EASTON GAZETTE

EASTON:

SATURDAY EVENING, SEPTEMBER 6, 1828.

KENTUCKY.

The returns from Kentucky are complete, and shew Gen. Metcalf's election to be by a smaller majority than previous imperfect returns had given reason to expect--Gen. Metcalf is elected by upwards of seven hundred votes after the greatest contest known in our Country, and where the opposition Candidate (Barry) was supposed by every body, friends and foes, to have every possible advantage that could be thrown in his way. Barry was the most popular man in the state on the Jackson side--Barry had always been a man of extraordinary popularity in the state--he was a favorite generally with the people, and they had given him, several times, evidences of this--Barry is one of the most learned and intelligent men in the state--Barry is the most eloquent and powerful public orator in the State, Henry Clay excepted--The most daring and desperate men in Kentucky were Barry's friends--all that the friends of Barry in Kentucky could do upon any terms, and all that the friends of General Jackson in every state of this Union could do for Barry, was done by ardent, active, and unremitted contribution of exertions--for Kentucky was Mr. Clay's State--to defeat Gen. Metcalf, who was the friend of Mr. Clay and who had voted for Mr. Adams, was the first and greatest object of the Jackson men--because on Metcalf's defeat and Barry's election, they thought would depend the proof of all the charges and accusations against Mr. Clay and Mr. Adams--they knew if Metcalf succeeded and was elected, that all their charges and proofs and slanders and hopes would fall to the ground, and that they would be worth nothing to the friends of Jackson afterwards to electioneer on in any state. This election of Barry in Kentucky was then a life or death business with the Jackson men, and after all their unequalled exertions, has terminated, most happily for the people of the United States in the complete election of General Metcalf who was the candidate supported by the friends of the administration.

General Metcalf is a very popular man, well known, and of good character Bred a mechanic and pursuing his trade industriously for some time, although he has the honor to have raised himself worthily to fame & preferment, yet he had not the means of education or of acquiring learning like his competitor Mr. Barry--He is a plain, clear speaker before the people--Had he possessed the Oratorial powers of Barry, he would have (with a better cause than his opponent) retained on his side all those wavering men that Barry's imposing eloquence drew away from him--Barry was in the field all winter electioneering through the state of Kentucky, whilst his opponent Metcalf was confined to Congress and there remained until late in the month of May--Thus Barry backed by all the aid that he could obtain throughout the winter by all the Jackson members of Congress, who were most attentive and powerfully instrumental to his support by filling the state with franked publications of every sort against the administration got the start of Metcalf by many months, and had united the force of his own eloquence with the publications against the Administration to give them currency and credit with the people. When Metcalf got home to Kentucky in June, he found Barry, the representative of Jackson, had his work completed, and Metcalf had neither time nor means of doing much more than taking all that Barry had left, and who notwithstanding all the persuasive and entrapping means used, would not go with Barry.

The Jackson men claimed a majority in Kentucky, not many weeks ago, of twenty thousand votes--See the New Brunswick Times (Jersey) of about 20th August--The general calculation of the Jacksonians was from five to ten thousand majority for Barry--when the returns began to be received and a statement or two, before all the returns were had, gave Metcalf a majority of upwards of two thousand, the Jacksonians turned their tune and said, they never expected a majority in Kentucky--now the majority for Metcalf is less than a thousand, and the Lieutenant Governor who was the friend of Jackson is elected over Mr. Underwood, the Jacksonians are up and at it again, swearing they have large majorities in both Houses of the Legislature in Kentucky, the true character of which neither they nor nobody else can know--and they now pretend to say, that the majority in the two houses of Legislature in Kentucky being for Jackson, (assuming the fact) that the state is for Jackson, and this they offer as an evidence of it--yet here in Maryland they turn around, and in the next breath these Jackson men say to known and confessed Adams men, "O! vote for Mr. —— or Mr. —— the friends of Jackson, there is no reason why you should stick to Adams men in voting for delegates to the legislature, the two things of Jackson or Adams, and members to the General Assembly of Maryland, are wholy distinct and ought not to be blended--the political character of the members of the Legislature does not have any effect as to the political character of the State in relation to Jackson or Adams"--Here then you see the inconsistency, the cunning, and the deep designs of Jackson men.

The truth of the case in relation to Kentucky is, that the great question of Adams or Jackson through the state was tried, and avowed by all to be tried, in the contest between Metcalfe & Barry for Governor. Metcalf's good character and popularity were to be put at stake with his vote for Mr. Adams and his support of Mr. Clay against his calumniators--it was essentially necessary that the Administration candidate for Governor in Kentucky should be one of these very men who had voted for Mr. Adams, as the approbation or disapprobation of a majority of the state should be expressed decidedly upon that point--Metcalf voted for Mr. Adams, defended Mr. Clay throughout against his persecutors and slanderers--was taken up as the Administration Candidate for Governor, and has succeeded by a respectable majority against the most powerful Jackson man Kentucky could bring forth. Barry centered in himself every thing the Jackson men could desire to give hopes for success--he was the pick of the flock--all agreed that he was the man--and if they could not elect Barry, they could not elect any man.

Whatever may be the results of minor elections in the state we know not--the election for Governor was the contest that all agreed would try the character of the State--upon that contest our attention has been solely and steadily cast, and we have the satisfaction of seeing it result decidedly to our wishes in favour of the Administration.

As to the eternal, nonsensical brawling of mere electioneerers, who catch their cry and take their cue from hired party newspapers, we care nothing about that--It is only fit to be listened to, if ever fit, to amuse ourself with seeing how often they change their tune, shift their sails, and run foul of each other--facts & events as they occur are the only true and fair groundwork of reasoning, and these we endeavour to furnish our readers without suppression and without guile.

We are willing to trust reaction on this occasion, and unhesitatingly declare our full confidence in a most decided vote in Kentucky in November next for Mr. Adams and Mr. Rush.

BURR & JACKSON.

The evidences of General Jackson's having been engaged in the conspiracy of Col. Burr are thickening and strengthening every day, and are rapidly thinning his ranks of some of his former warm supporters wherever these evidencies are most read and most dispassionately considered General Jackson at that time was a man of not much consideration, but like men of more consideration than himself, he felt secured under the same protection that the famous General Wilkinson had--which was, that things were so managed that no person could convict him of the conspiracy but those who were as deep in it as himself, and therefore to convict him, they would have been obliged to have convicted themselves.

General Jackson's offer to Judge Williams of Tennessee of a Captsin's commission under Burr in his expedition--General Jackson's own acknowledgment that Burr offered him a high command.--Gen. Jackson being Burr's agent to build the boats for him on the Cumberland River--Gen. Jackson having received from Burr between three and four thousand dollars to pay for the boats and to purchase provisions (see General Coffee's certificate) in 1806, which he (Jackson) never let President Jefferson know any thing of, [nor did Mr. Jefferson know any thing about the boats until some time in January 1807--see his message to Congress 22d January 1807.]--Gen. Jackson's endorsing Burr's notes drawn on Geo: M. Ogden of N. York in November 1806, [N. York being Burr's residence and thence deriving the chief of his funds] That endorsement being made before Jackson's letter to Gov. Clairborne, in which letter he tried rather to draw the attention of Governor Clairborne from Burr to direct it to Wilkinson.--General Jackson, after his letter to Gov. Clairborne, having received Burr at his House as Burr's head quarters, and introducing him at a Ball in Nashville--and all this a month after President Jefferson's proclamation against Burr--Gen. Jackson giving President Jefferson no account of Burr's expedition in his letter to him, which was received by Mr. Jefferson 24th Nov. 1806--General Jackson being summoned in 1813 at Natchez by Mr. Blennerhasset, as Guarnishee upon an attachment against Burr, a non resident Debtor, alleging that MONEY, of Burr's was in Jackson's hands--to which General Jackson's answer in Court was, that Burr was in his debt. [The proceedings in this suit having been lately published at Natchez] Col. Burr spending near two weeks with General Jackson at his (Jackson's) house, after the reports were abroad in Tennessee of Burr's dangerous designs and a month after President Jefferson's proclamation, and more than a month too after Burr had been accused at Frankfort in open Court by Jos Davies, U. States district attorney for Kentucky. These and such like evidences are now presented so strong, that the public attention cannot resist them, and fair minded men at least confess that they are too powerful not to excite great doubts and fears, and under doubts and fears of any man they cannot sustain him for the Chief Magistracy of this Country

MR. RAMSEY, A MEMBER OF CONGRESS

Read this Jackson leaders remark and determination and then say good people of Maryland whether you will be united in party or in object with such a man or with such feelings.

Mr. Ramsey, a member of Congress from Pennsylvania, last winter at Washington, avowed, "that if it could be proven that General Jackson had ravished half the women and burned half the houses in Tennessee, the people of Pennsylvania would vote for him."

In consequence of the above declaration the people of his district held a late meeting at Gettysburg, and denounced Mr Ramsey for having libelled the virtuous and intelligent citizens of Pennsylvania.

The Spirit in which the Administration of our Country is opposed.

The following extract from an account of the proceedings of the Jackson men in South Carolina, at a late feast, will shew to every reflecting mind the spirit and feeling which inflame the minds of those who wish to make a President of Gen. Jackson, who has grossly and wilfully, without cause, repeatedly violated the constitution of our country--despised and disregarded her laws--abused with tyrannic cruelty the rights of our citizens--degraded the principles of civil liberty, and set the odious example, in his own conduct, that a military commmander is an absolute despot over the lives and liberties of the citizens as well as over those of the soldiers--that he is above the law and can control every body and every thing at his own will and pleasure

The annexed toasts are extracted as specimens of blackguardism, wickedness and blasphemy which prevailed at this Jackson party:

By Major Geo. J. Logan The Tariff--Like every thing else which agrees not with the essential part of the constitution, is poison; and ought with fear and trembling to be administered, as death may be charged to the prescriber.

By George Pope, Esq. Adams, Clay & Co.--Would to God they were like Jonah in the whale's belly, the whale to the devil, the devil in hell, the door locked, key lost, and not a son of Vulcan within a million of miles to make another

By D. W. Mongin, Esq. The present damnable Coalition--may the sons of freemen consign them to the fate that every traitor merits, with no additional duty on hemp: they deserve hanging with as little expense to the country as possible, in order to save contingent expenses, &c.

By Dr A. G. Verdier: John Q. Adams--the tan-vat, tar pot and feathers for him whose hide so easily admits of the ingress and egress of bribery and corruption.

The Hero Andrew Jackson--May he possess after this life, the first seat in heaven, as he soon will the first in our country.

Will the friends of morals, good order and civil governme t, read these toasts, and see what spirit animates those men who, in the event of Jackson's election, will rule the country.--

KENTUCKY ELECTION—OFFICIAL RETURNS.

The Frankfort Kentuckian of the 21st August, contains the following statement of the result of the late election for Governor & Lieutenant Governor in Kentucky, taken from the official returns of the Sheriffs. From this it appears that Mr. Metcalf, the Administration candidate, is elected Governor, by a majority of 709 votes over his opponent Mr. Barry, and that Mr. Breathitt, the Jackson candidate, is elected Lieutenant Governor, by a majority of 1087 votes over his opponent, Mr. Underwood.

The Kentuckian also contains a list of the members elect of the State Legislature. Out of eleven Senators chosen this year, eight are Jacksonians, two for the Administration, and in the eleventh district there is a tie between the two candidates. In the House of Delegates fifty two Jacksonians, and forty eight Administration men are elected. The seat of one of the Administration men is contested.

FROM VERA CRUZ.—Capt Paine, of the brig Amos Palmer, at New York, reports that Commodore Porter of the ship Asia, 64, brig Bravo, of 18 guns and another ship of the same force, had hauled down his flag, discharged all his men, and left but a few soldiers on board to take care of the vessels. The Mexicans were highly dissatisfied with the Commodore's conduct, and he intended returning home to the United States by the first conveyance.

It is stated in a Southern paper, that a lump of gold was found in Anson county, N.C. about a fortnight ago, weighing upwards of thirteen pounds, and supposed to be worth nearly $3000.

We find the following paragraph in the Cincinnati Gazette of August 23, received last night:

Govenor Ray—We learn, from a source upon which we rely, that this gentleman died suddenly one day this week, of a bilious cholic. We have no particulars. Very shortly before his death, it was ascertained that he was re-elected Governor of Indiana.

The Pulmonia, a disease, so called, was raging at Madrid. It had carried off Don Onis, well known in this country. He left 200,000 dollars to his three daughters, which he had saved from his various embassies.

[For the Easton Gazette.]

MR. EDITOR,

I have been informed that there are various reports in circulation relative to the conversation which occurred between James Sangston, Esq. and myself in 1824, on the subject of the Presidential question; and the object of this communication is to exonerate myself from the public odium and the foul charges that have been preferred against me. I think that it was in October, 1824, James Sangston, Esq. came to my shop and asked me if I had been electioneering for him, (then a Candidate for William H. Crawford) I told him that I had not, for him or any one else, he than observed that he had heard that I had no choice, and might as well vote for him, I told him perhaps I would, and observed, that I had no opinion of Jackson, Mr. Sangston said that he had not, for he thought he was an arbitrary man and NOT FIT FOR PRESIDENT, and then went on to state that when at New Orleans he put down the civil authority & enforced Martial Law, and took a Judge from his seat and was tried and fined $1000. I do hereby certify that what I have above stated to be the truth. JAMES HAND.

OBITUARY.

Departed this transitory life, on Saturday (afternoon the 30th August Mr. WILLIAM BENDING in the 35th year of his age Thus in about six weeks from his last contraction of matrimony has the relentless hand of death taken away the only prop of a helpless family, leaving an affection te wife and three children, together with other relatives and a large circle of friends and acquaintances to regret their irreparable loss But his friends, notwithstanding their misfortune, should not sorrow as others do which have no hope--If the testimony of a dying christian in the honest hour of death is to be believed, they have great cause to rejoice in the certainty, that their loss is his eternal gain. Since his marriage to his last wife he manifested a great concern for the salvation of his soul and those of his family. Conscious of the necessity of repentance he seemed entirely engrossed with the momentous concerns of death, judgment and eternity. When brought to the bed of death, he still felt deficient of the bright evidence of pardon which the Scriptures had taught him would be revealed to all who faithfully sought it, he therefore continued to ply the throne of Grace with unwearied diligence. One evening during his illness while at prayers by his bed side, he broke out in a transport of joy, and testified to all around him that he was happy in the Lord Jesus, and as an evidence of what he asserted, joined in praising the God who had thus brought him out of thick darkness into his marvelous light

Few persons were more generally known or esteemed than this man according to his worth. He was endowed by nature with a sound and discriminating judgment and a considerable share of wit and vivacity, to which were added an affable and engaging disposition that rendered him at all times an agreeable and interesting companion. Though not advanced beyond the prime of life, he had to encounter many difficulties and in some instances to contend with the hard hand of adversity; he seldom or never appeared depressed, but manifested by the cheerfulness of his countenance and conduct, that he was above misfortune.--His liberality of disposition and suavity of manners made all who knew him, friends, and excited their sympathy in his distresses.

He was for some time before his death in a lingering state of health, which finally terminated in a Nervous, of which he died Though his pain was intense, he bore it with patience for which he was so conspicuous in health--From the christian meekness and fortitude which he evinced during his illness, his friends have great reasons to believe that he has exchanged a life of sorrow, for a glorious immortality 'where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are forever at rest.'

Departed this life on Monday evening last, the first day of September (inst.) our neighbor and friend, Mr. PETER STEVENS, Merchant (of the firm of Jenkins & Stevens) of this place aged about 37 years, in the prime of life. In his death the public has met with a loss, not easily replaced--As the Auditor to the Chancery Side of the County Court, he was a useful officer; his reports always prompt and correct He has left a widow and three small children, to whom he was much devoted, to mourn & lament their irreparable loss. As a husband, a father, a master, and neighbour, for kindness, benevolence & hospitality, none could exceed him--his sufferings in his last sickness, he could not describe, but was truly distressing to his attendants--by reason of the disease he was deprived of his understanding for the last six days of his life.

Died in this county on Wednesday last, after a very short illness, Miss JULIA ANN, daughter of the late James Goldsborough.

—— In this county on Friday last, Mr. WM. HIGGINS after a short illness.

In this County on Sunday last, John, the infant son of Col. William Hughlett, aged 10 months and 11 days.

Departed this transitory life on the 23d inst. in Staunton, Va the Rev. ENOCH GEORGEI one of the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, aged about 60 years--such a man and such a life of usefulness, rise above ordinary panegyrick, his praise is in all the Churches.
