POETRY.

The following humorous piece is published in the Nova Scotia Royal Gazette, as the production of a Mr. Pemberton, who has lately been giving recitations at Halifax, and who was, not long since, in the United States.

LETTY,

OR THE BEAUTY SENSIBLE ON ALL POINTS BUT ONE.

I knew a beauty once, and (this of course,)
loved her—she was very pretty,
So pretty she would force
An anchorite to sigh;
Then how could I,
(Who'm any thing but that,) escape?
And Letty—(Letty her name was,) made me
rue it—
Ah!—she was beautiful—she knew it.

Shall I describe her? First her hair
Was black, like raven plumage shining;
And every tress was braided
So gracefully—the ringlets hung
(I ne'er saw any hang as they did,)
Like Cupid's chains—and ere "Beware."—
"Keep clear,"—a proper caution rung
Its chime—they round my heart were twining—
Such hair!—'twas loss of heart to view it—
'Twas beautiful! and Letty knew it.

A string of Orient pearls confined
Its rich luxuriance, and these were
So pure and clear, that thus entwined
Each seemed an angel's frozen tear,
I called them so, who would not do it?
They were bewitching! Letty knew it.

A jet black arch—soft—long and light,
Rose on each brow—so finely waving,
That there did Nature, pausing stand,
And left them to a seraph's hand;
Whose pencil touched them, ere the bright
Resplendent globes below had shone—
Their rays had set the painter raving,
And made him leave his work undone;
Nature nor seraph had got through it—
They dazzled so; and Letty knew it.

These eyes were clear as a Gazelle's, and dark,
And full—emitting many a playful spark—
Yet moist—two founts of liquid chrystal,
In each a young love urchin laved—
And, quicker than a parting breath,
They hurled their darts on all, who braved
That lustre—striking surer death
Than Cumming's or M'Duffie's pistol!
I gave one glance, nor dared renew it
They were bewitching! Letty knew it.

Her face—her forehead—neck—were clear
As Parian marble—penciled streams
In tints of azure flowed; and there
The rich carnation softly mingling
At times suffused, with heightened beams,
That purest white, when blushes, tingling,
Told plainly that no China ware
Or rouge Francias was plastered there—
It was a bliss, indeed, to view it—
So loveable—and Letty knew it.

I would describe her form—her air
So undulating—debonair!
Or paint the grace with which she smiled
And talked—and looked—a very child
Of innocence was now—and now a charm
Of lively wit—her dancing too,
Elastic, fairy light and true:
And what a lovely ivory arm,
A pretty ancle, and she'd sometimes show it
Heigho! 'tis rather warm to day—
To talk much more of her, I'll stay
Till Fahrenheit's at Zero, or below it—
As I feel now I could not do it;
Such charms can burn and Letty knew it.

Letty, on all these points was learned—very!
She could be silent, melancholy, merry—
I never knew a lady more informed;
Few ladies, I suppose are very knowing
On their own charms? but now I m going
To tell where Letty's learning failed her;
I saw her angry—how she fumed and stormed—
I saw—(she not aware that I was near)
And wondered what it was that ailed her!
She fretted, stamped, and cursed; I fear
You'll not believe me, but 'tis true; and even
I see and hear her now, though more than seven
Years are gone by, and I have travelled since
O'er many a clime and distant land
O'er Europe, Afric, Coromandel's strand—
And now I'm here in Halifax: 'tis strange,
What led me in so wild a range
Of wanderings; but they all convince
Me, that a scratch from Cupid can't be cured;
It may be plastered, but, must be endured.
Well, I saw Letty in a rage,
When anger blotted all the page
Of azure tint and color bright
Of soft carnation—struck the white
Into one mass of fiery red,
And o'er that host of beauties spread
Distortion's harsh forbidding frown;
Which dashed my hopes forever down:
The lips, once coral, now were pale
And quivering, ah! too plain a tale
They told: her shining raven hair
Gave double fierceness to her eyes,
Which now flashed fire, and turned my sighs
To groans. I left her in despair!
I'm sure no fury ever did look so
Ugly as Letty: THIS SHE DID NOT KNOW!

A CHARACTER.—Amongst the early friends of Charles Brockden Brown, the American Novelist, was a young man of great beauty and animation, and of fascinating talents. After his death, the subsequent sketch of his character was drawn by Mr. Brown:

"What a contrast between his actual deportment and any notion of that deportment to be collected by a stranger from his letters! His letters to me are as confidential as letters can be; yet they form a picture totally the reverse of his conversation and his conduct. He had no small portion of wit, and his power was in part exercised in company; but the moment he took up his pen to write a letter or an essay, he forgot all his mirth, became pensive, sentimental, and poetical. To hear him talk, one would think that he never had a serious moment in his life. He literally sung himself to sleep, and awakened in a burst of laughter. To see the effusions of his pen, one would imagine that he was a stranger to smiles, that he was forever steeped in tears, and wrapped in melancholy. In this there was nothing that deserved to be called affectation or hypocrisy, since he corresponded only with those with whom he was occasionally in the habit of conversing; and his tongue regaled them with unceasing jests with as much sincerity as his pen saddened them with its austerity, or melted them with its pathos.—His sonnets and letters talk altogether of love, and on this subject no Petrarch was ever more tender, refined, and pathetic. The youth was forever in love, and was all impassioned eloquence at the feet of an adored fair one; but his love was merely the exuberance of health, and an ardent constitution: consequently, his love was always bestowed upon the present object. After receiving a letter full of the most doleful eulogies of some divine but refractory creature, and hinting his resolution to shake off the yoke of his inauspicious stars, I have hastened to his chamber to console him, and found him at a table, presiding with infinite satisfaction, and keeping the worthy crew that surrounded him in a constant roar. Such was my friend, and such were his letters. His tongue and his pen his actions and his written speculations, were as opposite to each other as the poles'

Theatrical Converts.—A Rhode-Island paper asserts, that Kean, the tragedian, has been converted, and intends to renounce the stage, and enter the Andover theological seminary. This would be very good news, if true; but it wants confirmation The Rev. Spencer Cone, one of the most eloquent preachers, (in the Baptist connexion) abandoned the play house for the church.

Really, the genius of proselytism seems in a fair way to rob the stage of its principle supporters. A late London paper says, that Ambrogetti, the Momus of the Italian Opera, has turned a monk of Latrappe With regard to Kean's conversion, "it wants confirmation" indeed.—Noah's Adv.
