Fish and Fishing.

It is strange that in this age of enlightenment, that there is so little intelligence manifested in some of the most plain and common affairs of life.

Men will crop the soil year after year with the most exhausting crops without putting a handful of manure to feed the land, and then complain, that they are not paid for the labor and capital invested.—Just so with our fisheries. Year after year the depletion of our rivers has been going on, and not one single hand has been extended to assist nature, but the rapacious hand of avarice and ignorance, has well nigh ruined, what was once the source of a healthful food supply, and profitable to the whole community. Now it is time and money wasted to those engaged in the fisheries on the head-waters of the Choptank.

It is really amusing to stay on one of our fishing shores just to hear the reasons of men, concerning the causes of this dearth of fish. Hundreds of reasons are given; many don't you think so's, and theories innumerable which will again cause the turn off river to yield its annual supply of the finny tribe; and right here the question comes in, can this be done?

If the laws of nature are true laws; if science is what it represents itself to be; if man will only use those faculties with which he is invested by the Higher Power; then it can be done. The way is plain, but intelligence and reason must be used to accomplish the work.

It is no use for us to talk about stake nets, pound nets, patent weirs, and not fishing for a few years; all that is too much like the fable of the farmer and the lark, but like the farmer, we must make up our minds to cut our own wheat and not depend on the voluntary aid of either relatives or friends.

Laws we need, and stringent ones, both above and below, but it is no use for one section to expect protection in a matter like this, unless they are willing to give something in return.

Now the tributaries of the head-waters of this river are natural and admirable spawning grounds for both shad and herring, especially the latter. Now why not protect the fish in their natural habits? If the work is done at all, it must be done by the few yielding a supposed natural right for the good of the whole community.

If well digested laws were enacted and enforced for the protection of herring in our creeks and branches, it would add largely to the increase of our annual supply, but of course this plan would raise a howl amongst those who have been accustomad to seive every available spot along the branches, and those who build hedges and ply the dip net, would swell the chorus, and those who resort to the detestable practice of tolling would re-echo the cry.

Then, there should be a fixed time for the hauling of seines; night fishing should be prohibited by such penalties as would deter the owners of nets, or their employees, from using them after the time prescribed by law. Again there should be a stringent law prohibiting the taking of shad by any means or device after a certain time, (making due allowance for the upper and lower waters of rivers,) and to enforce this law, certain law officers should be named whose duty it should be to see the law enforced.

As stated above, we must be willing to do something for ourselves. Then we can ask the aid of those who live farther down the river. If we are willing to give and take, we may be the gainers; but if we are only willing to take, there is no use of our asking them to give.

It is time this community betsir themselves in this matter. Year after year the supply of fish is decreasing; an important industry is being destroyed and the time has come that the evil should be remedied. PARGETTER.

Cash vs. Credit.

The credit system is the bane of society and the curse of the laboring man. Nothing is better calculated to keep a man under the harrow than to allow himself to run an account at the store or grocery.—When a man runs into debt for a farm, a house and lot, or for any kind of property that can be sold again for its full value, he can not be properly called in debt, because he has the property to show for it. But when he has to pay for goods worn out, or provisions eaten up, then it is that there is a feeling of "goneness" perfectly indescribable. As a rule, the person who gets things charged gets a poorer article than does the cash customer and pays a higher price. No dealer can afford to sell as low on credit as he can for cash. Suppose a groceryman to have a capital of a thousand dollars, and suppose it were possible for him to sell that amount of cash each day, buying again the next day, and so on. It is easily seen that he could do the same amount of business as could the man with a capital of thirty thousand, who has thirty days time. Of course the first would well afford to sell cheaper than the latter. Then again there are the losses to be made good by some one, and those who do pay must pay the bill of the "dead beat" or else he "gets swamped."—Country Gentleman.

A CANDID MIND.—There is nothing sheds so fine a light upon the human mind as candor. It was called whiteness by the ancients for its purity; and it has always won the esteem due to the most admirable of the virtues. The man whose opinions make the deepest mark upon his fellowmen, whose influence is the most lasting and efficient, whose friendship is instinctively sought where all others have proved faithless, is not the man of brilliant parts, or flattering tongue, or splendid genius, or commanding power, but he whose lucid candor and ingenious truths, transmits the heart's feelings, pure and without refraction.

MOST men love little women, and little women love most men.

SOME advocate Hard Money, others the Rag Baby, but at B. G. Stevens Store all are regarded alike; same consideration shown; utmost harmony and good feeling prevailing, as the cheap and substantial articles are being sold. We desire to call the attention of our friends and community generally to our very heavy and well selected stock of goods, which cannot be excelled on this Shore for style, variety, durability, and very low figures. We cannot be undersold, Easton prices to the contrary notwithstanding.

Our stock consists of everything kept in the country, and many articles that cannot be found elsewhere.
