POETRY.

For the Easton Gazette.

A New Song to an Old Tune.

'Midst flow'ry meads and pearly streams,
While youth and beauty shine,
We gently, glide, like fairy dreams;
Ne'er think of Auld Lang Syne.

When days and months and years roll on,
And morning stars decline,
'Tis then we sigh and mourn,
For Auld Lang Syne.

Faint Hope!—thy syren songs are o'er,
Which late we held divine,
Thy flight we keenly now deplore,
And Auld Lang Syne.

Farewell my friends, our days are few,
All nature must resign,
We soon shall bid a last adieu,
To Auld Lang Syne.

HENRY.

From the Georgetown Metropolitan.

THE MIRACLE.

We present for the sake of our readers at a distance a statement extracted from a pamphlet, relating to the very sudden and wonderful cure of Sister Beatrix of the Visitation in this town. This is the second very strange and almost miraculous cure that has taken place in this district, enough almost to stagger credulity itself; yet there are hundreds of our citizens who can bear witness to the facts related. The pamphlet in question, contains a very modest statement of particulars as well authenticated as human testimony can be. No doubt many of our catholic friends will attribute the cure to the immediate intercession of Hohenloe's prayers; but on that subject they will pardon us if we are a little sceptical, not believing in any supernatural agency in the health of individuals, but rather attributing the affair to some sudden impulse of the mind, or enthusiastic confidence in the power of Hohenlohe. With our opinions however on the subject the public have nothing to do—here are the naked facts let people judge of them as sound sense and discretion may dictate.

The sisters of the visitation in Georgetown D. C. to their Religious Friends.

We have received so great a favour from God in the manner that he has effected the cure of our sister Elizabeth Beatrix Myers,* that we alone could not return him sufficient thanks, and must impart to our friends, and the friends of religion, the cause of our happiness, that many feeling with us, and sharing in our gratitude to the author of all good, he may be more glorified by our joint efforts in praising and giving all thanks to him.

We had four sisters sick, for whom the art of physicians gave us no hopes of effectual relief; therefore, we resolved to apply for their cure to the great Physician of Heaven, and, according to former indications of Prince Hohenlohe, we began a novena of prayers for them on the first of this month Thursday, the 10th inst. at 3 o'clock in the morning, corresponding to the time at which the Prince must have said mass in Germany, our spiritual father carried the blessed sacrament to these four sick sisters in the infirmary, and after having given them the holy communion and made a short prayer he retired. Our mother and five sisters were kneeling in the room, joining in prayer with the four who had received. Just as they thought of withdrawing to rest, leaving the success to God, sister Beatrix called 'mother;'—mother immediately went to her, and our sister, clasping her by the hand said: 'mother, I think I am cured—Lord Jesus, may thy name be glorified forever'—and made several moving aspirations, inviting others to help her to thank God. She then asked for something to moisten her lips, and said she would like to get up, which she did—and immediately knelt down to thank God. Soon after, she begged leave to go into the gallery, adjoining the infirmary which communicates with the chapel, where falling on her knees, she remained some moments in prayer, whilst our mother and sisters who had followed her, prostrated in thanksgiving and praise.

Previous to rising from bed, two sisters, animated with joy, went in great haste to announce to the father her cure, urging him to come back and see her—to which he replied, 'well, let us prostrate and thank God; go, enjoy it in peace, and be quiet; it is night time; make no noise about it.' He then withdrew to rest, and waited until seven o'clock, a moment before his mass, to visit her, whom he found standing in the infirmary: she fell on her knees on seeing him, to beg his blessing, which, as a Priest, he says he gave her; but thought he ought rather to fall on his knees himself, to thank God with her, for the blessing she had procured us. The infirmarian from prudence wished her to hear mass in the gallery, but the father told her to go down to the choir and hear it with the community, which she did—walking without the least assistance down the various stairs and winding passages, and would have knelt during the whole time of mass and general communion, had she not been told to sit sometimes.

She had felt herself cured at the moment she received the holy communion, although an instant before, at the approach of the blessed sacrament and hearing the little bell which announced it, she felt an extraordinary revolution within herself, such as she had never experienced before, but which rather frightened her, thinking she was dying; this however soon subsided, and was succeeded by a calm during the preparatory prayers, and on receiving, she felt conscious that she was cured, but would not then move, through respect, and thinking that the other three were also cured, and that they being of the black veil, and she of the white, she ought not to speak before them; however, six or seven minutes after, seeing our mother make a motion to retire, she thought it was time to speak, and called 'mother,' as we have said. After she returned from the gallery she sat with our sisters at the fire, conversing with a holy joy for about half an hour; she then asked leave to go to the beds of her three sick companions, to which she rather flew than walked.

We will leave the doctors to explain if they please, the nature, curability, and accidental possibilities of her disease; but we were judges of the effects, like them, and can probably judge better than they of the means and perfection of her cure.

She was taken about two years ago with violent head achs attended with a debility which continued to grow worse, and afterwards her disease assumed so many different appearances, as to occasion the physicians to say at times that they knew not what to think of it. Last September she seemed ready to expire—the holy Viaticum was accordingly given to her on the fourteenth of that month, and since that time she had remained confined to her bed, which she did not quit until the morning of her cure, having but a few times been able to sit for the length of an hour and seldom more than twenty minutes in a day; nay, often unable to rise to have her bed made. This winter her pains increased to such a degree that we apprehended the worst—the blood rising to her head and producing alarming effects; she had to be bled and blistered frequently, which, however, afforded her but a temporary relief. She had continual pains in her breast and head, and the Sunday before her cure, the doctor visiting her, found her extremely ill.

From the commencement of the novena, her illness increased to such a degree, that she thought she could not recover and was perfectly resigned to die. She had, however some transient thoughts that she might be cured, but felt nearly a fear of it, on account of her desire of going to heaven, and said she was afraid she should not see our blessed Lady as soon as she had expected.

When she found herself cured and wished to rise, she feared that her legs could not support her, but thought within herself, as she afterwards said, that he who had cured her body could also strengthen her legs.

Our physician, Doct. Bohrer, who was most attentive to her, came the second day after her cure, (the 11th inst.) to visit his sick, knowing nothing of what had happened—and who does he meet in the parlour but sister Beatrix! (The father had sent her there to content the pious curiosity of two devout ladies.) After having looked at her a considerable time with marks of the greatest surprize, the doctor exclaimed, 'ah, Beatrix! prince Hohenlohe must have been here at work!' He put many questions to her, physical and metaphisical, all which she answered with her usual simplicity, and to his entire satisfaction. He felt her pulse, looked at her tongue, and made her draw a long breath, to prove that she found no difficulty in her respiration: he questioned her concerning her local pains and found that all had left her. Her disease, he says, had latterly assumed the character of hectic fever, and no marks remain of it nor of any disorder, unless some quickness in her pulse be considered so, as he observed; but we think this natural to her, or that her strength is not yet entirely restored; for the countenance of this dear sister, her eyes, voice, skin, and appetite, all bespeak the return of health. During her sickness she had an intolerable breath, but on the morning of her cure it became quite sweet and continues so.

Our three uncured sisters feel as glad and thankful for the cure of their companion, as if themselves had experienced it, nay, they rejoice more, as their cure would not have appeared so miraculous as hers. They rejoice, and all the lovers of religion will rejoice with us and with our sister Beatrix; (truly Beatrix i. e happy, and giving happiness to others) in seeing Jesus glorified, his real presence and action manifested in his adorable sacrament in so beneficial a manner, and our faith, hope, and love so well confirmed. May his holy name be forever praised and blessed.

The sisters of the Visitation of B. V. Mary.

Georgetown, D. C. February 13th, 1825.

*This sister is 29 years of age, was born near Conewago, Adams county, Pennsylvania, and has been four years in this house.

*To state exactly this interview which in itself is equal to any acknowledgments of the miracle we could adduce, (Dr. B. not being a Catholic, though a most liberal man) he was told by the portress when she opened the door to let him in, that sister Beatrix was cured; but having no idea of such a cure, and thinking that perhaps he would find her may be better or worse, he was extremely struck at her immediate appearance before him in that uncomfortable parlour, a great distance from the room in which he expected to see her, and instantly drawing back, very naturally exclaimed, "ah Beatrix! * * * * * is that you?" "yes, doctor" answered she, (looking pleasantly at him, which showed her bright eyes and a fine row of teeth, marks of return of health,) "yes, it is me." He then looked steadfastly at her for more than a minute, and added, 'prince Hohenlohe must have been here at work!' Not a thousand attestations, opinions or interior convictions, could prove so much as this—for Dr. B. is an eminent phycician.

As much of the above as came under my observation is correct; and I discover, now, no marks of disease whatever, unless a pulse more frequent than should occur in health may be considered so.
