The Pilot's Reward.

A correspondent sends us the following incident, substantially as related by R. D. Lucas, an Iowa minister:—

During the later months of the war, I was preaching near Galesburg, Ill. I had an appointment some miles down the river, which I was to fill on a certain evening. I went to the depot in the morning to go there, but was just a moment late for the train. I turned to a friend and said "what shall I do?" A stranger stepped up and stated that there was an excursion party planned to go down the river, and probably the pilot of the boat might be prevailed upon to take me to the place. I accordingly went down to the river as directed, and found a boat in readiness for the trip. I stated my case, and was told by the pilot that he could take me, as he would have abundant time to go and return, before the party, which was to be left on the way, would have had their picnic over; merely adding, "If you can put up with their noise and frivoilty I presume they will not object to your presence, although they have chartered the boat for the trip, and of course have it at their disposal." I replied that I had been chaplain in the army a good while, and was quite accustomed to noise, and would try to be as inoffensive as possible. While we were yet talking, I observed a poor fellow approaching with apparent difficulty, who by his garments of blue I perceived was a soldier. He approached the pilot and told him he had missed the train, and, said he, "I am dying from my wounds. I am almost home. Can you take me there."—After stating his partial inability to do as he pleased about it, the pilot told him to to go down in the cabin and he would take him if he could. Soon the expected party came aboard, and the explanation was made to one who seemed to be a responsible one among them. He offered no objection; but by-and-by a couple of young ladies returned to the cabin demanding "Why that filthy man was on board;"—others insisted that it was an insult. I went down with the pilot and talked with the soldier, telling him of the state of things. He replied "I can get off, and wait, but I tell you friends, I am dying, and father and mother, brothers and sisters so near. I want to get home and die with them." I noticed that his wounds had suppurated and become offensive, so that he was not an agreable addition to the party, but his sad earnest eyes sent us back to plead for him. The pilot said he would arrange an awning on deck and make it as pleasant as possible for them. But some of the company insisted that it was an intolerable imposition to have such a fellow aboard; and one young man, evidently goaded on by the scornful words of the young ladies—we blush for them—declared that they would either control the boat or hire another. The pilot hesitated and started again toward the cabin, but humanity was stronger with him than the love of money, and turning about, he said, in a firm, resolute manner: "I am sorry, my friends, that you cannot be pursuaded to go in company with this poor dying man, but he shall not leave this boat till I land him near his home."

Of course, the principles of their master would not allow them to be reconciled to such an arrangement, so with much show of indignation, the gay youths marched off, saying they guessed money would hire another boat. My conversation with the pilot and the soldier, during the trip, interested me much in both of them, and I kept track of their history as opportunity presented.

The soldier was truly "dying," and only two days after reaching home he fell asleep. His last words were "Father, remember that pilot." The father heeded the request of his dying son. Two years after that scene on the boat, the pilot and his wife lay side by side in their graves, while their two children called it "home" where that soldier made his last request, and to-day are enjoying the best educational advantages which the country affords, furnished by the liberal hand of the father who remembered the pilot.

Who shall say that a gracious God does not sometimes order that a cup of cold water given in Jesus' name, shall not lose its reward even in this life? The pilot lost twenty dollars, but secured in return a home and friends for his children.

Who shall say it is not policy to deal mercifully and show pity one toward another, as we journey along life's pathway, even though there were nothing beyond this world? "Cast thy bread upon the waters; for thou shalt find it after many days. Give a portion to seven, and also to eight; for thou knowest not what evil shall be upon the earth."—The Christian.

WITHOUT A NEWSPAPER.—Nothing presents a sadder commentary upon the present condition of society than the large number of families, both in town and in the country, but more especially in the latter, that subscribe to no paper of any kind.—Hundreds and thousands of families are thus growing up utterly ignorant of what is transpiring in the world around them—ignorant of the mighty events of the day. But who can tell the vast amount of injury that is being inflicted upon the rising generation—those who are to take our place in the busy world at no distant day—growing up without any knowledge of the present, or any study of the past, this ignorance, too, being imbued into them by the sanction of those who should, and doubtless do, know better, did they only think of the injurious effects of their insane course. Let the head of every family think of this, and place in the hands of those for whom he is responsible the means of acquiring some knowledge of the moving panorama in which we act our different parts.

A woman recently entered a store in Connecticut, and sat down in front of an iron safe to warm her feet. After sitting some twenty or thirty minutes, she remarked that she "never did like them kind of stoves—they don't throw out scarcely any heat, them gasburners don't."

To the Sick.

A great many are now suffering with cold, coughs, and other ailments, which, if not promptly attended to, may result in an incurable disease. For all diseases of the throat, breast and lungs, bronchial or asthmatic affections, DR. SWAYNE'S COMPOUND SYRUP OF WILD CHERRY is a pleasant and certain cure. The oldest and best remedy. It promotes expectoration, and removes all diseased matter which obstructs the lungs, the ulceration is healed, and the sufferer restored to perfect health. It is nourishing and strengthening, and for disturbed rest at night, its use will give sweet repose. If the bowels are costive, or liver disordered, take at first a few do-es of Swayne's Tar and Sarsaparilla Pills, which will evacuate the bowels, and is of vital importance, relieve the congested liver, and remove all billiousness. Then follow with Swayne's Wild Cherry Syrup, and health, strength and happiness is sure to be the result.

SAVED HIS LIFE.

A Remarkable Cure

Was that of Edward H. Hamson, Engineer at George Sweeny's Pottery, 1334 Ridge Avenue, Philadelphia. He had a violent cough, night sweats, sore throat, great weakness, spit at different times a pint of blood, gave up all hope of recovery. Through the use of "Dr. Swayne's Wild Cherry Syrup" became a sound and hearty man, and remains so to this day, although over twenty years have elapsed since he was cured.

☞ We are permitted to refer to the following gentlemen who have experienced great benefit, and used "Dr. Swayne's Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry" in their family for many years.
