POETRY.

To the Editor of the N. York American.

The following ode is a pretty fair hit at political trimmers; but as there is nothing personal or malicious in the satire, it cannot, I think, give offence to any class of respectable politicians.

As for the Trimmers themselves, there is no danger of giving offence to them.—They understand the thing too well—they are, in truth, a clever set of men. They like a fair hit, & care not a pin from whom it comes, or on whom it lights. They have wit too, and what is more, they know how to use it. This is no slight praise, for it cannot be applied to wise men generally.

If it be true, that a man may take greater liberties with his friends than with other people, I have then some right to republish this ode; for I rank among my personal friends some of the most distinguished trimmers in the State, and saving their zig zag politics, the cleverest men.

C. R.

ODE IN PRAISE OF TRIMMING.

I.

Happy the man in times like these,
Who trims his sail to every breeze;
With every gale still veering;—
Who to promote his private ends
Won't scruple to desert his friends,
Still by his interest steering.

II.

O! could I trim with trimming Ben,
I'd turn, and turn, and turn again,
With every change still trimming;
Like Bray's famed Vicar, I would ride
For ever with the stronger side,
Still with the current swimming.

III.

And should intrusive conscience still,
In secret goadings thwart the will,—
Like him I'd bravely doff it;
Leave fame and honor far behind,
Though dear to every noble mind,
And barter all for profit.

IV.

What's honor's proud and crusty creed,
To him who stands of cash in need,—
Or him in search of place?
What's independence to a mind,
To wise servility inclined,
And fearless of disgrace?

V.

What virtue dwells in empty fame?
And what's the value of a name,
To any but a novice?
What's reputation, friendship, pride—
Compared with fortune's flowing tide—
With party, power and office?

VI.

The pliant, patriot, trimming tribe,
Who wisely take the official bribe,
To better their condition;
Now sweeping 'fore the pop'lar gale,
All former friends and creeds assail,
And curse the Opposition.

VII.

But should the Opposition trip
The heels of Power, they'd tack their ship,
And trim to admiration;
V--B--n, then would be their cry—
They'd hoist the caucus flag on high,
And curse th' administration.

VIII.

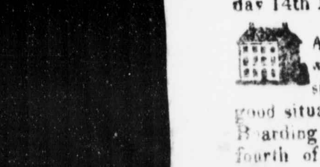

And this, I hold, is wisdom's course,—
Stick to your party, while in force,
Or while your party pay;
But when defeat appears in view,
Or office loaves prove light and few,—
Up helm and bear away.
