, and page 10 of the State Comptroller's report for 1874.

The report of A. Lingan Jarrett, then Comptroller, shows that the expenses of the Legislature for the year 1860—61, the last Democratic Legislature preceding that of 1864, was $58,060.06. That report also shows that there were disbursed for public printing the sum of $12,922.75, part of which was probably on account of expenses of Legislature, and ought to be added to above to show the full amount. This is stated for comparison:

1860—61	$58,060.06
Add the whole cost of printing for the State	12,922.75
	$70,982.81
1864	88,517.90
1874	191,152,67
Estimated by Comptroller in addition	3,000.00
Expended in addition under head "various acts"	95,443.72

It might suffice here to say that the Comptroller's report for 1874 shows generally the same or an approximate ratio of liberally increased expenditure of public moneys on all the various accounts to which they were applied. The object is to invite public attention to the subject, and to awake an investigation by every citizen of the expenditure of State moneys, the property of the people, and in many cases wrung by hard taxation from citizens, who can ill afford to supply it for other than strictly necessary purposes. The object being only to arrest public attention, it is not believed desirable to risk encumbering it by a multiplication of facts and figures here. It may be added profitably perhaps to the objects in view that for the year 1874 there were disbursed under the head of "militia" $36,808.77. The law authorizing this expenditure has been looked for, perhaps imperfectly, and not found. If there be law authorizing it, it is not the less wasteful and reckless. The expenditure under the same head for 1875 was $23,816.72. The military arm of our State would appear therefore to have acquired an increased expenditure in one year of $12,992.05.

The cost and expenses paid for conducting the Comptroller's and Treasurer's offices for the year 1874 will appear to be larger than were the cost and expenses paid for the same officers for the year 1864 and for the salaries of the civil officers of the State combined. The amount disbursed under the head "oyster fund," for the year 1874, was $56,882.97. The authority of law for this expenditure has never been found.—[Laughter and applause.] Possibly the search has been imperfect. The statement of receipts into the treasury contains no such head as "oyster fund," as the law is believed to require. Taking all items of receipts for licenses to catch oysters, fines may amount to the sum of $56,278.65, a less sum than that disbursed.

The amount received into the treasury on the same accounts for the year 1873 was $65,490.55, and the amount disbursed for the same year under the same head—oyster fund—was $24,770.75. The receipts for 1874 were $29,211.90 less than for 1873, the disbursements $12,112.22 more than for 1873, the difference against the State Treasury $41,324.12. A continued investigation will develop the same character of results. It is submitted that a reform is demanded by such facts as these. [Applause.]

Legislative Salary Grabism.

A correspondent writing to the Cambridge Chronicle, (Democrat,) on Legislative salary grabism, says:

"The Maryland Legislature is supposed to sit ninety days. Like many other popular beliefs, this idea is utterly fallacious, as the following will show. The General Assembly met at Annapolis January 7th, and adjourned sine die April 6th. The number of days embraced within these two dates is precisely ninety. During this time there were thirteen Sundays and sixteen week days on which the Legislature was not in session, it generally adjourning over from Friday to the following Monday or Tuesday, and on one or two occasions for a longer time. This made twenty-nine days on which the members did not 'attend session' leaving only sixty-one working days.

"Yet each and every one of the twenty-four Senators and eighty-six delegates, (one hundred and ten in all,) drew pay for each and every one of the ninety days. How is this for a salary grab? Computing the pay of the members at five dollars per day, with three dollars per day extra for each of two presiding officers the aggregate for the twenty-nine days is just $16,124.

"Add to this the amout paid the various officers of both houses and the total will approximate $20,000. And the State of Maryland has been defrauded of that sum by her law-makers! Not a single member offered to devote his salary for these twenty-nine days to some charitable institution or eleemosynary object. They all pocketed the steal without comment. If they did differ on some points their unanimity on the perfect propriety of taking $20,000 of the people's money for services they never rendered was complete. When it istaken into consideration how much important and necessary legislation that was left undone could have been transacted in twenty-nine days, the infamy of the whole proceeding is more apparent."

The yellow fever continues to rage terribly at Port Barrancas, and Commodore Cooper telegraphs to Pensecola to keep all strangers away.

A Round-About Ghost Story.

A GENTLEMAN'S DEAD MOTHER APPEARS TO TWO PERSONS.

The Jersey City Journal tells the following seriously:

About a year ago the mother of a gentleman of undoubted respectability and intelligence, who resides in this city, died in Ireland. The gentleman came to this country nearly twenty years ago, since which he has not seen his mother. There was always a warm bond of love between the two, and the news of his mother's demise almost drove the gentleman to distraction. The following is verified by two ladies of culture and veracity:

About a week ago one of these ladies, the wife of the gentleman mentioned, was awakened by a cold, yet soft touch on the forehead. The room was dark, yet a misty figure was plainly visible, gazing intently and with yearning look at the husband. With a shriek the lady sprang out of bed and the figure vanished. The husband awakened, and in explanation of her scream, the wife stated the circumstance of the vision to him, and gave an accurate description of the vision to him.

He instantly recognized in the description his mother, who had died 3,000 miles away. While the husband and wife were canvassing the startling phenomenon a lady visiting at the house, and who slept two floors below, burst into their bedroom with staring eyes and scared look. She said a vision had appeared to her and she described it. It was the same figure which the wife had seen. Since that time the figure has appeared to both ladies, sometimes when they were separate, and at others when they were together and in company with the dead lady's son.

The story came to a reporter's ears through a fourth party, but the actors in the strange play are reticent in regard to it and would give no particulars, but admitted the truth of the story. Although the mother's spirit has appeared in the son's presence he has never seen it, but the actions of the ladies were indubitable proof that they saw it. Here is a problem for scientists. There appears to be no opportunity for ocular illusion here. It is a staggering recital of what are evidently facts.

Independent Voting.

The Philadelphia Times says: The signs of independent voting this year multiply on every side. The Republican organs have been tuned to denounce all mutterings of independent people as simply hostility to Republicanism in disguise; but Maryland presents a notable example of the fraternization of Independent Democrats and the mass of the Republican party. The Republican State Convention adjourned without making nominations, and appointed a committee to confer with the independent political organizations with the view of uniting all reform elements on one ticket. The union will doubtless be effected, and if wise nominations are made, the success of the independent ticket will be more than probable. Carroll, like Hartranft, is personally honest, but there is in the Democratic party, as here in the Republican party, selfish leaders have prostituted the organization, especially in Baltimore city, to faction and plunder. When the merchants and business men meet, as they did in Baltimore a few days ago, and declare their independence of party to effect reform, it is fair to assume that there is something radically wrong, and that the people are in earnest about finding a remedy.

It is of little moment, politically, who may be chosen Governor of Maryland this year, for the position of the State in a national contest is not doubtful, but it is important that political plunderers be condemned, whether in Baltimore or Philadelphia, and whether they call themselves Democrats or Republicans. Revolutionary tempests all around the political board will be healthy this year, and we are glad to see the elements disturbed in the Democratic stronghold of Baltimore as well as elsewhere.

DRINK AND ITS WORK.—There were about 40,777 arrests for being "drunk and disorderly" in the city of New York for the year ending October 1, 1874, of which 27,203 were men and 13,574 were women. There are 8,403 liquor saloons, or one saloon for every 120, and one arrest for every 25 of the inhabitants.

THE PEACH TRADE.—There were estimated to be 15,000 or 18,000 boxes and baskets of peaches on Light Street yesterday, the prices ranging from 75 cts. to $1.25 per box. One shipper paid $1.60 for 1,600 boxes to go to Cincinnati. The varieties on sale were Smoks and Crockett Whites. —Baltimore Sun of Tuesday.

To Those Contemplating Building or Repairing.

THE IMPRESSION has gone abroad, because of my having engaged in farming operations and having removed to the country, that I had given up my regular business of HOUSE CARPENTERING, but I would inform the public that I am ready at all times to take contracts for new buildings or to alter, change, or repair old ones.

I have also reduced my wages from $2 to $1.50 per day where myself and hands are furnished with board, &c. Those having work in my line will address me at Preston, Caroline county, Md., where all orders will receive prompt attention.
