POETRY.

For the Easton Gazette.

The following lines were written in memory of THOMAS P. BENNETT, Esq. late a Delegate to the General Assembly of Maryland for Talbot county, by a friend and brother Mason.

TO THE MEMORY OF A FRIEND.

He's gone, the much lov'd husband's dead,
The father kind, the son so dear,
Our friend—our brother's spirit's fled,
And claims the tribute of a tear.

Tears will be shed and let them flow,
From love and friendship's weeping eyes,
They're due to him who is laid low,
His dear remembrance claims our sighs.

He's gone alas, and left us here,
Over his clay cold corpse to mourn,
We follow to the grave his bier,
And shall he never more return?

Dear Husband—Father—Son, Farewell,
Friend- Brother—Oh! We cannot part,
How deep our grief no tongue can tell,
Or speak the anguish of each heart.

He's gone—O! no—to scenes above,
The spirit of the dead ascends,
Where all is glory, all is love,
And where he finds far better friends.

And we shall follow in our turn,
And we with him shall meet again,
And yet we cannot cease to mourn,
He's gone—and this is cause for pain.

MR. GRAHAM,

As the object of your paper is sometimes to amuse, as well as instruct; permit me to present to you a few stanzas from the works of the justly celebrated Dr. Goldsmith. As the works of that distinguished Poet, are in the hands of but few individuals, I think your readers of taste and discernment, will be pleased with the ease, elegance and simplicity, of the following verses. M.

AN ELEGY

ON THE GLORY OF HER SEX

MRS. MARY BLAIZE.

Good people all with one accord,
Lament for Madam Blaize
Who never wanted a good word,
From those who spoke her praise.

The needy seldom pass'd her door,
And always found her kind,
She freely lent to all the poor—
Who left a pledge behind.

She strove the neighbourhood to please,
With manners wond'rous winning;
And never followed wicked ways,
Unless when she was sinning.

At church, in silks and satins new,
With hoop of monstrous size;
She never slumber'd in her pew,
But when she shut her eyes.

Her love was sought, I do aver,
By twenty beaux and more,
The king himself has follow'd her,
When she has walk'd before.

But now her wealth and finery's fled,
Her hangers-on cut short all;
The doctors found, when she was dead,
Her last disorder mortal.

Let us lament, in sorrow sore,
For Kent street well may say,
That had she lived a twelve-month more,
She had not died to day.

THE EARL OF BRIDGEWATER.

The following probably overcharged, but curious account of this eccentric character appears in a Paris paper:—"Some persons knowing but imperfectly this model of originals, past, present, and to come, and appearing desirous to learn something more respecting him, we think it may be agreeable if we collect such anecdotes respecting such a singular personage as are well calculated, to enrich the history of human oddities No one has higher claims to a distinguished place in such history than M. Egerton, who has for several years borne the name of lord Bridgewater. Those who have once seen—nay, those who have never seen a meagre personage drag himself along supported by two huge lacqueys, with his sugar loaf hat, slouched down over his eyes, cannot fail to recognize him.

An immense fortune enabled him to gratify the most caprices that ever passed through the head of an Englishman. If he be lent a book, he carries his politeness so far as to send it back or rather have it conducted home in a carriage. He gives orders that two of his most stately steeds be comparisoned under one of his chariots, and the volume, reclining at ease in milord's landau, arrives, attended by four footmen in costly livery, at the door of its astounded owner. His carriage is frequently to be seen filled with his dogs. He bestows great care on the feet of these dogs, and orders them boots, for which he pays as dearly as his own Lord Bridgewater's custom is an excellent one for the boot maker; for besides the four feet of each of his dogs, the supply of his own two feet must give constant employment to several operatives.

He puts on a new pair of boots every day, carefully preserving those he has once worn, and ranging them in order; he commands that none shall touch them, but takes himself great pleasure in observing how much of the year he has each day past, by viewing the state of his boots. Lord Egerton is a man of few acquaintance, and very few of his countrymen have got as far as the dining hall. His table, however is constantly set out with a dozen covers, and served by suitable attendence. Who then are his privileged guests? No less than a dozen of favorite dogs, who partake of milord's dinner, seated very gravely in armed chairs, each with a napkin round his neck, and a servant behind to attend his wants.

These honourable quadrupeds as if grateful for such delicate attentions, comport themselves during the time of repast with a decency and decorum which would do more than honor to a party of gentlemen; but if by any chance, one of them should, without due consideration, obey the natural instinct of his appetite, and transgress any of the rules of good manners, his punishment is at hand. You, perhaps, gentle reader, suppose that corporal punishments is meant as the walls of the capital so eloquently but so ineffectually define it, but no—you are mistaken, 'tis in his self-love that the offender is punished. The day following the day of his offence the dog dines and even dines well; but not at milord's and as becomes a dog to dine; banished to the antechamber, and dressed in livery, he eats in sorrow the bread of shame and picks the bone of mortification, while his place at table remains vacant till his repentance has merited a generous pardon! We have not been able to learn what dress Lord Egerton puts on his domestics, when he has cause to be dissatisfied with their service.

NATURAL HISTORY.—We learn the following particulars from one of the proprietors of the red free stone quarry, at Chatham, on the banks of the Connecticut river, opposite to Middletown,—a quarry that has been worked for a long time, and has furnished the "materiel" for many of the public works and buildings.

The formation rises in a bluff from the river, of about 70 feet in height, from high water mark. It had been quarried, so that there was a horizontal platform, of about 70 feet in depth, on a level of about 15 feet above the high water level of the river. The stones were in layers of regular formation, in beds connected by seams, and the stones thrown up without blasting.

In removing one of these layers, a spring burst out from a "seam" of about 3 or 4 inches width, and 7 or 8 feet depth, at the distance of 8 rods from the margin of the river and 15 feet above its high water mark, and the overflow on the platform was soon discovered to be alive with trout. Many of them were taken by the hand and some of them kept in wells in the neighbourhood until they attained to a larger size. Under the stone which lay over the opening of the spring, the fish would often show themselves and dart back into the interior on being alarmed. This river was formerly celebrated for its salmon, (now almost unknown there,) but we never heard of its tributary streams being much stocked with trout. The probability is, that this Chatham Spring is connected with the river by an opening which passed through the quarry, and communicated with a fountain in the interior, in which the trout found "food & lodging," such as suited them.

J. Green,

Proposes to publish the Journals of the Conventions of the Province of Maryland, held in the City of Annapolis, in the years 1774, 1775 and 1776.

If sufficient encouragement be offered, the Subscriber proposes to publish, in one volume octavo, the Journals of the Conventions of the Province of Maryland in the years 1774, '5 and '6. It is believed that there are not more than two copies of this Journal now extant; and from the circumstance that they were printed in pamphlet form, and unbound, it may be fairly concluded that they, too, must in a few years be destroyed by the mere decay of time. These Journals are the only authentic evidence of the Political History of Maryland, during that interesting and unquiet period. Although we have, in abundance, histories of Maryland, as connected with the association of Provinces and Colonies, at that time formed, for mutual protection against the improper assumption of power on the part of the Mother Country, yet none of these Works embrace what may be termed its Domestic and Internal Political History.

This part of the history of Maryland it should be her pride to hand down to posterity, not only on account of its deep interest, but as a public State Record of the voluntary sacrifices, daring spirit, and determined resolution, of her citizens, during this period of doubt & dismay.

In the confident expectation that the citizens of Maryland will consider the proposed publication of sufficient importance to entitle it to their patronage, the Subscriber is induced to issue these proposals.

The price per Copy, not to exceed $2 00.
