The Priest in Politics.

Curiously enough, when we are agitated by the subject of intimidation in elections, they are discussing the matter in Canada. Up in the North there is a different kind of intimidation going on, and there is not a little of it in the States, though it is not so quite pronounced as in the Queen's Dominions. We published a few weeks ago the fact that in one of the cities in Minnesota, on the day of the Presidential election, "a Romish priest stood all day at the polls and actually electioneered in behalf of a candidate for District Judge, and intimidated members of his church in the exercise of their elective franchise."

But in Canada, where Romanism is more decidedly in the ascendant, the priests are more aggressive, and now the following questions are under discussion:

1. Ought an election to be rendered void in every case when a priest denounces the fires of hell, or threatens the refusal of the sacraments to all who do not vote in a particular way, whether the candidate denounced loses votes or not?

2. Ought the word of one man, or two, to the effect that he or they had been terrified in such denunciations, to be sufficient to void an election?

3. Would the refusal of the consolations of the Church to any who has testified that they had been terrified into changing their votes, be a sufficient ground for prosecuting the priest in a court of law?

We infer from the tone of the discussion that the courts have decided that an election to be void in case of the priestly intimidation being such as to prevent the people from the exercise of their free will in the matter. But whether the courts have so decided or not, the question comes up with great force, and they who are not troubled about Romish priests and politics would do well to study the facts.

It is admitted on all hands to be a gross outrage, deserving exemplary punishment, to threaten Southern negroes with death if they do not vote as they are required to vote by their dictators. It is also an outrage for the manager of a coal-mine in Pennsylvania, or a factory in Massachusetts, or a railroad in New York, to notify his men that they must vote as he wishes, or quit his employment.

In all these cases physical violence is threatened; the negroes may be frightened by fear of being shot; the laborer by fear of being starved; the latter is the greater fear, because it is hard to believe that a man will be killed outright for not voting as his neighbor wants him to, but the neighbor knows very well that he will get his "walking papers" if he votes against his employer; and such a discharge means hunger, with wife and children on his hands. This is intimidation deserving investigation, reprobation and punishment.

But what about the priests? The Southern politicians threatens physical suffering; the Northern employer threatens loss of bread; the priest threatens the pains of hell. The faithful follower of the priest believes in the power and the disposition of the priest to inflict this penalty on him in case of disobedience. The others may not or may believe they will suffer the threat; but the poor, ignorant Romanist has not a shade of doubt on his mind that the priest threatens unless he votes as he is told. In Canada this abuse has grown to such enormous dimensions that the court has taken it in hand, and the legislation is such as to make this kind of intimidation punishable. We will be indebted to the Montreal Witness if it will distinctly state the law on the subject. The paper says:

"So distinctly practical is this evil, that we who have to submit to the Government of the Providence of Quebec, do not see our way clear to quarrel with a law which is the deliberate conclusion of the British and Canadian Parliaments, and which meets the case exactly.—N. Y. Observer.

Why Tides Occur Later Each Day.

As the moon revolves around the earth from west to east, she advances eastwardly in her orbit about thirteen degrees every twenty-four hours. Hence, when any part of the earth, in its revolution, comes under a part of the heavens where the moon was the evening before, the moon is not there, but has gone eastward thirteen degrees, and therefore the earth must turn on its axis as much longer as is necessary to bring that part again under the moon, which requires generally, not always, about fifty minutes.

The same thing occurs the next evening, and the evening after, and thus the moon rises most of the year about fifty minutes later each day. Now, as the tides are produced mainly by the moon, it will at once be seen from this eastward movement and this later rising each day, why they must occur about fifty minutes later each succeeding day. While the lunar tide is thus daily lagging, the solar tide occurs at the same time. Hence these two tides always begin to separate after new moon, being further apart each day, until they again coincide at full moon, when there is a higher than usual, called spring tide. Then again they separate, until new moon occurs, when they once more unite, producing another spring tide.

It must not be supposed that the whole body of the ocean, to its profoundest depths is equally moved by the tides. The tides are mainly superficial, and except where the water is of moderate depth the lowest parts are only slightly disturbed; but to what depth the tidal current extends can never, perhaps, be satisfactorily determined. The gulf stream is about three thousand feet deep, having for its bottom a bed of cold water of various depths; but as the stream is the result of other causes than those that produce the tides, it is not safe to estimate the depth of the tidal currents by its own.

At no time of life should a man give up the thoughts of enjoying the society of women. "In youth," says Lord Bacon, "women are our mistresses, at a riper age our companions, in old age our nurses, and in all ages our friends."

To the Sick.

A great many are now suffering with cold, coughs, and other ailments, which, if not promptly attended to, may result in an incurable disease. For all diseases of the throat, breast and lungs, bronchial or asthmatic affections, Dr. SWAYNE'S COMPOUND SYRUP OF WILD CHERRY is a pleasant and certain cure. The oldest and best remedy. It promotes expectoration, and removes all diseased matter which obstructs the lungs, the ulceration is healed, and the sufferer restored to perfect health. It is nourishing and strengthening, and for disturbed rest at night, its use will give sweet repose. If the bowels are costive, or liver disordered, take at first a few doses of Swayne's Tar and Sarsaparilla Pills, which will evacuate the bowels, and is of vital importance, relieve the congested liver, and remove all billiousness. Then follow with Swayne's Wild Cherry Syrup, and health, strength and happiness is sure to be the result.

SAVED HIS LIFE.

A Remarkable Cure

Was that of Edward H. Hamson, Engineer at George Sweeny's Pottery, 1334 Ridge Avenue, Philadelphia. He had a violent cough, night sweats, sore throat, great weakness, spit at different times a pint of blood, gave up all hope of recovery. Through the use of "Dr. Swayne's Wild Cherry Syrup" became a sound and hearty man, and remains so to this day, although over twenty years have elapsed since he was cured.

☞ We are permitted to refer to the following gentlemen who have experienced great benefit, and used "Dr. Swayne's Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry" in their family for many years.
