POETRY.

MAN'S LOVE.

By the author of "Solitary Hours."

To worship for a season,
To flatter, feign, pursue;
To love with little reason,—
To leave as blindly too:

Or having won and worn,
To fling the rose away,—
Or, having crushed, to scorn
Its premature decay:

To stab with sharp unkindness,
With cold neglect to kill;
To abuse with selfish blindness
The love no wrongs can chill:

To fly the hour of danger,
The bed where sickness lies,
And leave, perhaps, a stranger
To close the dying eyes:

And, ere her last cold pillow
The green grass waves above,
To cast away the willow,
And choose another love:
Thus—thus—'tis thus men love?

For the Easton Gazette.

To Jotham Longstory, Jemmy Bertram, and Tommy Croaker, Esquires.

GENTLEMEN:—Poetry is generally admitted to be of greater antiquity than prose. It is the language of the passions, it refines the taste, improves the mind, and has therefore been always held in the highest admiration. Homer, Virgil, Milton, Pope, &c. are clear exemplifications of this position. As the specimens of your lucubrations, which appeared lately in the Easton Gazette, are at least equal to the productions of those distinguished characters, your fame will no doubt descend with imperishable lustre, to the latest posterity.—As gold medals have been awarded in profusion, in different sections of the union for poetic excellence; but as our funds will not, at present, permit us to reward you in proportion to your merit, I am directed to request you, Gentlemen, to compose a poetical communication on "Prose run mad." and forward it to the Secretary of the Frog Eyed Society, on or before the 20th of March; and the author of the best written piece of the three, shall be, as a tribute of our admiration of his talents, elected an honorary member of the said frog eyed society.

By order,
TIMOTHY KITEFLIER,
Secretary.

Mud Creek, House.

OLD MAIDS.—A certain lady, living, as some say, in a state of single blessedness, but who was quite anxious to change it, attended a holy meeting, where she heard one of your real old fashioned preachers hold forth. On her return home, in remarking upon the services, she observed she liked the minister very much, as he prayed particularly for her. 'How,' said one of the family, 'I do not recollect any thing that you particularly refer to.' 'Why yes,' replied she, 'for after mentioning the parish, the sick, the dying, the widow and the fatherless, he prayed for those who had unmentionable troubles, and I am sure if there are any who come under this description, it is us poor old maids."—[Albion

J. Green,

Proposes to publish the Journals of the Conventions of the Province of Maryland, held in the City of Annapolis, in the years 1774, 1775 and 1776.

If sufficient encouragement be offered, the Subscriber proposes to publish, in one volume octavo, the Journals of the Conventions of the Province of Maryland in the years 1774, '5 and '6. It is believed that there are not more than two copies of this Journal now extant; and from the circumstance that they were printed in pamphlet form, and unbound, it may be fairly concluded that they, too, must in a few years be destroyed by the mere decay of time. These Journals are the only authentic evidence of the Political History of Maryland, during that interesting and unquiet period. Although we have, in abundance, histories of Maryland, as connected with the association of Provinces and Colonies, at that time formed, for mutual protection against the improper assumption of power on the part of the Mother Country, yet none of these Works embrace what may be termed its Domestic and Internal Political History.

This part of the history of Maryland it should be her pride to hand down to posterity, not only on account of its deep interest, but as a public State Record of the voluntary sacrifices, daring spirit, and determined resolution, of her citizens, during this period of doubt & dismay.

In the confident expectation that the citizens of Maryland will consider the proposed publication of sufficient importance to entitle it to their patronage, the Subscriber is induced to issue these proposals.

The price per Copy, not to exceed $2 00.
