FARM.

March is the first spring month and now every farmer should be planning for the approaching activity. There is men to hire, seeds to provide, implements to buy, and a general overhauling and putting readiness of all the machinery of the farm. The matter of hired help is an important one, and requires much thought. There is a great difference in hired men; they range all the way from the thoughtful, conscientious man, who is as much interested in the success of the farm as if it was his own, to the shiftless, indifferent, and sometimes bad man, who cares for nothing but his pay, and is not fit to have a place on a farm, especially if there are chilnren in the farmers household. This is a more important matter than many suppose. Aside from the danger to the morals of young people from important language and acts, a man who is not kind to them has no business on a place where there are children. One of best workmen we ever knew utterly ignored the children; taking no more notice of them than if they were so many stones. We would not have such a man on the farm. Some hands are dear at any price, while others are worth more than the wages they are paid, and it requires more than a passing glance to gage the best men. The farmer who will be particular enough to have only good men about him, will also know that they must be treated as men, and from them he will receive the thoughtful services of men, instead of the bare labor of their hands.

THE LIVE STOCK.

The lack of proper care during the winter leaves the farm stock in poor condition in the spring. Any such animal should be well cared for now. A mess of warm bran-slop daily—a little ginger sometimes stirred in—will be useful for a cow. If calves are infested with vermin they should be freed from these pests at once. A mixture of sulphur and lard, rubbed along the spine and on the brisket, is effective. A tablespoonful of sulphur and molasses, taken internally once a day, will help to drive away the lice; it will also prevent the disease known as "black-led," frequently found among calves in early spring. Sheep that are suffering from an irritation of the skin and consequent loss of wool, should have a few doses of a mixture of equal parts of tartar and sulphur. Ewes with early lambs should have special favors shown them in the form of dry, warm pens, and rich food. The lambs need to be pushed forward at a rapid pace. A little fresh cow's milk may be given them while they are still quite young. Over feeding of young animals is, however, to be avoided.

Useful Hints to Peach Growers.

A correspondent of the New York Sun names the following remedy for fruit trees that are troubled with borers:

The fact is well known that all or nearly all the bearing peach trees in this region of country are more or less infected by the borer, a destructive white worm or grub about an inch in length, which bores into the bodies of the trees, and attacks the roots also, causing serious injury to the trees and their ultimate destruction. The presence of the borer is always indicated by the gum found on the trees.

The writer (who has had many years' experience in matters pertaining to fruit trees) would in good faith earnestly recommend to peach growers generally the free use of sulphur in reclaiming their trees in the following manner, viz.: Bore one or more holes in each tree, say one or two feet from the ground, two or three inches in depth, according to the diameter of the tree, with a three-quarter inch augur, then fill the holes with the flowers of sulphur, and solidly plug each hole with a pine plug, and saw it off close to the body of the tree. A careful examination of the roots of the trees should also be made, and the grubs found under the bark removed. A half bushel of wood ashes should be spread round the base of each tree. In the absence of wood ashes, use lime as a substitute. This work should be done early in the spring, before the sap begins to ascend from the roots, the reason for which must be apparent to all.

Maybe.

She leant across the stile
With her merry golden smile,
And her bonny brown eye glancing
Through the green leaves all the while
And he who loved her so
Watched from the path below;
But she tossed her head so daintily,
And laughed and bade him go.
Maybe! Maybe! we cannot know;
Maybe! Maybe! 'twas better so.

When the winds of March were loud,
And the skies were dark with cloud,
He had won her love forever,
And she trusted all he vowed,
But she wept against his heart;
"Oh, my darling, we must part,
For a barrier lies between us,
Forevermore, sweetheart!"
Maybe! Maybe! we cannot know;
Maybe! Maybe! 'twas better so.

And the years have passed away
And they both are old and gray,
But the same sweet dream is in their hearts
Forever and for aye.
Oh, sweet and sad the pain
Of love that will not wane;
So sweet because so true;
So sweet and sad in vain.
Maybe! Maybe! we cannot know;
Maybe! Maybe! it shall be better so.

Coming of Age.

It is common to say that a man "comes of age" at one and twenty. This means that he is old enough to manage his own property, to do business for himself, and to be made do as agreed; also to vote. Before he is twenty-one, if he has any property his father or guardian takes care of it for him; he is not expected to do business on his own account, and if he makes foolish bargains he can say, "I have changed my mind." There are several other ages which are important—indeed a person may be said to be "coming of age" four different times in his life.

From his very birth he is of age to be owner of property, and to be protected from violence and cheating. At seven he becomes of age to be punished for crime, if it can be shown that he was a bright, intelligent lad, had been taught somewhat, and knew that the thing he did was against the law and would be punished. These things are not taken for granted until he is fourteen. From and after fourteen it is supposed that a youth knows enough to refrain from attacking people, or stealing, setting a house on fire, or things of that kind. At fourteen, also, he is of age to be asked, if his father should die, whom he will choose as guardian, and of age to marry. This last does not mean that it is right or wise for a young man only fourteen to marry, but that, if he does so, he cannot retract afterwards and say he was too young.

At eighteen he is of age to be a soldier; at twenty-one he becomes independent of his father and votes. These things are so much more important than all the others, that reaching twenty-one is commonly called "coming of age," as it were a magic date for everything. At twenty-five he is of age to be a Representative in Congress—that is, the people can elect him if they choose; before that they cannot. At thirty he can be elected Senator, and after forty President. At forty-five he is of age to be excused from going as a soldier.
