LORD BYRON'S LAST VERSES.

[We are indebted to a London paper for the following verses of Lord Byron, the last he ever composed. Four of the lines have already appeared in an article in the Westminster Review.]

MISSOLONGHI, Jan. 22, 1824.

"On this day I complete my thirty-sixth year."

'Tis time this heart should be unmoved,
Since others it has ceased to move;
Yet, though I cannot be beloved,
Still let me love.

My days are in the yellow leaf,
The flowers and fruits of love are gone,
The worm, the canker, and the grief,
Are mine alone.

The fire that in my bosom preys
Is like to some volcanic isle,
No torch is kindled at its blaze:—
A funeral pile.

The hope, the fears, the jealous care,
Th' exalted portion of the pain,
And power of love, I cannot share,
But wear the chain.

But 'tis not here—it is not here— [now—
Such thoughts should shake my soul; nor
Where glory seals the hero's bier,
Or binds his brow.

The sword, the banner, and the field,
Glory and Greece around us see;
The Spartan borne upon his shield
Was not more free.

Awake! not Greece—she is awake!—
Awake, my spirit think through whom
My life blood tastes its parent lake—
And then strike home!

I tread reviving passions down,
Unworthy manhood—unto thee,
Indifferent should the smile or frown
Of beauty be.

If thou regret thy youth,—why live?
The land of honourable death
Is here—up to the field, and give Away thy breath!

Seek out—less often sought than found—
A soldier's grave, for thee the best,
Then look around and choose thy ground,
And take thy rest.

From Noah's New-York Advocate.

MARRIAGES.

A neat, dapper little gentleman, with smiling look and powdered hair, whisked into the office and handed me a slip of paper, on which a marriage was written. 'Please Sir,' said I, 'write your name on the back, as a reference; we do this to prevent impositions.' 'He! he! vell, there can be no impositions,' said he, 'because I am the appy man myself.' 'O, I give you much joy, sir.—Twenty-five cents, sir.' 'Vell for vat you don't charge nothing for putting this ere marriage in the news? all the ladies like to read em.' Probably; but we have agreed among the printers, to charge that sum for an insertion.' 'O, you turn out for igher vages.' 'Not exactly so; but we must receive an equivalent for our heavy expenses. But in the midst of your happiness, are you unwilling to pay twenty-five cents to give it publicity?' 'Vell, I don't know. Hi paid two dollars to the parson, and one dollar for ack-ire—two dollars to the play, and ten shillings for a little supper, and now two shillings more. 'Vell, I don't complain—ere it is—I vishes you a very good night, sir.'

"Thus runs the world away." If there is an article of necessity, it is a newspaper. How men grumble—how the wife fidgets if the paper is not served up with the morning's coffee. The merchant runs his eye over the arrivals, and is greeted with the name of his wealthy ship, safely moored—the speculator finds an object on which he makes thousands—the man of letters finds something to amuse—the artist learns where encouragement is to be had—the politician discovers the rise and fall of parties, and the broker the rise and fall of stocks. The only one who escapes a thought in the crowd is the printer. He must get on as well as he can. Every thing is carried to the newspaper, and few things are expected to be paid for. He is at the expense of thousands, and the labour of night and day, to cater for the public and yet two shillings is reluctantly given to him to insert a marriage. If others will not think of the printer, should he not think of himself.

POISON BY CIDER, A CAUTION.

On Sunday last the following singular circumstance occurred at North Tamerton in this county, which was likely to have been attended with serious consequences:—Some cyder was given to a Mr. Chapman, who works on the Bude Canal, which he drew off into a coarse earthenware pitcher but on tasting found it to be so sour as to be totally unfit for drinking. He allowed it to remain for some time in the pitcher, and on again tasting it previous to throwing it away, was surprised at the extraordinary change that had taken place in its flavor, the cyder being now as sweet and agreeable, as it had before been sour and unpleasant. He communicated the circumstance to his wife, who with him and a man then in the house partook of it. Soon after they had drank they were all taken so alarmingly ill that medical advice was instantly had recourse to. On the arrival of the surgeon there was every symptom of their having been poisoned, on which he administered the remedies usually applied in such cases, we are happy to say with great effect. The medical gentleman having ascertained that their illness proceeded from the cyder they had taken, examined the pitcher in which it had stood, and found that the extreme acidity of the cider had extracted the lead with which earthenware pitchers are usually glazed, and infused its poisonous quality into the beverage.—Mrs. Chapman and the man, who only partook sparingly, are quite recovered, but Mr. Chapman, who drank nearly a quart, is still very ill, though hopes are entertained of his recovery.—CORNWALL GAZETTE.

A NEW KIND OF TRAFFIC.

Yesterday a tall grave-looking fellow, from the land of Steady Habits, made application in the way of business to the keeper of Pottersfield, for the purchase of two human subjects for dissection. He said he was induced by some Doctors in Connecticut, to enter into the speculation, and expected it was a good one. The keeper did not exactly feel himself authorized to trade with Jonathan, so he told him he would introduce him to somebody who better understood such business and with whom he could drive his bargain to the best advantage, and accordingly took him to the police office. He soon, however, discovered from the interrogatories put to him by the justices, that there were doubts about his being able to accomplish his object; and that he had come on an awkward errand, which might perchance involve him in serious difficulty. In short he was given to understand, that although this was a great trading metropolis, where all kinds of goods and wares could be bought and sold, yet no one presumed to deal in dead human flesh. He then became excessively alarmed, begged pardon, and promised if they would let him go, he never would engage in such another speculation. In consideration of his ignorance and apparent simplicity, he was accordingly permitted to depart, and made off with all possible haste towards his native state.—N. Y. E. Post.

Burns was never in Greenock but once, and that was when about to take his passage to the West Indies. On that occasion, however, his satirical spirit gave rise to one caustic remark, which is too good to be lost, and has not yet, as far as we recollect, appeared elsewhere. Having gone down to the harbor, to view the ship which he had destined to carry him from his native shores, he arrived just as a gentleman, going on board on the same errand, had the misfortune to stumble, and fall into the water between the ship's side and the quay. By the intrepidity and exertions of a seaman, who instantly plunged in after him, he was saved from drowning, and brought on board with no other injury save a sound ducking.

The rescue, however, demanded a signal display of his liberality towards his preserver, and turning round, he with no small ostentation, tendered him the sum of sixpence, as the reward of his courage and humanity. The by-standers were astonished, and inveighed loudly against such unparalleled meanness. Burns alone remained silent, but when pressed to give his opinion on the act—'Why,' said he, 'the gentleman is surely the best judge of the value of his own life.'—Scoth pa.
