DENTON, MD., SATURDA

VOL. 25. "SHE IS DEAD." Riss her and leave her, thy love is clay." They smoothed her tresses of dark brown hair! On her forehead of stone they laid it fair; Over her eye which gazed too much, With a tender touch they closed up well About her brows and beautiful face They tied her veil and her marriage-lace, And over her bosom they crossed her hands-"Come away," they said, "God understands!" And there was silence, and nothing there But silence, and s. ents of eglantare, And jasmine, and roses, and rosemary, And they said, "as a lady should lie, lies she." And they held their breath as they left the room With a shudder, to glance at its stillness and gloom, But he who loved her too well to dread The sweet, the stately, and beautiful dead, He lit his lamp and took the key And turned it. Alone again-he and she. He and she; yet she would not speak, Though he kissed in the old place, the quiet cheek He and she; yet she would not smile, Though he called her the name she loved erewhile. Then he said, "Cold lips and breast without breat! Is there no voice? no language of death? See now; I will listen with soul, not ear; What was the secret of dying, dear? Was it the infinite wonder of all any part of Caroline, Talbot or D5rchester Or was it a greater marvel to feel es. Charges less than any auctioneer's.— The perfect calm o'er the agony steal? Did life roll back its record, dear, And show, as they say it does, past things clear? I hold the breath of my soul to hear. I listen as deep as to horrible hell,
