POETRY.

(From a London paper.)

The annexed lines on a cow-doctor, named Marshall, are, as will be seen, a parody on the verses written on the burial of Sir John Moore.

Not a sous had he got—not a guinea or note;
And he looked confoundedly flurried
As he bolted away without paying his shot,
And the landlady after him hurried.

We saw him again at dead of night,
When home from the club returning;
We twigg'd the Doctor beneath the light
Of the gas-lamps, brilliantly burning.

All bare and expos'd to the midnight dews,
Reclin'd in the gutter we found him:
And he looked like a gentleman taking a snooze
With his Marshall cloak around him.

"The Doctor as drunk as the D—l" we said,
And we managed a shutter to borrow:
We rais'd him, and sigh'd at the thought that his head
Would consumedly ache on the morrow.

We bore him home and put him to bed,
And we told his wife and his daughter
To give him next morning a couple of red
Herrings with soda-water.

Loudly they talk'd of his money that's gone,
And his lady began to upbraid him;
But little he reck'd so they let him snore on,
'Neath the counterpane, just as we laid him.

We tuck'd him in, and had hardly done,
When beneath the window calling,
We heard the rough voice of a son of a gun
Of a watchman "one o'clock" bawling.

Slowly and sadly we all walked down
From this room in the uppermost story;
A rush light we placed on the bold hearth stone,
And we left him alone in his glory.

From the National Journal.

A winter day! A winter day!
What shall I find to chase away
The dense damp air of a winter day?

Give me a WIFE whose sunny eye
Shall chase the cloud from yonder sky;
Whose honied words and looks will say—
Love can bloom in a winter day.

Friendship may come, with plausive air,
To cheer the hours that are free from care;
But worldly friends soon shrink away
From the frost and storm of a winter day.

Wine hath a quick, a passing power,
To dispel the fiend of a gloomy hour;
But it lacks the vigor to drive away
The lengthened gloom of a winter day.

A Wife—a wife, whose sunny eye
Shall chase the gloom from a winter sky;
Her, let me find to chase away
The dense damp air of a winter day!

'Oh Matrimony! thou art like
To Jeremiah's figs—
The good, are very good, indeed,
The bad, too sour for pigs.'

Whereas, thank God, my wife Rachel has left my bed and board, for the hereafter mentioned provocation; this is to give notice that I will pay no debts of her contracting after this date.

We were married young; the match was not our own choosing, but a made up one between our parents. 'My dear,' said her mother, with a nose like a gourd handle, to her best beloved, 'now if we can get our neighbour Charles to consent to a marriage between our Rachel and his son, we shall have no more care upon our hands, and live the rest of our days in undisturbed repose.' Here my beloved began to whimper; the truth is, she loved, tenderly loved another—and they knew it: he had no property however, and that was their only idea of happiness; but she could not conceive how they could feast in joy upon her misery. 'Hold your tongue' says the surly father, 'don't you think your parents know better how to direct your attachments than you do yourself?' 'Yes, my dear,' says the mother 'you should always be governed by your parents—they are old and experienced, and you are too young to think for yourself. The old dad and mam forgot that they were a runaway love match at the age of eighteen. But poor Rachel said not a word, for she was afraid of her daddy's cowhide, that he had used 16 years on nobody's back but his daughter's. She seemed reckless of her fate, was almost stupified, and did not know that she could alter it for the worse. My father, by persuasion and argument, dazzled my fancy with the eight negroes that would be her portion—'which,' said he 'put upon the quarter section which I shall give you, will render you independent; and you are a fool if you do not live happily with such an angel.' Angel! said I, but I said no more, for my dad (in peace rest his ashes) would have flown in a passion with the rapidity that powder catches fire; and its ebullition like the blaze, would scorch me, I well knew.

We were married. I thought, as her father had ruled her with so tough a whip, I could do it with a hickory switch, and for my leniency gain her everlasting gratitude. We have now lived together 6 years, and have had no offspring except a hearty quarrel every little while. In truth, I found her more spirited than I imagined; she was always ready to tally word for word and blow for blow; but I never used a switch till the other day, always taking my open hand. The other day, coming home from work, very much fatigued and hungry, I found my wife in rather an unusual fit of passion, scolding some pigs that had overset the butter-milk. "Rachel," says I, 'make me some coffee' 'Go to hell,' says she! I could not stand this. I had never heard her swear before. 'I will chastise you for that,' says I. 'Villain,' says she, 'I'm determined to bear no more of your ill-usage Instead of using the mild and conciliating language which a husband ought to use, you always endeavour to beat me into measures—touch me with that whip, I will leave your house, and take my niggers with me too, so I will.' She had said such things so often, that I did not regard her, and belaboured her handsomely.——The next morning, after I had gone out to work, away she bundles, sure enough, and when I came home at noon, I found the house emptied of bag and baggage, and all the negroes taken, but the three that were at work with me. I have lived happily since, however; and she may keep all she took, if she will stay at her crooked-nosed mammy's, and never trouble my house again.
