The Bishop's Attack.

Bishop Lay is now at his home in Easton. He has partially recovered from his recent severe attack, but is not yet able to be out. His illness was angina pectoris brought on by hard labor and exposure. His physician thinks that with prudence in his work and proper care of himself, there is no reason to apprehend a second a second attack.

Unfavorable Wheat Outlook.

Our farmers reports their wheat looking bad. The start was promising, but the formationg of ice on the ground forming a complete incrustation, has left the plant in a sorry condition. It seems to have little vitality, and has gone backwards since the freezing commenced, with the least "winter growth." Strange to say, the farmers believe that the wheat will pull through this plight and yield as usual at harvest time.

Notes from Hillsboro'.

—Dr. P. S. Reynolds and wife recently celebrated the fifth anniversary of their marriage, at which time the guests expressed themselves as being highly entertained.

—The old academy has fallen and is a mass of ruins that is quite an eyesore. The school commissioners should do something with it; if not, the town council should sell and have removed the debris.

—The I. O. O. F. Lodge is growing in members and interest. The lately installed officers are as follows: P. G., T. C. Hackett; N. G., W. E. Wilson; V. G., Dr. T. S. Holt; chap., J. Stewart; mar. J. R. Stewart; R. S., L. D. Barnes; C. S., J. F. Russum; Bennett and Sylverter, Guardians; Supporters N. G., Wm. T. Price and H. G. Seidall; and Supporters N. G., Dr. P. S. Reynolds and J. B. Bishop. The Grange is also marching along slowly, but still exists to make its mark.

Baptised in the Nanticoke.

A letter from Vienna, Md., to the Wilmington Every Evening says: Despite the inclemency of the weather a large concourse of people gathered here upon the banks of the Nanticoke yesterday morning to witness the immersion by State—Evangelist English—the closing exercise of his work in these parts. About 10.30 o'clock the Baptist church bell was rung, and the streets were soon lined with people wending their way through the wind and rain to the water front where in less than an hour eight persons received a cold dip, and then the old bell pealed forth its baptismal greetings. The following is a list of those immersed: Miss Hennie Hearn, Miss Mary and Miss Gertrude Millerd, Capt. Samuel Phillips, George Robertson, Will Post, Frank Higgins and John Millerd. The ceremony will be repeated upon others some time February.

Will Sue for Damages.

It is learned here by a lawyer that John W. Rice, a traveling salesman on the Eastern Shore for a Baltimore house, intends to bring a suit in the United States Court at Baltimore to recover damages for being ejected from train on the Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore Railroad. Rice says he one day last week purchased a round trip ticket between Wilmington, Del., and Philadelphia. On the way to Philadelphia his ticket was punched on the return end by the conductor, who saw his blunder and told the passenger of it in the presence of witnesses. He wrote on the end, "Canceled by mistake," and said it would yet be good for the passenger back to Wilmington. Rice the next day, in company with the same witnesses, boarded a train at Philadelphia for Wilmington and presented the mutilated ticket. It was refused by the conductor, who with other train employes put Rice off the train at Glendover station. For this indignity he proposes to institute a suit for damages. Mr. Rice is a young man well known on the Shore and has many friends in this county.

Hillsboro' Station Controversy

To the Editor of The Journal:

Hillsborough is a great little town, and that which makes a town great is in and about it. We have some railroad excitement here at this time. It is said that the railroad authorities are about to establish a station at what now is the Queen Anne switch station; the very place it ought to have been from the first, for at this point is an unusual centering of public roads. Those from Centreville, Wye, Easton, Skipton, Denton, and Greensborough, all join at or near this point, whilst the present location is not upon a public road at all, but a private road one-third of a mile in length from town, it being inconvenient to all except a few, who, I am informed, have been holding secret meetings for the purpose of caucussing that they might act in concert and make people believe that the mass of the community want no change. I have been amused at some of the steps taken by this clique. I saw one of their emanations in the Easton Ledger, which did not represent the truth. Where there is one that advocates the present location, there are five that prefer the Queen Anne site. Notwithstanding all the disadvantages, there is a large per cent. more freighting done from Queen Anne than from Hillsborough, and the mass of the traveling public have to travel more than a mile further, whilst those in Hillsborough would have very little further to travel. So that I can see no reason why the railroad company should not put the station where it would accommodate the many and incommode none.

A Prosperous Life Insurance Co.

The statement of the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York shows assets of nearly $98,000,000 at the close of the year 1882. If the New York standard of 4½ per cent. be used, the susplus is over $12,000,000. The company announces that it has hitherto restricted its business the healthy persons of the U. S.—the North and West chiefly—and that it proposes to adhere to the policy which has wrought results so satisfactory. O. F. Bresee & Sons, of Baltimore, are the general agents for Maryland. See statement in this morning's paper.

Interesting Nuptials.

WALLACE—WLLOUGHBY.—The church bell in Preston called together a fair sized, interesting and interested audience on Wednesday at 9 o'clock a. m., 31st ult., to witness another wedding. The contracting parties were Wilday Wallace, oldest son of the late J. H. Wallace of this county, and Miss Ella Willoughby formerly of Dorchester. At the appointed hour the bride and groom, expectant, stood at the alter rail, and the Rev. E. H. Nelson made expectation a certainty in a very few minutes. The bride was dressed with exquisite taste and looked really charming. As the pair retired the organ pealed forth the wedding march. The happy pair drove immediately to the genial Charlie Jarrell's for dinner, and from thence to Chestertown.

HOFFECKER—HOUGH.—Mr. James P. Hoffecker and Miss Mary J. Hough, both of Smyrna, Del., were joined in Hymen's holy bonds in the M. E. church in that town on Wednesday. The bride has numberous relatives and friends in this vicinity, and the happy event called a number of them to Smyrna to witness the ceremony, Mrs. Philip W. Downes and Mrs. George M. Russum, of Denton, and Mr. and Mrs. Allan Moore, of Greensborough, being among the guests.

WILLIAMS—POORE.—Mr. George N. Williams and Miss Fonnie Poore were married on the morning of the 31st ultimo in the M. E. church at Templeville. The bride was attired in a traveling suit of bronze silk and plush, and the groom in the usual black. The happy pair left immediately after the ceremony on the morning train on a tour north.

HUMMER—TEMPLE.—Mr. Lowell N. Hummer and Miss Fannie Temple were quietly married on the evening of the 30th ultimo, at the home of the bride's father, Mr. James H. Temple, near Templeville.

FELL—BACON.—Mr. William Fell, of the Eagle Hotel, Georgetown, Del., and Miss Lavenia Bacon, of Laurel, were married in Seaford on Thursday evening of last week.

The Beechamp Case.

The poisoning case of Martin Beachamp is still a topic of much speculation all over the county and is being discussed in the daily papers of the cities. Since our last issue a letter has been found ostensibly written by Beachamp five days before his death, and one arrest has been made.

There was an appraisement of the effects of the deceased on Friday last and the household goods turned topsy-turvy, when the letter was found under the carpet in the sitting-room. It was addressed to his wife and read:

"Belle, I hope when you find this note I will be dead and out of the way, for I know that you would rather I was dead than living, so I am going to kill myself and then I'll be out of your way."

Mr. James R. Manship, says he is familiar with the hand-writing of Beachamp, as he has a promisory note from him, and the letter is genuine, though it is doubted by some. After the letter was found Mrs. Beachamp said to a reporter: "I believe the letter was written by my husband; he has often threatened to kill himself but I have never said anything about it because I believe his death resulted from natural causes. I don't know why he was under the impression that I wanted him out of the way. He had frequently told me he had never believed the rumors about me, and said that if the gossips did not cease talking he would take measures to make them. It was said at the inquest that Mart. and I lived unhappily. That's not true; we used to quarrel at times, but the quarrels are just the same as those that may occur between any husband and wife. I tried to make him a good wife, and did as much as any woman would have done. He had his short-comings, but treated me well. He was sickly, and nearly always suffered with his head. James Ahearn, the man with whom my name has been connected, was a friend of my husband, and they were often together. The rumors were caused by the littleness of village life. When Mart. and I moved to Concord, some of our neighbors began to borrow almost everything we had. Mart. was good-natured and allowed the thing to go on without objection, but it looked to me like an imposition, and I put my foot down on it. You will be surprised to hear that so small a thing should embitter many of my neighbors against me. The rumors were whispered at first, but as time passed they assumed huge proportions, and I believe were generally thought true. When Mart. died, and I was accused of having conspired with James Ahearn to kill him, I became frightened at the persistency with which I was being persecuted. I engaged lawyers to defend me, because I did not know to what extent my accusers might go. Ahearn did likewise. That accounts for our being represented jointly by counsel. I shall not move away from Concord, but I will leave this house and go to live with my mother, whose house is on the other side of the road. Although I am sorry that Mart killed himself, I am glad the letter was found, and hope it will be published." Mrs. Beachamp cried several times during the interview.

The party arrested is a young man about 18 years of age, by the name of Nathan S. Chance, with two aliases, Thornton and Skinner. Chance had been heard to say something which it was thought betrayed some knowledge the affair, but when the investigation was begun he absconded and has been in Delaware until Sunday last, when Constable Todd induced him to cross the line into Maryland and he was captured on Tuesday and lodged in Denton jail.

The attention of the authorities was also directed to young Chance by a letter signed "Sharp" found tied to the door-knob at the residence of Mr. Jas. A. Beachamp, a brother of the deceased, which advised the immediate arrest of the young man, as he could give important evidence concerning the cause of Beachamp's death, etc. The following statement by the prisoner was made to a JOURNAL reporter who visited him in jail: "About six weeks before Christmas I was in Ahearn's store one evening, and when no others were present Ahearn approached me and said: 'Nathan, don't you want to make $10 right easy?' 'Yes,' said I; 'what do you want me to do?' 'Now, look ahere, I'm afraid you'll tell,' said Ahearn. I told him I would do what he wanted if there was no killing in it. He said he hadn't told me there was no killing to be done, but put me off again, saying that I would tell on him. I didn't know what he was driving at and left him. The next morning I went to the store again and asked him if he wanted to give me that $10. He said no, he was afraid I would tell. That's all I know about it." Nothing else of importance could be elicited in the interview with the prisoner, and it is thought by some that Chance's alleged conversation with Ahearn has no bearing upon the case and as he is but a mere boy it is improbable that anyone would attempt to employ him at such a desperate game. There are others who believe that he knows more than he will tell, thus complicating circumstances and darkening the cloud resting upon the accused, but which, let it be hoped, will be scattered by a court of justice.

—Rumor states that the bed of the Dorchester and Delaware railroad is to be partly taken up and laid so as to join the Delaware at Harrington. This line would cross this county between Preston and Federalsburg.

—The Baltimore papers of last week report the arrest of Perry Raisin, formerly of Centreville, at the instance of John Rose. Raisin and Rose got on a "lark" together in Baltimore, and when Rose got on his feet again he found that he had been robbed of $50 in money, a pair of cuff bottons, a pair of gaiters, etc. He thought Raisin had gone thorugh him.

—Wm. B. Ewing was the postmaster at Hughlett, a small out of the way Talbot village, and he assumed responsibility to the department that the revenues of the office should pay the expense of running the route. The receipts proved inadequate, and after a three months' trial, Mr. Ewing resigned, and the office goes abegging under such terms.

—It is said that the steamer Georgeanna has been sold to the new owners of the Dorchester and Delaware railroad, to be used as a freight boat between Cambridge, Oxford and Baltimore. The rumor also has it that a first-class passenger boat is to be run on the same route daily connecting with the train at Cambridge and Oxford. This is an excellent arrangement and we hope it may be consummated. We give it as a rumor also that the Maryland Steamboat Company was solicited by the Pennsylvania Compamy to enter into this new arrangement, but declined, and that the raidroad company in view of this will run their own boats.—Dorchester Era.
