DENTON, MARYLAND:

THURSDAY MORNING, NOV. 15, 1877.

The election is over, and with it the excitement of conflicting parties. In Caroline county, thanks to the intelligence and the integrity of a free people—the Ring party has fallen—never to rise again. Their Baltimore plug-uglies—Their fruitless raid on the ballot box at Harmony. Their imported tickets could not save them, most ingloriously have they made their exit, and many years must come and go, ere the people of Caroline will forget the rule and ruin of the Ring Democracy. We ascribe the victory not to party—but to a just, intelligent and indignant people, and we desire in justice to further add that many, very many of the adherents of the "Ring party" are as pure and as worthy citizens as are to be found in any county in the State, and only learned the true character of their former leaders since the election. The mass of their voters are equally intelligent and honest, but party zeal made them see only party opposition in a movement that in principle was for the public good. We do not wish to exult over the fallen foe—nor cause an additional pang to the retributive justice already given, but our condemnation of the means resorted to by some of them to achieve a triumph against the will of the people, cannot be measurably expressed. Now that party spirit is broken in Caroline county, and the scepter of power is in the hands of the representatives of a majority of the people, we trust a new era of good feeling and generous brotherly charity will ensue.

Editorial Correspondence.

Last week we changed the base of operations, and immediately after the smoke of the political contest in our own State had cleared away, we bid adieu to home scenes and home associations, and with the aid of the iron horse, soon found ourself away up here in the land of brass clocks and wodden nutmegs. Connecticut may be truly denominated a land of mountains and valleys—of hill and dale—and more especially so if you travel from east to west. The surface is rough and broken and there is but little hope for agricultural pursuits. We have not as yet seen any signs of agricultural pretensions in this section of the State. The towns of Ansonia, Derby and Birmingham, which lie here nestled among the hills, within sight and in close proximity to each other, are almost exclusively manufacturing villages. They contain a population of about 16,000 inhabitants and for thrift and enterprize are unsurpassed by any similar community in all this broad land.

A ride through the business portions of these towns gave us a pretty good idea of their business thrift and enterprise. At almost every turn the ponderous wheels of machinery were in rapid motion, guided by master minds and controlled with induritable energy. We visited a single clock establishment, which we were informed turned out 25,000 clocks every month. There are several other of these establishments, some of them larger than the above, in this State it is a safe calculation to state that 100,000 of these time pieces are completed every month and sent to all parts of the world. The reader can form his own idea of the amount of ticking and the vibrations of the pendalum which Connecticut furnishes to the world. It is said that immense numbers of these clocks are sent to China and so completely captivated is John Chinaman with these timekeepers that his ambition is not gratified with less than six or eight of these yankee inventions put into operation in a single room, and it is even stated that his social standing is regulated by the number of clocks found in his residence.

Another establishment which we dropped into a few moments a day or so ago is deserving of notice. It was where they manufactured lamp burners. The establishm nt is of the largest class; the building very large, two stories in height, and filled with first class machinery invented expressly for the purpose of cutting and shaping the burners. To complete a single lamp burner, such as are sold by our merchants, require forty operations and passes through as many hands. To one unused to such extensive operations the wonder is where does this establishment find sales for the innumerable quantities of burners turned out here, but in answer to our querry we were informed, there were some six or eight establishments in the county engaged in the same business. The patent burner sold by Dr. Geo. M. Fisher, of our town, are manufactured here. This shop is but one of several still larger ones in which are manufactured pins, copper wire, cartridge blanks (millions of which are shipped to Turkish Government for use in the present war,) rivets and burs, iron and brass chain and many other articles of daily use such as an Eastern Shoreman would think were of no utility whatever. The whole of these establishments are owned by Wallace & Sons, yet comparatively young men, who have built them up by their well directed energy.

The Farrel Foundry and Machine Shop is also an extensive manufacturing establishment, located also in Ansonia, and here the thousands and one inventions known almost exclusively to Yankee ingenuity are manufactured in the best manner and of the very best material. They have just completed and shipped the largest and most improved sugar mill ever made in this or any other country. It was manufactured for a company in Cuba and is said to cost about $25,000.

It would be an endless task to enumerate and classify the manufacturing establishments here. The whole Naugatuck valley, fifty or sixty miles in length, and of considerable bredth, is filled with these establishments, embracing every trade, occupation and everything that enters into the great business interest of this and other countries. This whole section is a hive of busy industries. The labor and enterprize of this people does not seem to have felt the shock of the panic which has paralized other sections.

There is one peculiar feature here which is most striking, especially with those not familiar to New England scenes. It is the style of architecture and the neat and tasty residences. The buildings are first class, neatly painted and an air of refined taste and comfort is to be found everywhere.—Miserable tumble-down residences and squallied shanties, where the poor spend a miscrable existence, are not to be found here. This may be accounted for from the fact that we find no idlers here. Every body is employed in some useful occupation and labor is suitably rewarded. Turn where we may, every one is engaged, either mentally or physically, in some one of the varied pursuits which is absorbing the time and attention of the busy throng, backed up with the most improved machinery and the inevitive genius of the age.

A few days ago we visited Housatonic dam, a short distance above Bringham; a sort of a miniture of Niagara. It is built of solid masonry, across the Housatonic river; the dam being about one hundred and fifty yards in length, and must be of massive strength to support the great body of water pressing against it. A solid sheet of water about 12 inches thich was tumbling over the dam its whole length, causing considerable noise although its fall is not over ten feet. The volume of water passing here is immense at this season. On the West side of the river, below the dam is a race where the water is turned and utilized for manufacturing purposes. The growing town of Shelton, just opposite Bringham, but five years old, has a pin manufactory, a silver plating establishment, a manufactory of the fifth wheels for wagons, a stocken-net factory and various other enterprizes. The Naugatuck river just above Ansonia is dammed for a like purpose and furnishes water power at this season for most of the manufactories at this place, but during the summer months, when the drougth prevails, steam power is resorted to.

These streams are denominated rivers here, but they are not navigable for the smallest craft. They flow continuously toward the sound—neither ebb or flow—being considerably elevated above tide water. In our country they would be designated by the appellation of creeks.

At another time we may, if opportunity occurs, give our readers some further notes of our observation in this land of business prosperity.

Hung by Lynch Law.

Owen Wright, colored, who assaulted Mrs. Ellington, the wife of a respectable farmer, was hanged about a hundred yards from the scene of his crime. It had been determined to execute him on that spot, but as it was between two pine trees and no limb was convenient, a scaffold was erected near by. Nearly three hundred people were present, many of them colored. The negroes were clamorous for his death, and most of them insisted on his being burned. The prisoner shuddered at the threat, and begged and entreated for any mode of death but that. After he had made a confession a vote was taken, and a majority was for hanging. A stake had already been put in the ground, and a quantity of light wood cut. Mrs. Ellington desired that he should be burned.

About two miles from Seale, Wright was placed in an express wagon and carried the balance of the way. They gave him supper and breakfast, of which he ate heartily. Mrs. Ellington was brought to the scene to identify the prisoner again.—She again asserted positively that he was the man. Wright said that she was mistaken in the man, but could not look at her. His eyes fell as they did at the jail.

On his way from Seale, he vented his feelings in cries and tears, asserting and reiterating his innocence. At last the fatal rope was put around his neck and tightened, and he succumbed. He proposed to make a full confession, and stated in substance as follows:

That all that Mrs. Ellington had stated in regard to his crime was true and correct in every particular, that this was the fifth crime he had committed of which death is the penalty; that he had shot four men, one white and three black.

During his confession the hardened wretch manifested no penitence or contrition of heart, save when he acknowledged the justice of his fate, and several times smiled and laughed. He was then led to the scaffold and made to mount the platform, when he was told to repeat his confession aloud, in the hearing of all present, which he did clearly and distinctly. The confession was taken down verbatim by some one present.

When he concluded, he said he was ready, and requested to be blindfolded. A colored minister present prayed for the doomed man appropriately and fervently, but still he seemed hardened and indifferent. The cap was drawn over his eyes and the plank knocked from under his feet. He made one convulsive movement, and after swinging around, back and forth several times, was still. After hanging half an hour the whites dispersed, leaving the body in charge of the colored people.—Columbus Times.

Better Days.—As an evidence that the era of good feeling has dawned, scattering, by its genial sunlight, the mists that hid the good of one section from another, and revealed only its shadow, that was so often perverted into a monster of iniquity, it may be mentioned that notwithstanding Senator Morton exhibited considerable bitterness toward the South and which was felt toward him in return, the press of the South, since his death, has treated his life and character with all the respect that his position entitled him to, and not one word of bitterness or reproach, as far as we have seen, has been written of him. This is an evidence that the bitterness and angry feelings engendered by the war is fast disappearing; that men of either section are becoming better known to each other and more tolerant of diverse opinions. There can be no doubt that this sentiment has grown very rapidly, latterly in the gratitude that the people of the South feel towards Mr. Hayes for his policy of conciliation.—Balt. Bee.

Another Bold Robbery.—A gentlemen from Johnson's X Roads, Del., informs us that the store of Mr. M. H. C. Wilson, at that place, was entered on Thursday night and robbed of money, boots, shoes, &c.—The store was entered by the usual process of boring with brace and bit. In this case a large hole was bored through one of the shutters. We hope to hear of the timely arrest of these professional burglars.—Sussex Index.

The State Elections.

The election in Maryland on Tuesday for Comptroller of the Treasury resulted in the success of the Democrats by about 25,000 majority. There seems to have been an apathy existing everywhere and the result is the vote was very light, the Republicans not turning out.

In Virginia there was no opposition to the Democratic State ticket, and the vote was exceedingly light. The Legislature will be strongly Democratic and will be opposed to the re-adjustment of the State debt.

In Pennsylvania the vote was also very light, the Republicans taking little or no interest. The result is the Democrats carry the State by a small majority—probably 6,000.

Massachusetts has gone for the Republicans by a largely increased majority. The platform in that State contained a full endorsement of the policy of President Hayes.

Contrary to the expectations of most people Connecticut was carried by the Republicans. This will insure the selection of a Republican U. S. Senator in place of Barnum, Democrat.

Wisconsin gives an old-fashioned Republican majority; likewise Minnesota, Kansas and Nebraska.

In New York there were seven State tickets in the field, but the Democrats succeeded in electing their ticket by a largely decreased majority.

New Jersey was carried by the Democrats by about 10,000 majority and Gen. George B. McClellan is elected Governor.

Mississippi of course has gone Democratic, there being very little if any opposition to the ticket.

Marshal Fred. Douglass, in an address delivered at the Morton memorial meeting in Washington on Wednesday, said: Truth never dies nor grows old, and in the Senate Chamber there will yet come men who will defend it. Remember the depths from which we have come, and though the elevation of some of our race to high places is due to what may be called abnormal causes, still there is a great change for the better in these latter days. I do not disguise the fact," said the Marshal, "office holder though I am, that the way this peace has been sought is not my way, nor do I think that it will or ought to succeed. The Southern people always had a class of men among them who were superior to the law. What the South wants to-day, and will continue to want until some man comes who can give it to them, is law and order and submission to law by all classes, poor and rich, low and high."

Novel Attempt at Lynching.—Thursday night it is said that five colored men, Lewis Blackstone, Jr., Jim Smith, Fred. Robinson, Charles Hazleton and Jim Wallace, went to the house of Jim Redding, in this county, under the pretense that they had a coon up a tree, and wanted him to go with them and carry his dog to help kill the coon. They took him out in the woods where he saw a grave dug. They tied his thumbs together and put a bag over his head. At this Redding thought it best to make an effort to escape, which he did.—It appears that their church had been broken open and the money of their society stolen, and they suspected Redding of doing the act. We have learned that the parties have all been arrested except Robinson, and admitted to bail.—Centreville Observer.

THE object of this organization is to keep the low prices long since established by us, down so low that the "weepings, wailings, and gnashing of teeth of all foreign competition can be distinctly heard, and to permit the troops in their march to the front to stop under the shade of the willows and regale themselves, as I have to give a-weigh 10 barrels or Sugar, 6 bags of Coffee, 5 barrels of Flour within the next thirty days. Come—delays are dangerous.
